At last Rose ranch was reached and there at the gate stood the runaway team, with heads down and their bodies quivering with cold, and at the door was Carrie, uninjured and half-warmed by the fire which burned in the grate, and in the act of dispatching Vasquez, the herder, to John's relief.

John did not tell her where Cephas was, but he remarked that she could not go to Galloway's now, and after all would be their Thanksgiving guest. She was glad of it, she said.

The two had a long talk the next day

"IT'S THE SCHOOL MA'AM O' SASSAFRAS!"

while Carrie was preparing that rousing dinner.

"Cephas told it," he said, in answer to her repeated question.

"Well, it is not the least bit true," she informed him. "I'd never marry Cephas Bludsoe!"

Then the big, honest boy found expression for his love at last, and he was electrified by the sweetness of her answer.

ARTHUR C. GRISSOM.

What a Difference between the WOMAN who is wedded to old-fashioned ideas and she who is bright enough to appreciate a new one. Everybody is striving to get something to make life easier—often it's right beside them—those who are bright enough to embrace it get the benefits, those who don't go backwards—their work grows harder. Pearline makes life easier and cleaner. Washing and cleaning done with Pearline has about enough work in it to make it good exercise—but not enough to tire the body or ruffle the temper.

Not ours, but the word of the millions who use it as to whether it hurts the hands, clothes or paint—probably your neighbors can tell you all about PEARLINE.

Send it back Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers may tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, the honest thing to do is—send it back. 167 JAMES PYLE, New York.

THE REFORM CLUB.

HOW ARDENTLY IT FOUGHT FOR TARIFF REFORM!

Hon. John De Witt Warner Tells What the Reform Club Did in the Campaign. A Fight Against Protection All Along the Line—Already Fighting for 1892.

The Reform club, of New York, undoubtedly contributed more than any other one organization to the great tariff reform victory which has just swept over the country. Several members of the club were elected to congress. One of these is Hon. John De Witt Warner, who was elected from one of the New York city districts.

Mr. Warner is the chairman of the tariff reform committee of the Reform club, and is the leading spirit of this the most important committee of the club. Under his able leadership this committee has undertaken and carried out various lines of tariff reform work, which has placed the Reform club in the very front of the fight against protection.

Mr. Warner has been interviewed since the elections about the work of the club in the campaign. He says:

"To the able, energetic and persistent work of the Reform club of this city is undoubtedly due a large part of the success which has attended the Democratic party in the congressional districts throughout the country. The efforts of the club were wholly devoted to the promotion of tariff reform, and it was, without question, upon that issue that the Democrats have fought and won their congressional contests, although Lodge's force bill was, as unquestionably, a powerful auxiliary. A brief review of the club's activity during the last two years will show that this is not too large a claim for it to make.

"Immediately after the defeat of Mr. Cleveland in 1888, the tariff reform committee of the club determined that it would continue the fight for that reform without diminution of energy, in season and out of season, and until victory should be achieved. It therefore mapped out a plan of campaign, more thoroughly and systematically organized than that upon which it had hitherto operated, and proceeded immediately to carry it out. It required, however, a very considerable sum of money, and securing this was the first and no small difficulty to overcome. To those who were asked to contribute nothing in the way of results could be guaranteed or even reasonably promised; on the contrary, it was necessary to confess frankly to them that a large part of the money would have to be expended in preliminary and apparently 'dead' work. So willing, however, to trust the sagacity of the tariff reform committee, and to make great sacrifices, if necessary, in that good cause, were the members of the club that about $43,000 was finally subscribed and placed in the committee's hands.

"The first work of the committee, then, was to make a thorough canvass of the voters of the state outside of the larger cities. Next it caused to be printed a large quantity of the most instructive tariff reform literature. In this preliminary work about $12,000 was expended. The literature prepared was then sent out continuously to the voters upon the committee's list. This went on uninterruptedly in 1889 and during the present year. In addition, in the spring of this year the committee organized tariff reform meetings at forty-three county fairs, employing the best speakers as advocates of the reform.

"Simultaneously with this activity in this state the committee was carrying on operations in every other state in the Union, but, of course, giving its attention chiefly to those states which most needed evangelistic assistance. Literature was sent into those states, agents of the committee were dispatched to some of them to aid local reformers in organizing tariff reform movements upon the lines adopted by the committee, and during the campaign just closed speakers were sent to points where help was most needed in the fight for congressmen.

"The committee's whole aim, in fact, was to influence the congressional contests and secure, if possible, a tariff reform majority in the house of representatives.

"The success of its efforts is more apparent, and is most remarkable, in Iowa. The Democratic committee of that state decided, wisely, I think, to concentrate its energies upon the task of saving the state ticket, believing that another victory to emphasize that of last year would be more contributory to national success in 1892 than the election of Democratic congressmen now. It therefore looked abroad for others to take wholly off its shoulders the congressional campaign, and B. L. Harding, of The Des Moines Leader, was designated to make this overture, and to co-operate with those who should respond to his appeal. Mr. Harding came to see us. We outlined to him the plan we had pursued in this state, and promised that if he would secure a canvass of the voters in Iowa similar to the one we had made in this state we would attend entirely to the business of supplying the voters with literature.

"In six weeks Mr. Harding returned with a complete canvass, which had cost his paper between $4,000 and $5,000. We fulfilled our part of the contract and distributed the literature. We also raised for the congressional fight there about $3,000. This was contributed, not by the Reform club, but by individuals at our solicitation. The policy suggested and aided by us was thoroughly carried out under Mr. Harding, and what he thinks of it is best expressed in his dispatch to me in which he says that 'with the same organization every northwestern state can be carried in 1892.'

"My own election to congress in the Eleventh district is a strong example of the growing strength of tariff reformers. I am not a politician, only a tariff reformer, and I was nominated by the united Democrats merely because they saw the favor with which our doctrines were being received in this stronghold of Republicanism, perhaps the most important manufacturing center among the congressional districts in the country."

Mr. Warner's outline of the work which has been done since the last presidential election will be followed without interruption until the election of 1892. Recognizing that the tariff reformers must make their appeal to the thinking men of the country the printing and distributing of documents will be continued. During the campaign nearly 1,000 country newspapers were supplied with tariff articles, and this work will be kept up without stopping for one week. The positions gained on Nov. 4 will be held. There is to be no retreat, and no waiting to watch the movements of the enemy.

The Duty on Farm Animals.

One of the meanest pieces of humbug in McKinley's humbug "tariff for farmers" is the duty on live animals. A thoroughbred animal with an official pedigree proven and sworn to may be brought in free, but it is just such an animal as this that our farmers seldom wish to import. Here and there one may be found who will import a thoroughbred stallion or bull, but for every such one there will be ten cross breeds and a hundred animals not imported for breeding purposes at all.

We import about four million dollars' worth of animals a year which pay duty. Most of these come from Canada and Mexico, and are bought by our farmers themselves. About 30,000 horses and mules were brought over from Mexico to Texas during the fiscal year 1889. How the McKinley tariff will affect this trade may be seen from the following, which is taken from The Mexican Financier, published at the City of Mexico.

"Under the new American tariff the farmers of the southwestern states of that country who have been buying mules and horses from this country for cultivating their fields will find their accustomed supply cut off by the absurdly high duties. A pony costing here $10 and a mule worth $20 are alike taxed $30 on entering the land which enjoys the blessings of protection. A tax of 300 per cent. on horses is as absurd as the duty on printing paper here, which frequently amounts to 300 per cent. ad valorem. The city of San Antonio, Tex., formerly a great mart for Mexican horses and mules, will be badly injured by the new tariff."

McKinley's plan was that he wanted to reserve the entire home market for our own farmers. Taking the whole United States over there is hardly one farmer in a hundred who raises horses and mules for sale. The one who does raise them for sale finds his market for them among the other ninety-nine farmers. Where is the sense of taxing these ninety-nine for the benefit of the one who raises horses?

Possibly Maj. McKinley will have time to ask the farmers about this during the private life to which the people have just returned him.

Protection is foolish at best, but when the stream of trade is outward rather than inward protection is a useless and glaring absurdity. For example, we import about $4,000,000 worth of animals a year, but our exports of these reach $28,000,000 worth; and in addition to live animals we export meat and dairy products to the extent of $123,000,000. The man who owns a square mile of land has no need for protection from the man who owns a garden plot. If Maj. McKinley will reflect on this after the 4th of next March he will perhaps see that it is true.

Prices Still Rising.

When prices went up immediately after the passage of the McKinley bill the Republican orators and newspapers with one accord denounced the Democratic papers and the merchants for entering into a "conspiracy to influence the elections." Now that the elections are over there can be no possible inducement to continue the "conspiracy;" but somehow prices will not behave themselves any better than before the elections—they will not come down.

Several days after the election The New York Commercial Bulletin printed the following: "Prices continue strong and unchanged all along the line of goods influenced to a higher range of values by the new tariff. Importers are industriously talking of a still further advance, but in point of fact are continuing to sell at prices midway between old and new tariff standards. With buyers loaded up as at present, it is a very difficult thing to establish an advance, but importers are confident that later in the season there will be no difficulty in securing full new tariff prices."

The same authority said further editorially:

"The raising of the duty on the commodities that most people are accustomed to buy, and which as a rule may be called 'necessities,' is causing, or soon will cause, a marked advance in prices, which will be felt in all households except those of the wealthy. The duty on cheap underwear is advanced from 20 to 25 per cent., on linen from 5 to 30 per cent., and on plain gloves for men $1 per dozen is added to the old rate of 50 per cent. Cutlery also shows an advance. Potatoes and other vegetables, eggs and grapes are all specifically mentioned and bear an increased duty. People whose purchases are limited to present needs are very conscious of the increase in price, but they do not hear anything of an advance in wages."

As the elections are now lost to the protectionists, they need not be thrown into an angry mood by such facts as these. They should rather go on talking about the "curse of cheapness" and showing us how "a cheap coat makes a cheap man."

The cry of protection to American labor is nowhere more ridiculous than in the wool growing industry. A traveler in New Mexico reports that he saw herds of 200,000 to 300,000 sheep which were looked after by two or three Mexican herders and several dogs. And the owners of these herds want a high wool duty to protect American labor!

The figure 9 in our dates will make a long stay. No man or woman now living will ever date a document without using the figure 9. It stands in the third place in 1890, where it will remain ten years and then move up to second place in 1900 where it will rest for one hundred years.

There is another "9" which has also come to stay. It is unlike the figure 9 in our dates in the respect that it has already moved up to first place, where it will permanently remain. It is called the "No 9" High Arm Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine.

The "No. 9" was endorsed for first place by the experts of Europe at the Paris Exposition of 1889, where, after a severe contest with the leading machines of the world, it was awarded the only Grand Prize given to family sewing machines, all others on exhibit having received lower awards of gold medals, etc. The French Government also recognized its superiority by the decoration of Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, President of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor.

The "No. 9" is not an old machine improved upon, but is an entirely new machine, and the Grand Prize at Paris was awarded it as the grandest advance in sewing machine mechanism of the age. Those who buy it can rest assured, therefore, of having the very latest and best.

And the best lamp ever made, like Aladdin's of old, a "wonderful lamp!" A lamp absolutely non-explosive and unbreakable, which gives a clear, soft, brilliant white light of 84 candle power! Purer and brighter than gas light, softer than electric light, more cheerful than either! That lamp is

"The Rochester."

And with it there is no smoke, no smell, no broken chimneys, no flickering, no sweating, no climbing up of the flame, no "tantrums" nor annoyance of any kind, and it never needs trimming. Its founts (oil reservoirs) being tough rolled seamless brass, with central draft, it is absolutely unbreakable, and as safe as a tallow candle.

Only five years old, and over two million of these lamps in use. It must be a GOOD lamp to make such a telling success. Indeed it is, for lamps may come and lamps may go, but the "Rochester" shines on forever! We make over 2,000 artistic varieties,—Hanging and Table Lamps, Banquet, Study, Vase and Piano Lamps,—every kind, in Bronze, Porcelain, Brass, Nickel and Black Wrought Iron.

Ask the lamp dealer for it. Look for the trade-mark stamp: "THE ROCHESTER." If he hasn't the genuine Rochester and the style you want, or if no lamp-store is near, send to us for free illustrated catalogue (and reduced price-list), and we will box and send you any lamp safely by express, right to your door.

DR. ALLBRIGHT'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Prices 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

THANKSGIVING.

SHALL we give thanks?
* * * *
The toiler answers: Yea.
His hands were weary, as the long days sped away;
Spent brain, tired body, ached from day to day.
And yet the brave heart in his brawny breast
Beat in content, as evening brought his rest.
The sweet companion of his rugged life
Smoothed his moist brow with tender hands—his wife,
Beloved by him beyond all mortal ken
And cherished, since the joyous moment, when
He led her to the cot among the trees
Where now his children prattle at his knees.
His home his kingdom, and his right arm strong,
He triumphed as the bright days sped along.
Shall we give thanks to-day?
The toiler answers: Yea.

Shall we give thanks? * * * *
The rich man answers: Yea.
The days have brought more wealth his lot to bless,
And given him his share of happiness.
His ventures and his trades in lands afar
Have prospered, as beneath some happy star.
His argosies have spanned the raging seas,
And sailed in safety back before the breeze.
At home his enterprises waxed and spread
And shone, fair as the blue sky overhead;
And, seeing thus his golden store increase,
The rich man nightly slept the sleep of peace;
For did he not, by scattering his pelf,
Do lots of others good besides himself?
Shall we give thanks to-day?
The rich man answers: Yea.

Shall we give thanks? * * * *
The Nation thunders: Ay!
And all the land takes up the joyous cry:
A year of peace and plenty has gone by,
And every dweller in his hut or hall
Bends knee to bless the giver of it all.
The harvests' golden gifts are gathered now,
And bursting granaries their wealth avow.
No child, no man nor woman but who sings
A hymn of thanks for all the season brings.
Unscathed by wars or tumult, every State
In its own sturdy strength inviolate,
Sends up its voice to swell the chorused cry:
Thanks for our Union; thanks for liberty!
Shall we give thanks to-day?
The Nation answers: Yea.

TRUE BLUE.

A New England Thanksgiving Story.

GO! Get out of my sight! You pollute the very atmosphere with a taint of your rascality. Go! Go before I forget myself and strike you! You are the only member of the Peppergrass family that has disgraced it by criminal actions, and I am thankful you do not bear its name. You are a living lie to the name you do wear. True Blue—a fine-pointed sarcasm on a ripe scoundrel! Here, take this money, that you may not start penniless, and go. You are branded as a thief and I never wish to see your face again." Thus spoke my uncle, Judge Obediah Peppergrass, to me on Thanksgiving eve two years ago.

"He's not a thief and you can not prove your accusation!" exclaimed my warm-hearted cousin Cherry, enthusiastically, in my defense. "I'll never believe it."

"WASN'T HE SUSPENDED FROM COLLEGE?"

"Wasn't he suspended from college because stolen examination papers were found in his desk? And doesn't that, coupled with the fact that he was the only student in his class who received one hundred per cent. in his studies, prove him guilty?" irascibly questioned my fiery-tempered uncle.

"And where can your bonds have disappeared to?" insinuated Willie Steele, my college chum, who had accompanied me home to my uncle's to spend Thanksgiving week.

I started and glanced at Steele; but his eye quailed before mine and fixed itself upon the money on the floor, where my uncle had thrown it to me as he would have a bone to a dog. I hesitated a moment, bit my lip and said nothing, though my eyes snapped the scorn I entertained for the insinuation from my most trusted companion. Then I thanked Aunt Roxy and my cousin Cherry for their faith in my integrity and stepped outside the door to face the world and to battle down the unjust suspicions fate had fastened upon me on this, to me, most notable Thanksgiving eve.

Slowly, sweetly through the clear, frosty air, over the heads of the gaunt elms that fringed the village churchyard, came the sounds of voices rehearsing hymns for the morrow's Thanksgiving service. What would the morrow bring to me?

My future was shattered; I had nothing to live for, nothing to hope for while stigmatized as a felon, and so I lay down with my face to the ground and prayed for death—but death came not. It sent its brother, sleep.

It was morning when I awoke—Thanksgiving morning. I had slept through the long cold night by the roadside. The day was an open day, bright, clear and cheerful—even beautiful. I felt that I could not die.

Then I wandered listlessly with aching head and swollen eyes till I heard the bell of the village church and its paeans woke me to full life and a full sense of mental and physical pain. All unconsciously I trod the well-worn path that led toward my uncle's house, toward the only home I had ever known. I walked erect with all the dignity of despair, combatting a fierce longing to see the fair face of my dimpled champion, my sweet cousin Cherry, once more.

While I was thus musing and doubting I had been nearing an arbor close by the house. This I entered, then sat down to think. For a time my mind wandered from my woes and I became absorbed in the engraving of my fair cousin's initials on the arbor seat with my pen-knife. I even added a heart pierced with an arrow, and so wrapt did I become in my empty-headed occupation that I failed to hear the approach of footsteps until a voice behind me whispered:

"Better run that arrow through another heart and cut your own initials under mine."

"Cherry!" I exclaimed, as I looked up.

"I had an offer of marriage last night, coz," said Cherry, with a gurgling laugh

"READ IT FOR ME, CHERRY."

when we had seated ourselves on a convenient log.

"An offer of marriage!" I repeated in surprise, remembering her warm, loving salute and affectionate embraces of a few minutes previous.

"Yes, from your college friend, Willie Steele."

"And did you say 'yes?'"

"No, I didn't, you goosey; you know I'll never, never, never say 'yes' to any man until you ask me, and there's no need of your saying any thing. Now, think I'm an immodest country hoyden if you like. But read this for the present. I found it on the floor this morning outside the door of your sneaky friend's room. When you have read it you won't have to ask if I refused to marry him."

I took the envelope and glanced at the superscription.

"Why, this is addressed to Steele, Cherry!"

"Never mind if it is; just you read it. I wouldn't have looked at it only for the clause in it about you. The letter was out of the envelope and I saw your name when I was putting it back to slip under his door."

"Please read it for me, Cherry; I'm dizzy and all of a shiver."

I kept my teeth from chattering and listened to her reading until a sentence warmed me beyond reach of the most frigid chills.

"WELD HALL, HARVARD, Nov. 22.
WILLIE STEALE, ESQ., APPLEVILLE, VT.

My dere sur: You fergot ter pay me for gittin' them paperz outer ther prof's room thet you put inter true Blue's desk. Ef I'd know'd you wuz goin' ter play such a dirtee trick on yore chumm, I never'd a done it fer you. I've bin deescharg'd from my job and I want the $50 you promised fer helpin' you. I wuz raised in appleville and I know every foot of squire peppergrass' land and Thursday mornin' at nine o'clock I'll be waitin' at the bend wher the squir's drivin-way turns tow'rd the roade. ef you don't hand over ther money I'll squeal and tell the squire and yore folk all I knows.

JED MICKLIN."

"O! Cherry!" I ejaculated, "you are my guardian angel. And to think that I lay all last night by the roadside praying I might die."

"Well, never mind about dying now, you silly boy.

"Do you imagine I've been foolish enough to keep this letter from pa until I could see you? How could I know I would ever see you again? You left as cool as a cucumber, just as though your country cousin Cherry didn't have any interest in your return. It would have served you right if I hadn't shown this to pa; but I did and if we look over the bend as we go home you may see something that will surprise you."

Cherry's prophecy was a true one for as we, hand in hand, peered through the barberry bushes to the bend in the road below, the village constable stepped from a convenient hiding-place and placed his hand on Jed Micklin's shoulder.

"Glad tew see ye back, Jed; I've been er wantin' uv yeou," he said.

Steele started to escape up the pathway leading to the house, and ran straight into my Uncle Diah's arms.

"Diah," dryly remarked Aunt Roxy, "them bonds ez yeou wuz er figgettin' erbout is in one o' yeour boot-legs, jist where yeou put 'em yeourself when yeou started fer ther village an' didn't gao cuz et wuz rainin' an' yeou wuz skeert ov ther rumatiz. Yeon axed me ter grease 'em, ther butes, I mean, an' I faound ther papers inside on 'em."

As we sat down together on that eventful Thanksgiving day, I drank in every word of the prayer offered by my uncle, and I felt in my heart I had much more than the dinner to be thankful for.

I returned to college and graduated the next year, and the following Thanksgiving, when we gathered around the sacrificial turkey, Uncle Diah and Aunt Roxy were the guests of Cherry, who presided over the repast as the newly-made wife of True Blue.

BURT ARNOLD.

FARMERS' SOCIAL CLUB.

The Farmers' Social Club met at R. B. Gillespie's, Nov. 20th. The program was fully carried out. The question box was an interesting factor of the meeting, drawing out many ideas that otherwise would have lain dormant. Let us have another in the near future. Mr. I. H. Schreder, chairman of the Anniversary meeting, made a report and moved that such meeting be held at Mr. Geo. Griswold's in four weeks, which will be Dec. 18th, and that we invite all past members of the club, all who desire to join the club, and all officers of neighboring clubs. The report was adopted. At this meeting will occur the election of officers for the ensuing year. The question as to the advisability of increasing the acreage of crops which seem to be paying best appeared to have but one side to it as the speakers were nearly unanimous in thinking it would not be wise, for if a failure of that one crop occured all would be lost. Rather mix things and be sure of something. Program for the Anniversary meeting:

Music—Mrs. Will Waldron.
History—Mrs. F. C. Rector.
Music—Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Strong.
Selection—Mr. O. B. Finch.
Music—School children.
Talk—The growing members.
Recitation—Edna Hendershot.
In Memoriam—Mrs. J. Fisher.
Remarks—S. C. Stacy.

Resolutions on the death of Mrs. Horton and Mrs. Hall were adopted and the club then adjourned to meet, Dec. 18th, at Geo. Griswold's.

Resolutions adopted by the Farmers Social Club, Nov. 20th, 1899, on the death of Mrs. Frederick V. Horton:

The Reaper of Death has again been permitted to enter our ranks and remove from among us Mrs. F. V. Horton, a highly esteemed and useful member, whose death occured at her home in Wexford county, Mich., Sept. 23d, 1890. The intimate relations long held by the deceased with the members of this club, renders it appropriate that we shall record on our pages and cause to be published our appreciation of her services as a member, and her merits as a woman. She was possessed of strength of character combined with an affectionate disposition, which made her what she was a faithful wife, a tender loving mother, a wise and safe counselor. Therefore

RESOLVED, That we tender to the bereaved family the sympathies of our hearts made sad by the loss of this dear friend, yet we mourn not without hope "For death is the crown of life."

RESOLVED, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the afflicted family, to the Tecumseh HERALD for publication and spread at length upon the records of the club.

Mrs. JOHN FISHER.
" I. H. SCHREDER,
" GEO. GRISWOLD,

A former member of this club, Mrs. A. G. Hall, having been removed from us by the hand of death, we, as an organization feel the loss of this friend.

WHEREAS, We bow in humble submission to God's will, realizing that day by day our members past and present are being called from us. Therefore be it

RESOLVED, That we will cherish the memory of the departed one, and also extend to the more immediately bereaved ones our heartfelt sympathy in their affliction.

RESOLVED, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family and that they be placed on the record books of this club; also that they be published in the Tecumseh HERALD.

A CHASE AND ESCAPE.

Holloway has a sensation. Last Friday a stranger struck that burg, who gave his name as Bill Smith and straightway proceeded to bill the city for a show to be given on Saturday evening. Having completed his job he returned to the depot to await the train from the West, which to his surprise contained turnkey Lairds and deputy Ferguson who alighted and informed Bill Smith that they had a warrant for him. Mr. Smith was desirous of knowing to a dead certainty whether he was the right man, politely requested the officers to step up to a lamp and read the warrant to him. Of course they acceded to so proper a request, but upon reaching the lamp, lo they had no Bill Smith to whom they could read the warrant, for Bill Smith had skipped in the darkness. Officer Lairds struck his trail and soon caught sight of him but Bill Smith was too fleet of foot for his pursuer. After emptying his revolver upon the aforesaid Bill Smith, the officer still had the satisfaction of seeing his man on the run and fleeter of foot than ever. The small boys of Holloway feel quite chagrined to think their funny show was knocked in the head and the officer outwitted at the same time, and they are deliberating whether to challenge the victor or the vanquished to a foot race on the county fair ground at some future date.

OBITUARY.

Cynthia P. Taylor was born in the State of New York July 24th, 1812 and died at her home in Franklin Nov. 18th, 1890. She was the daughter of Levi Mudgett, one of the pioneers of this section, was married Feb. 20th, 1834, to Rodman Taylor who now, after nearly fifty-seven years, sees his family circle for the first time broken by death. Mrs. Taylor was a great sufferer having been afflicted for sixty years with a most distressing cough, which finally ended in consumption. She was a woman of uncommon strength of character and as long as her own health permitred was noted for her kindness to the sick. She had been since girlhood a member of the M. E. Church.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to express our sincere thanks to the friends who so kindly assisted us during the painful illness of her who has entered into rest; and we also hold in grateful remembrance those who furnished floral offerings.

A Valuable Discovery,

Dr. Brown Sequard's elixir of youth may be an importent discovery, but every one knows that Dr. Franklin Miles' New Heart Cure certainly is. It has given thousands afflicted serious heart disease a New Lease of Life. Druggists who can observe its effects on many costomers everywhere speak very highly of it. Mr. John Weaver Knightstown Ind., says: "I have sold much of Dr. Miles New Cure and have received many good reports." O. Monroe, of Dunkirk, N. Y., reports large sales. "And the best part of it is every bottle has given satisfaction." Sold and guaranteed by Baker & Hall.

All medical authorities agree that catarrh is no more nor less than an inflammation of the lining membrane of the nasal air passages. Nasal catarrh and all catarrhal affections of the head are not diseases of the blood, and it is a serious mistake to treat as such. No conscientious physician ever attempts to do so. It is held by eminent medical men that sooner or later a specific will be found for every disease from which humanity suffers. The facts justify us in assuming that for catarrh at least a positive cure already exists in Ely's Cream Balm.

A PLEASANT OCCASION.

Complimentary Banquet to Capt. Fred B. Wood, Given by the Members of Co. C, at the Lilley House. Last Monday Eve.

One of the most notable and enjoyable local events which it has been our good fortune to attend in a long time came off at the Lilley House last Monday evening. The members of Co. C, in view of the many sacrifices which Capt. Wood has made in their behalf, conceived the happy idea of giving him a complimentary banquet. He is now the "ranking Captain" in the State service, and his transfer to the field is only a question of a very short time, unless he should positively decline promotion as he has done before. Co. C has the reputation of never doing anything by halves, and it suffered no harm on this occasion.

At eight o'clock sharp the members of Co C and their invited guests assembled at the Armory, where Capt. Wood put the boys through a fine drill, which lasted about an hour. The entire company then repaired to the Lilley House where the banquet was held. The dining room was tastefully decorated with flags and ornaments and the tables, loaded down with delicacies, presented a beautiful appearance. Landlord Patterson carried out his part of the affair in a manner which added new laurels to his reputation. The menu, altho' not elaborate, was exactly suited to the occasion.

Nearly one hundred persons were seated at the tables. The following invited guests were present from Adrian: Adj. Darnton, Major Hoag, Capt. Ulrich, Lt. Col. O'Leary, Serg. Wilkinson, Chas. Darnton and John S. Bird. About forty of our business men were also among the invited guests.

We present below the MENU.

Tecumseh Celery.

COLD.

Brazed Ham. Chicken Pressed.
Cabbage Salad. Queen Olives.
Vienna Bread.

JELLIES.

Sherry Wine. Lemon.

CAKES.

Orange. Fig. White.

DESSERT.

Vanilla Ice Cream.
Ocean Spray. French Kisses.
Macaroons,
Bananas, Catawba Grapes.
Tea or Coffee with Cream.

THE TOASTS.

At the close of the feast Corp. Walter C. Burridge arose and opened the "feast of reason" part of the exercises. He read letters of regret from Lt. Col. Farrell of Jackson, Major Howell of Adrian and Major Millard of Ann Arbor, who were unable to be present. Corp. Burridge then announced the toasts, prefacing each with a few remarks. He performed his part in a very happy manner and showed himself an adept in that role. Below are the toasts and the persons who responded to each:

Our Captain—John D. Shull.
Company C—Capt. Fred B. Wood.
The Private—George S. Tiffany.
Soldiers, Old and Young—S. P. Hosmer.
Selection, Company C Quartette—Messrs. Hayden, Heck, Ross and Josselyn.
The Fair Ones—who are not with us—Corp. Scove Walker.
Old Lenawee—Dr. Geo. Howell.
Names and Men—P. S. McKinnon.
Soup—S. C. Stacy.

Co. C quartette favored the company with another selection and the crowd then dispersed. The favored guests who were present feel much elated over the unqualified success of the affair. Co. C and their honored Captain will be more popular than ever hereafter, if that be possible.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD.

TECUMSEH, MICH., NOV. 27, 1890.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Henry Smith's paper mill is again booming.

Miss Allie Satterthwaite visited in Detroit last week.

Our poultry buyers have been rushed with business during the past week.

We hope every reader of the HERALD may enjoy a happy Thanksgiving to-day.

Last Sunday was a beautiful Sabbath day and the churches were all well attended.

Have you taken any stock in the new Threshing Machine Co? If not, now is your time.

Ernest Gamble and Scove Walker are at home from Ann Arbor this week to spend the Thanksgiving recess.

Township treasurer Field will be at Bills & Co's bank on each Friday during December to receive taxes.

The revival meetings in progress this week at the M. E. church are well attended and much interest is manifested.

The prophets have been predicting a very severe winter, which probably accounts for this Indian summer weather.

The Jackson Patriot has been sold to a syndicate of Democrats. Our old friend Hugh Richards owns quite a large slice of the stock.

Don't miss the special Cloak Sale commencing Friday morning:
$14 and $20 Garments for $10,
$ 7 and $11 " " $ 5. at
ANDERSON & CO'S.

The attendance at the Presbyterian Sunday school last Sunday was 250, which was the largest attendance at an ordinary session since C. A. Slayton became superintendent. Mr. Slayton is fully justified in making a note of it.

Our political page contains this week a choice collection of Thanksgiving reading. A change of diet is a good thing occasionally. Besides, there is no department of the paper that has a better reason for celebrating Thanksgiving day, this fall.

The ladies of St. Peter's church will hold their annual fair at Armory Hall, Dec. 5th, 1890, afternoon and evening. A large collection of useful and fancy articles for sale, particularly suited for Christmas gifts. Ice cream and cake served during the fair.

Mr. McIntosh began his revival meetings at the M. E. church last Sunday morning, to a large audience. He is a very effective exhorter, and is evidently a believer in both mental and muscular christianity. The meetings are in progress each evening this week.

"Why do American Girls wish to Marry Abroad?" is the question which Mrs. John Sherwood will discuss in the next number of Harper's Bazar. The same number will contain an extravaganza by Duffield Osborne entitled "Pansy," and a practical article on 'Tableaux Vivants" by Mary Gay Humphreys.

A merry gathering of relatives and friends met at the residence of Chester Bronson and wife, Nov. 24th, to celebrate the tenth anniversary of their marriage. The display of presents made it evident that Mr. and Mrs. Bronson are fully appreciated by his fellow workmen as well as by his neighbors and friends of the family. A bountiful repast provided by the host and hostess was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

We have received with compliments of Stanley Wood's Great Divide a characteristic picture, entitled "Are you wid us," representing two jolly young fellows returning from a shooting match with all the honors, and evidently intending to "set 'em up" to the boys when they get home. The Great Divide for September will be the largest and best number yet printed. Over 40,000 copies will be published. The Illustrations are very numerous, interesting and attractive and are gems of artistic excellence.

Those who failed to attend the Oles' violin recital on Thursday evening last missed a rich musical treat. Mr. Oles is certainly a superior artist on that best of all stringed instruments, the violin, and his hearers were enraptured by his superior execution. The program was given exactly as published last week. He was heartily encored after nearly every number and always responded with some familiar air in a manner that enlisted the continual approbation of the audience. The committee, who procured Mr. Oles', are entitled to much credit for their enterprise—Messrs. Mills, Bills and S. W. Anderson—and we hope their receipts were sufficient to balance their expenses. Persons who take the risk of procuring entertainments of this character ought to be encouraged in their endeavors.

M. F. Marks is now manager of the telephone office himself,

It is reported now that the first heat at the Tiffany Iron Works will be taken on Saturday next.

The Royal Arcanum will elect new officers at its next meeting, Dec. 2nd. A full attendance is desired, Miss Adelaide Dewey of Toledo, and the Misses Lulu Wood and Grace Millard of Adrian, were the guests of Miss Mae DeWolf, last Week.

It looks now as though Tecumseh would have a threshing machine manufactory before another Fourth of July comes around.

A. J. Whitney of Canton, Ill., is visiting at Jas. H. Aten's this week. He resided in Tecumseh many years ago, on the farm across the road from Jacob G. Robert's farm.

L. D. Dewey is dressing and shipping a large amount of poultry these days, and pays the highest price going. Farmers would do well to see him before selling.

An effort is being made to procure the celebrated M de Pachmann for a concert in Tecumseh some time in January. We hope the effort may be successful.

B. b. stands for Burtch's buckwheat. It is a prime article for pancakes. We know for we have tried it. If you don't wish to take our word for it, try it yourself.

Bulletin 65 from the experiment station of the Agricultural College is a valuable number of the series. It is entitled "Planting for Honey" and will be sent free to any one who requests it.

Mr. Burtch has put up a little one horse steam engine in the Southwest part of his mill, which is used to run a bracket saw and can be used to run other similar machinery. He is making small articles of furniture and doing furniture repairing.

Dr. Bennett will be at the Lilley House on Wednesday, Dec. 3d. Why do you have Constipation, Dyspepsia, Asthma, Catarrh, Kidney and Uterine trouble? Because there is A POWER which runs this body and it is impaired. Dr. Bennett restores it. Rectal diseases are his great specialty. Do not fail to see him this time. The new plat of the Patterson farm has been surveyed, and lots are now on sale. Pearl street and Union are continued South twenty-four rods from Patterson street to intersect with a new street parallel with Patterson to be called Maple Aye. There will thus be three full blocks between Railroad street on the East and Union street on the West. All lots will have a twenty-foot alley in the rear. They range in price from $50 to $100 each, according to location.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Wescott was the scene of a very enjoyable party on Tuesday evening, that date being the tenth anniversary of their marriage. About sixty guests came to pay their respects and offer their congratulations. A bountiful repast was served early in the evening and the guests all passed the hours most pleasantly. Such events as these, which serve to make red letter days in the humdrum of every day life, ought to come oftener than they do.

A meeting to talk up the new threshing machine enterprise was held at the Council Rooms last Tuesday evening. Geo. Heesen was called to the chair and C. F. Field was chosen secretary. Remarks were made by Messrs. Bordine, Hosmer, and others in regard to the feasibility of the enterprise and a contract was read by Chas. Burridge. A committee consisting of John Heesen, H. E. Stout, H. S. Lee, S. P. Hosmer, C. F. Field and S. W. Bordine, was appointed to solicit stock, and formulate a plan of procedure and report on Tuesday next.

Question—Is the McKinley bill a benefit to the farmer; if so, in what manner?

The older members of the Loyal Legion will give the Inter-State Milk Maid's Convention at the Opera House in Tecumseh, Thursday, Dec. 11. The object of this entertainment, is to raise money, to help carry on the work. The society numbers 130 members and and has outgrown the Temperance room making it necessary to get larger rooms and we hope the parents, and others, that are in sympathy with this work, will turn out and give the young people a benefit. The entertainment will be unique and entertaining, well worth the 15cts. admission. Come out and see the famous O'Leary Cow, whose frisky hoof did such damage in Chicago. It will be on exhibition that evening.

A COWARDLY ASSAULT.

The Wabash depot at Adrian seems to be getting into repute as a dangerous place. Early Saturday evening, Operator Lingenfitter, of Butler, temporarily filling the place of another operator, sold a ticket to a stranger for Milan. The chap on receiving the ticket refused to pay for it, saying 95 cents was too much. The operator went out to remonstrate when the chap felled him to the floor with a heavy blow from the iron poker and then kicked him brutally. The operator struggled to his feet again, but was once more knocked down, and finally the scoundrel left. The operator telegraphed for help, when the assaulter came back and said he would wait for the officers, as he wasn't afraid, and he sat around for some time, but left just before the officers arrived. Lingenfitter was badly hurt and was taken to Butler. No trace of the wretch has been found by the officers.

Harper's Bazar, published November 21st, will be a Thanksgiving number. Among its contents especially appropriate to the season will be Thanksgiving stories by Bessie Chandler, Hamilton Ormsbee, and others; full-page illustrations by A. B. Wenzell and G. S. Reinhart. The number will also contain a superbly illustrated poem, "The Old Red Settle by the Fire," by Hezekiah Butterworth, and other special features of an interesting and attractive character.

Hostilities Actually Begun by Indians.

SEVEN WHITE SETTLERS KILLED IN SOUTH DAKOTA.

The Country Alarmed and an Urgent Request for Military Aid is Sent Out to Libeau.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., Nov. 24.—The Journal's Pierre, S. D., special says: A telegram to the governor from Gettysburg, Potter county, stated that seven persons had been killed by the Indians near Libeau, and asking for militia. A telegram from Hermosa to the Black Hills asked for three hunered rifles. No one here credits the reports of the massacre.

Action at Washinton.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Secretary Proctor and General Scofield called at the white house Saturday afternoon and had a conference with the president on the strength of the dispatches received from General Miles. An order was subsequently issued, providing for the appointment of five hundred Indian scouts. The law limits the appointment to one thousand such scouts. The remainder may be called upon in cases of emergency.

THE CAUSE OF IT.

Facts Concerning the Failure of the United States Rolling Stock Co.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—Stringency of the money market, resulting in slow collections and temporary financial embarrassment, was what caused C. D. Roys, stockholder and director in the United States Rolling Stock Company to apply to Judge Blodgett to have a receiver appointed. This resulted in naming A. Hegewisch, who has been president of the company nineteen years, and he qualified in bonds of five hundred thousand dollars. The following is the list of the assets: Shops at Hegewisch, Ill., $1,400,000; at Anniston, Ala., $700,000; at Aecatur, Ala., $500,000; at Urbana, O., $180,000; timber lands in Alabama, $40,000; car trust bonds, $1,533,000; leased rolling stock, $300,000; supplies and material, $1,100,000; total, $6,053,000. Liabilities: Six per cent debentures unsecured, $890,000; five per cent. debentures, secured by first mortgage on one million car trust bonds as collateral, $70,000; six per cent bonds secured by first mortgage on Hegewisch $250,000; five per cent. consolidated loan secured by second mortgage on the Hegewisch property and first mortgage on all other property, $1,000,000; bills payable within ninety days, $500,000; bank loans, $266,000; miscellaneous accounts, $60,000; total $3,816,000. Excess of assets over liabilities, $2,237,000.

"There is absolutelely no cause for alarm," said James L. Ligh, attorney for the corporation.

The action was simply taken to protect all the creditors and prevent any one from securing undue advantage. The assets are estimated at first cost, but are now greatly enhanced in value. The slowness of railroads in paying for supplies furnished them brought on this trouble. The company is absolutely independent and its stock mostly held in England. The nominal capital is four millions, but five hundred thousand of this amount in the treasury untaken. Twenty-two hundred men are in its employ, causing a monthly disbursement for all expenses of six hundred thousand dollars. Business will probably be carried on as usual by Mr. Hegewisch, but the outcome of the legal action of course is only a surmise.

A BANK CLOSES.

W. L. Prettyman, of Chicago, "Puts Up the Shutters."

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—W. L. Prettyman, banker, at 336 Division street, has closed his bank doors and placed the following notice in the window: "On account of the obligations owing by me in the lumber business, I have decided to close up my affairs. The bank is perfectly solvent and will pay despositors in full, and its secur ties will be at once assigned for that purpose. (Signed) "W. L. PRETTYMAN."

The bank doors are locked and a policeman sits inside. No one is permitted to enter, and no one seems to be within except the policeman, and he declines to admit anybody. Mr. Prettyman could not be found, and it was impossible to obtain any information regarding his assets or liabilities. It is many people of limited means have their savings deposited with the bank.

LEAPED TO DEATH.

A Guest Jumps From the Pierrepont Hotel.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Nov. 24.—Mrs Charles A. Coombs, of No. 8 South Elliott place, wife of the son of the newly elected congressman for the third district, entered the Pierrepont hotel at noon Saturday and engaged a room on the sixth floor, saying she wanted to be away from the noise of the street. Five minutes later as the chambermaid entered the room she was horrified to see Mrs. Coombs plunge from one of the front windows. She struck the portico in her descent and bounded off to the large iron flower urn in front of the hotel. Mrs. Coombs was picked up dead and her body was removed to her late home.

Acquitted of Murder.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., Nov. 24.—The Harvard-Yale foot ball game was won by Harvard, 12 to six.

KALAKAUA'S KINGDOM.

Late News Received From the Sandwich Islands.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 24.—The steamer Alameda has arrived here from Sydney via Honolulu.

King Kalakaua prorogued the Hawaiian legislature November, 14. The session has lasted 129 days. Preparations for the celebration of the king's 54th birthday, which occurs November 16, were in progress when the steamer left.

The newspapers, commenting on the work of the legislature, say that no important new laws have been enacted.

The failure of the national reform party to carry their vote of want of confidence in the ministry continues the cabinet in office for the current two years.

By December 1st most of the sugar mills of Hawaii will have started on the crop of 1891, prompted by the desire to have as much sugar as possible sent to the United States before April when the duty is removed. The sugar crop is estimated at about 120,000 tons.

The Commercial Advertiser says regarding the provisions of the McKinley bill: "It must be born in mind that the sugar estates of these Islands are largely owned by residents of the United States and whatever reduction the incomes suffer under a free sugar tariff, will be felt as much in the United States as here.

The United States steamships Charleston and Mohican, Her Majestys ship Nymphe, and the Japanese training ship Tsukubu, are at Honolulu.

A WILD PANIC

IS CAUSED AMONG THE FEMALE EMPLOYES

In a Silk Mill at Patterson, New Jersey, by a Conflagration—Loss It Entailed Reaching $400,000 --No Lives Lost.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov 24.—Fire started in the extensive silk mill of Bamford Brothers, in Cliff street. Before the firemen arrived the flames were under full headway and the mill was totally destroyed. The fire communicated to the handsome dwellings of Joseph and Walter Bamford, which adjoined their mills, and both were burned to the ground. The loss is placed at $400,000 on which there is an insurance of $200,000. High winds fanned the flames, and the mill and houses burned down within an hour. The fire started in the engine room from some unknown cause, but it is supposed it was caused by a defective electric light wire. Three hundred hands are employes in the building. Many of the operators were girls and women. They were panic stricken. They screamed and trampled on each other in wild effort to get out of the burning building. Some jumped from second story windows to escape instant death. None were injured. Joseph and Walter Bamford were owners of the mill. They did a large business.

SIX ARE DEAD

As the Result of the Falling Building in Jersey City.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Nov. 24.—The dead workman at the fallen express building has been identified as George Barrett, an iron worker, living in New York. His dead body was the first one recovered. It lay on the floor nearly covered with debris. It was so terribly mangled that the strongest men turned sick. Most of the victims of the disaster are only known to the employers by number, and it is very difficult to identify them. One Italian workman, name unknown, died at St. Francis hospital a few minutes after being taken there in the ambulance. Another Italian workman died in a drug store close by. Another is pinned, crushed to death, in the wreck. At least six are fatally injured. The sound of a falling wall was heard several blocks away and at once attracted large crowds to the scene.

Under the direction of Police Chief Murphy the work of rescuing the unfortunate men began. The streets were roped off, keeping back the curious and excited crowd, though cooler-headed spectators were admitted to help in the work of digging out the buried men.

The mason work on the building was being by Contractor Michael Brennan, who was superintending the work at the time of the crash, but he escaped injury. Post & McCord, of 102 Broadway, New York, contractors, were doing the iron work.

THINKS HE'S DEAD.

A Peculiar Malady Exhibited by a Pennsylvania Man.

WILKESBARRE, PA., Nov. 24.—John C. Farrell, ex-superintendent of the Wilkesbarre company, is afflicted with a peculiar mania. He has not eaten a morsel of food for two weeks, insisting that he is dead and does not require food. Mr. Farrell's health has been failing for a number of years. The physicians here ase puzzled over the case. His friends have concluded to have him transferred to an insane hospital at Danville with the hope that with proper care his peculiar hallucination may be cured.

It Shook the Hills.

DANBURY, CONN., Nov. 24.—Two oil tanks of 2,000 and 3,000 gallons, respectively, located near the Danbury lime works, about two miles from here, exploded last night with a terrific noise. James Cunningham, the night watchman, was blown to pieces, his head being found this morning four hundred feet from the scene of the explosion. The works were badly wrecked. The explosion was caused by the ignition of gas from the tanks from a lantern which Cunningham carried.

Big Conflagration.

ALTON, ILLS., Nov. 24.—Fire at the Illinois Glas Works destroyed the flint glass factories numbers one, six and eight, and two large warehouses containing thirty thousand dollars worth of soda ash, and a number of railroad cars. The loss is estimated at one hundred thousand dollars. Origin spontaneous combustion.

Just Like Ohio.

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 24.—The council has voted 4 to 1 for calling an extra session of the legislature. Governor Goodell has issued a proclamation summoning the legislature to meet on December 2 next at 11 o'clock a. m. to consider such measures as shall be presented.

Toward the Capital

The Annual Tide of Travel is Flowing.

STATESMEN PREPARING FOR THE NEXT SESSION.

Some of the Measures Which Will Probably Come Before Congress—Silver Men Are Determined to Force Through a Bill—The Elections Bill—Good McKinley Story.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Nearly every train arriving from the west brings to the Capital one or more members of the Fifty-first Congress, the last session of which will convene on Monday. By the middle of this week the Capital city will have settled itself for the usual galties and hustling which invariably accompany short sessions. Work sufficient to keep the respective houses busily engaged seven hours each day until spring time has been mopped out by different statesmen who have been interviewed upon their arrival here.

At the present writing no definite idea can be given as to what will engage the time of the session, beyond consideration of the several regular appropriation bills. The indications warrant the assertion that the pension appropriation bill will be the most earnestly debated measure, owing to the enormous proportions it is reaching. There are apparently many Democrats in the House of Representatives who desire an extra session of the Fifty-second congress, and believe that it is their policy to work to that end. Leading Republicans stand ready to encourage such a move on the part of their opponents, believing that its effect will result in great benefit to the Republican party at the next election. Speculation, of course runs very high on either side of the question and almost any opinion sought may be obtained with plenty of statesmen ready to father it.

The silver men are determined if possible to force through a free coinage bill. They are strongly impressed with their ability to accomplish the work in the Senate where they will have the assistance of the new senators from Idaho, Montana and Wyoming. There will not be sufficient strength, however, to carry such a bill over the president's veto which is almost certain to follow its passage; although some of the strongest adherents to free coinage express that the president will not antagonize such a measure after giving it his mature consideration. The recent Democratic successes, it is claimed, will figure greatly to their advantage.

Representative Lodge, of Massachusetts, is of the opinion that the House will certainly pass a bill and that the Senate will complete the work of the majority by passing the elections bill. Mr. Lodge also ventures the opinion that "if the Democrats get an extra session next spring it will be the beginning of the end for them." He thinks Mr. Mills will win the speakership contest. Many Republicans entertain this opinion. The announcement that a strong lobby is on its way to Washington with a view to secure the enactment of legislation which will lead to the disfranchisement of the Mormons, has created quite a commotion in political circles. There are two bills now pending in the respective Houses which propose to take the privileges of the franchise from any person practicing, abetting or countenancing polygamy, or who may be attached to any institution that does. Friends of the Mormans hold that to pass either of these measures would be very unjust as the Mormon church has sincerely acknowledged allegiance to the laws of the United States. It does not appear, however, that there will be any time for the consideration of such bills during this session.

Senator Vance, who has had so much trouble because of his opposition to the sub-treasury bill, is quoted as having said that he will gladly co-operate with any friend of the measure in Congress to put the idea of the bill into a shape conformable with the constitution. It is believed that this statement will facilitate the closing of the chasm between Mr Vance and the South Carolina senatorship.

Representative Yoder, of Ohio, tells another story regarding McKinley's defeat. Holmes county contains a large number of people with quaint old fashioned ways, who are known as the Amish sect. One peculiarity of these people is that they entirely discard the use of buttons, using hooks and eyes instead. "The Democrats," says Mr. Yoder, "did not use the advance in the price of pearl buttons as an argument among these people, but they went to the stores of the country and purchased all the hooks and eyes. Then they sent the peddlers through the towns and farms instructing them to sell the hooks and eyes at a price which was about 300 or 400 per cent. higher than before. The Amish people did not object to the advance on tin cups and other necessaries of life, but when it came to paying more for holding their clothes together they voted the Democratic ticket."

Diphtheria in Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 24.—Two deaths from diphtheria have occurred in the household of Henry Sockins within twenty-four hours. Miss Duckworth, a sister-in-law of Mr. Sockins, died, and Mrs. Sockins, his wife passed away. Exaggerated reports of diphtheria are prevalent in the northern part of the city. A number of sporadic cases exist in Hampdem but they are of a mild character.

Petitioning the Czar.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—A meeting of the bureau of the Siberian exile petition association was held at the Parish house of the Church of the Ascension. The Rev. Father Ducey, one of the vice presidents of the association, and George Kennan, the celebrated Siberian traveler, were present. Mr. Kennan spoke at some length relative to Russian affairs. It was announced that 100,000 names had been obtained to a petition which is to be forwarded to the Czar with a view to inducing him to set some of the exiles at liberty.

Prominent Lawyer Dead.

OMAHA, NEB., Nov. 24.—James W. Savage, one of the best known lawyers, of Nebraska, and a prominent Democratic politician, died at his home in this city, of pneumonia. Judge Savage was a government director of the Union Pacific road at the time of his death.

Catarrh

Is a constitutional and not a local disease, and therefore it cannot be cured by local applications. It requires a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, working through the blood, eradicates the impurity which causes and promotes the disease, and effects a permanant cure. Thousands of people testify to the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a remedy for catarrh when other preparations had failed. Hood's Sarsaparilla also builds up the whole system, and makes you feel renewed in health and strength.

N. B. If you decide to try Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to buy any other.

"I used Hood's Sarsaparilla for catarrh, and received great relief and benefit from it. The catarrh was very disagreeable, causing constant discharge from my nose, ringing noises in my ears, and pains in the back of my head. The effect to clear my head in the morning by hawking and spitting was painful. Hood's Sarsaparilla gave me relief immediately, while in time I was entirely cured. I think Hood's Sarsaparilla is worth its weight in gold." MRS. G. R. GREE, 1020 Eighth Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla has helped me more for catarrh and impure blood than anything else I ever used." A. BALL, Syracuse, N. Y.

ESTATE OF JANE GORDEN.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the city of Adrian, on Monday, the 10th day of November, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety.

Present Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of John Boyd, alleging among other things that he is one of the principal creditors of said deceased; that more than thirty days have elapsed since the death of said deceased; and praying that administration of said estate may be granted to Charles Burridge, or to some other suitable person.

It is ordered, that Monday, the 8th day of December next at 9 o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

Attention, Comrade.

DO YOU WANT A PENSION? Do You Want Your Pension Increased?

There is a New Pension Law and nearly every soldier is now entitled to a pension.

DR. J. H. REYNOLDS

Late a member of the Board of Examining Surgeons at Adrian, Mich., and who has examined over two thousand soldiers for pensions, will hereafter devote two hours each day to

PENSION BUSINESS

The Doctor was a soldier and is a pensioner, and with his five years' experience as Examining Surgeon for Pensions, believes he can make it PAY YOU to come and see him.

He knows the RATE on every known disability.

Knows what Diseases or Disabilities are the results of any other.

Knows (as every EXAMINING SURGEON will tell you) that many men do not draw what the law allows them, because their claims are not presented in proper shape.

Knows how to put your claim in such shape that you will get pay for ALL results of the disease or wound for which you are pensioned.

Knows all the recent decisions made by Commissioner and how to give you the advantage of them in dollars.

Knows that some recent rulings are of vital importance to many pensioners, if their claims are only properly presented.

Knows whether you are entitled to Rerating and how to get it.

I charge just the legal fees because I earn them.

ALWAYS BRING YOUR CERTIFICATE WITH YOU.

If you want the benefit of a Pension while you live go and see Dr. Reynolds.

I can get you from $2 to $6 more per month under the new law than other agents.

To any person examined by the board, at Adrian, before Aug. 1, 1889, I have something of importance to tell you.

Come and let us examine you (no charge) and I will tell you all about it. About one-third of all the soldiers examined while I was on the board were rated for disabilities not claimed. You had better come and see me about it.

Correspondence solicited, with stamp forwd.

15 East Maumee-st., Adrian, Mich.

ATTENTION, Soldiers & Sailors.

Under the new pension law just passed by Congress all Soldiers and Sailors who served 90 days in the Rebellion, and who are disabled from any cause permanently, (need not have originated in the service,) are entitled to a pension of from $6 to $12. All soldiers' widows, minor children and dependent parents come under this law. Being located at the Capital near the U. S. Pension office, we can give our personal attention to your claim and thus ascertain and defect quickly and supply the same.

Write for blanks. Give full description of service and disabilities.

DODD'S CATARRH CURE.

LOCAL AND INTERNAL TREATMENT.

In order to cure catarrh it is necessary to allay the inflammation of the irritated membranes with a soothing application, cleanse the head of the plugging mucous secretions, and heal the discharging ulcers. For cold in the head and nasal catarrh Dodds' local treatment does this without the aid of snuff, douches or fumes. If the disease has extended downward, affecting the bronchial tubes or lungs, digest and blood, the internal treatment both removes from the system the scattered poison, and by its building-up properties assists nature in restoring the impaired parts. Send for our book treating on catarrh. FOSTER, MILBURN & CO., proprietors, Buffalo, N. Y. Sold in Tecumseh, Mich., by C. A. Wright & Co., druggists.

By All Odds

The most generally useful medicine is Ayer's Pills. As a remedy for the various diseases of the stomach, liver, and bowels, these Pills have no equal. Their sugar-coating causes them not only to be easy and pleasant to take, but preserves their medicinal integrity in all climates and for any reasonable length of time. The best family medicine, Ayer's Pills are, also, unsurpassed for the use of travelers, soldiers, sailors, campers, and pioneers. In some of the most critical cases, when all other remedies have failed, prove effective.

"In the summer of 1861 I was sent to the Annapolis hospital, suffering with chronic diarrhea. While there, I became so reduced in strength that I could not speak and was compelled to write everything I wanted to say. I was then having some 25 or 30 stools per day. The doctors ordered a medicine that I was satisfied would be of no benefit to me. I did not take it, but persuaded my nurse to get me some of Dr. Ayer's Pills. About two o'clock in the afternoon I took six of these pills, and by midnight began to feel better. In the morning the doctors came again, and after deciding that my symptoms were more favorable, gave me a different medicine, which I did not use, but took four more of the pills instead. The next day the doctors came to see me, and thought I was doing nicely, (and so did I). I then took one pill a day for a week. At the end of that time, I considered myself cured and that Ayer's Pills had saved my life. I was then weak, but had no return of the disease, and gained in strength as fast as could be expected."—F. The Land Purchase

Will be the Main Point of Interest

IN THE SPEECH FROM THE THRONE NEXT TUESDAY.

Money Rushing in Liberally For the Trial of General Booth's Scheme to Redeem Darkest England—Royal Society—The British Fleet—Foreign News.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—The speech from the throne on Tuesday next is looked forward to with unusual interest. It is believed that Lord Salisbury will outline the policy of the government on the Irish question in much the same style as has recently been given expression to by his lieutenants. The land purchase scheme is to be pushed through with energy, and any obstruction overcome with all the resources in the power of the majority. The nation is to be congratulated on friendly relations with everybody, everywhere, especially Portugal, whose people are subsiding into a more amiable spirit toward the "British Lion." The surplus of income over expenditures will of course be alluded to, as one of the strong points of the Conservative government and it is possible that her majesty may insist personally on some mention of the loss of the Serpent, about which she is said to feel deeply. The main popular interest centers in the land purchase scheme.

General Booth is very likely to have a chance to try his plan for the redemption of darkest England. Money is pouring in liberally, and a board of trustees is being constituted to have charge of the funds. The heart of English philanthropy has been touched as never before in many years, and none the less easily because the inefficiency of existing methods for the relief and suppression of pauperism is appallingly apparent. Most English, except the agricultural laborers, prefer death by starvation to the workhouse, and out-door relief, as generally administered, means slow starvation. Even the papers which were inclined to ridicule Booth, now look at his proposition seriously, for they comprehend that an attempt will be to carry it out.

While the poor are looking forward to the struggle of winter, London society is beginning a gayer season than ever. The Prince of Wales, now recovered from the slight indisposition which hastened his return from Austria and caused some anxiety to his royal mother, will lead the grand march of pleasure and the pretty German princes, who hang on to the English court, are gathering to the feast. The queen returns from the Scottish hills in renewed strength and is said to look heartier than she has for years past. She seems to have all the vigor of George III, without the mental weakness, and the ministry are said to be deeply impressed by her self assertion and originality in dealing with affairs of state. She has met with an affliction in the loss of Lady Grey, a woman of the bedchamber to whom she was greatly attached and to whose funeral services she sent tokens of love and devotion. These bereavements are gradually depriving the aged sovereign of the trusted associates of her widowed life, and she clings more tenaciously than ever to the company of her daughter Beatrice much to the disgust, it is whispered, of Prince Henry of Battenburg, the husband of Beatrice, who finds himself a sort of footman to his mother-in-law, with the privilege of dining and looking solemn at the royal dinner table. However, as he is practically without income except what he receives through his marriage, he is perforce content with his situation. The allowance to Princess Beatrice is £6,000 a year, of which it is understood she gives her husband £2,000 for his personal expenses, which are said to include a former incumbrance of the House of Battenburg not of royal origin.

The proceedings of the British fleet at Vitu will be subject of animadversion immediately upon the meeting of Parliament. Four well known public men were speaking on the matter this afternoon. Two of them were members of Parliament, one of them a young Conservative, who has already achieved a high reputation, the other a Unionist of great influence. The names of the other two men are intimately associated with Africa. One of them is a director of the British East African company; the other has had much to do recently with treaty making and the establishment of British interests in an important part of Africa. All of these men were indignant that, simply to please Germany, an act of the greatest injustice should have been committed, the fair fame of the English name tarnished, and the British East African company seriously hampered. The German papers themselves admitted that their compatriots were to blame for the fate that overtook them. What should have been done, in the unanimous opinion of the four representative men referred to, was to have sent a commission to the spot to investigate the case and mete out strict justice to all concerned.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 24.—The navigation of the Baltic is closed by ice. Winter has set in with the unusual rigor. The river Neva is frozen over solid, and heavy snow storms have prevailed in the provinces.

Go to Learn of Koch.

MONTREAL, Nov. 24.—Drs. McConnell and Ross of Phillips College, have left for Berlin to study Dr. Koch's treatment.

How to Attach Armor Plates.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—A board consisting of Naval Constructor Hichboom and Assistant Naval Constructors Woodward, Linnard and Taylor, is now holding daily sessions at the navy department, under instructions from the secretary of the navy, to decide upon the best means of attaching the armor plates to the new ships. As some of these plates will weigh as much as forty tons each, the problem presents serious mechanical difficulties. So far the work of the board has been of a preliminary nature, consisting largely of inquiry into foreign practice.

Horrible Death.

PEORIA, ILL., Nov. 23.—Frank Sherrer, a watchman employed by the Peoria Distilling company, while making his rounds slipped and fell into a barrel of scalding slop. It was some time before he was rescued and his flesh fell from his bones when he was lifted out.

HORRIBLE DEATH.

PARKERSBURG, W. VA., Nov. 24.—Joseph Leonard, one of the oldest and most respected stock raisers in Clay county, met with a peculiar and fatal accident. Mr. Leonard was climbing down from his hay loft, where he had gone to feed his stock, when his foot slipped from a rung of the ladder and he fell.

In his fall he struck a large steel hook fastened into an upright for the purpose of holding up butchered beeves or hogs. The hook penetrated the muscles and flesh of his thigh. In falling Leonard turned over and struck the hook downward. He was not found for several hours, by which time he had become unconscious with pain and loss of blood. Leonard recovered consciousness sufficiently to explain the accident, but died before morning.

AFTER AN ASSASSIN.

The Government Offers a Reward for Richard Lourie's Capture.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Attorney General Miller has directed that a reward be offered for the arrest of Richard Lourie, who is accused of being an accomplice in the killing last summer of Colonel Forsyth. Forsythe was in charge of the Dodge plantation in Georgia, which had been the subject of litigation, finally decided in favor of the Dodges. He was an important government witness in cases arising out of the litigation, and was shot while sitting with his family. An investigation by the department of justice developed the fact that Lourie had been hired to kill Forsyth. In the meantime he has fled from the state, and is now said to be in North Carolina. Lourie is said to be the leader of the Lourie gang in Western North Carolina.

Killed in a Drunken Row.

MITCHELL, IND., Nov. 24.—James Terrell was killed by John Feltner, known as General Feltner, at Huron, ten miles west of here. Both were residents of that village. They had a fight in the afternoon in George Feltner's saloon, but were separated. Terrell renewed the quarrel and shot at Feltner but failed to hit him. He then began beating him over the head with the revolver. James Wolford, a friend of Feltner, then interfered, and while he held Terrell down Feltner stabbed him. Terrell died in ten minutes. Feltner is under arrest. Terrell is about forty years of age and leaves a widow and four children.

Ex-Policeman Arrested for Murder.

WAUPACA, WIS., Nov. 24.—Tab Pryor, who was a policeman in this city at the time of the Mead murder in 1882, was arrested for complicity in the crime, at Antigo and will be brought here. Pryor is one of four men in this city who were suspected at the time, but the evidence was too poor. The arrest of the others is expected in a day or two. The murder of Mead was as atrocious crime. He was in his bank at night and was stunned, then robbed and then the top of his head blown off with a shot gun. The arrest of Pryor is the result of the reward offered by the county board.

TWO THOUSAND VOLTS.

Terrible Shock to an Epileptic Line Man—Instantly Killed.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—James Tucker, foreman of the lineman of the East River Electric Light company, while repairing over a head wire on Second avenue, was suddenly seized with a fit and fell across the wires, receiving a shock of two thousand volts. When taken down he was still breathing but died almost immediately.

HERE'S THE LIST.

The Democratic Majority Will be One Hundred and Forty-two.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—The un-official list of the next congress now completed by the clerk of House shows 222 Democrats, 92 Republicans, 17 Farmers' alliance, 2 of whom came from the South and will probably act with the Democrats, so the Democratic majority will be about 142.

Horse-Thief Attempts Suicide.

VIRGINIA, ILL., Nov. 24.—The man and woman who hired a team of Mr. Witte, a liveryman of Chandlerville, a few days ago and who disposed of them near Virden, Ill., were brought here and are confined in jail. The man, who claims to be Smith, is in a precarious condition, the effects of arsenic, taken with suicidal intent. His recovery is doubtful.

Killed by an Express Train.

KALAMAZOO, MICH., Nov. 24.—As the day express on the Michigan Central was nearing this city, it struck a buggy containing Daniel Crane and Bert Green, killing them instantly. They were not trying to cross ahead of the engine, but were unable to control the horse. They were carried on the cow catcher a half mile.

San Francisco Wrestling Match.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 24.—A wrestling match took place here between Joseph Acton and Evan Lewis for $1,000. The conditions of the match were that Lewis was obliged to throw his opponent twice in an hour, while Acton won if he gained a fall. Acton won.

Broke Trough the Ice.

Quarantine Against Cresco.

MASON CITY, IA., Nov. 24.—Scarlet fever is raging at Algona and the schools have been closed. Diphtheria, which is quite general throughout Iowa, now prevails to such an alarming extent at Cresco that exacting quarantine measures have been resorted to.

Poisoned Boarders Out of Danger.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—All the victims of the recent attempted poisoning at Mrs. Mackey's boarding house, No. 2,256 Wabash avenue are now out of danger. George Harris, the colored porter was suspected of poisoning the food, is still held until the analysis is completed.

RISEN FROM THE DEAD.

LESSON IX, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, NOV. 30.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xxiv, 1, 12. Commit Verses 6-9—Golden Text, I Cor. xv, 20—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

1. "Now upon the first day of the week, very early in the morning, they came unto the sepulcher, bringing the spices which they had prepared, and certain others with them." On Friday afternoon His body wrapped in linen, with about a hundred pound weight of spices which Nicodemus provided, was by him and Joseph of Arimathea laid in Joseph's new tomb, wherein was never man yet laid (John xix, 39-49). According to Matthew and Mark, some of the women of Galilee who followed Him, ministering unto Him, saw Him die as they stood afar off, or rather were standing afar off when He died, and also saw where Joseph and Nicodemus buried Him. Then they returned and prepared spices and ointments and rested the Sabbath day according to the commandment (xxiii, 56). These are they who come so early to the sepulcher. With sad and heavy hearts they come to add one more kindness to the many which they have already bestowed on Him whom they loved so well. He will no doubt give them full credit for all their loving kindness, but if they had only believed Him they would have been spared this labor and expense. We often mean well in our desire to serve Him, but like these women do much fruitless work because of unbelief.

2. "And they found the stone rolled away from the sepulcher." They said as they came, "Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulcher?" (Mark xvi, 3.) But they find that difficulty removed ere they come to it.

3. "And they entered in and found not the body of the Lord Jesus." Putting the various accounts together, it would seem that Mary Magdalene was the first to find the sepulcher empty and the stone rolled away, and that she, too, was the first to tell Peter and John (John xx, 1, 2). Then it would seem that the other women came and saw an angel sitting upon the stone which had been rolled away, and also an angel sitting in the sepulcher, and that each told them to go and tell His disciples that He was risen (Matt. xxviii, 2, 7; Mark xvi, 5, 7). Mary Magdalene seems to have lingered after the others, so blinded by grief and tears that she either did not know that it was angels who spoke to her from the tomb, or did not care to know; neither did she know Jesus himself when He first spoke to her until He called her by name. So blinding is unbelieving grief.

4. "And it came to pass as they were much perplexed thereabout, behold two men stood by them in shining garments." These are probably the same two mentioned by Matthew and Mark. Jesus sent the seventy, two and two before Him (Luke x, 1); the Spirit sent forth Paul and Barnabas, then Paul and Silas, Barnabas and Mark (Acts xiii, 2; xv, 39, 40). In the beginning of the church's history, and also in Jesus' last days, we read of Peter and John as fellow laborers (Luke xxii, 8; Acts iii, 1; iv, 19). So also we often find the angels two together, as when two accompanied the Lord to visit Abram and two appeared at the ascension (Gen. xviii, 1, 2; Acts i, 10).

5. "And as they were afraid, and bowed down their faces to the earth, they said unto them, Why seek ye the living (margin, Him that liveth) among the dead?" See His own words to John long afterward: "I am the first, and the last, and the living one; I was dead and behold I am alive forevermore" (Rev. i, 17, 18, R. V.) We learn from this verse that unbelief causes fear and turns our faces earthward. The remedy is to look up and see Him who is alive forevermore, and who has the keys of hades and death; who has all power in heaven and on earth; who says, "Fear thou not, for I am with thee." There is a word here, too, for those who think too much of the spot where the mortal bodies of our loved ones are laid. Rather let us look up to where they are alive and well, if so be that they have died in Christ.

6. "He is not here, but is risen: remember how He spake unto you when He was yet in Galilee." It would not do for us to say of our dead in Christ that they are risen, for "risen" refers to the body, and the body remains in the grave till the resurrection of the righteous at the coming of Christ; but we may truly say as we look into the grave, "They are not here; they are with Christ."

7. "Saying, The Son of Man must be delivered into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise again." Many times had He said these very words just as plainly as these angels now said them (Matt. xvi, 21; xvii, 23; xx, 19; see also John ii, 19; Matt. xii, 40), but they had never believed them.

8. "And they remembered His words." That was the right thing to do. If they had remembered sooner they would have saved themselves much sorrow.

9. "And returned from the sepulcher, and told all these things unto the eleven, and to all the rest." Remembering His word makes us forget our sorrow, and turns us away from the dead to minister unto the living.

10. "It was Mary Magdalene, and Joanna, and Mary, the mother of James, and other women that were with them, which told these things unto the apostles." According to the word of the angels, "Go quickly and tell His disciples that He is risen from the dead," "they departed with fear and great joy, and did run to bring His disciples word." It was then that Jesus met them and said, "Be not afraid; go tell my brethren" (Matt. xxviii, 7-10). The explanation of any seeming difficulty in the various accounts is that some of the evangelists summarize matters, while others give a certain item or items more in detail. There are no contradictions.

11. "And their words seemed to them as idle tales, and they believed them not." Paul preached Jesus and the resurrection at Athens; some mocked, and others said, We will hear thee again of this matter. When at Rome he preached the Gospel of the Kingdom, some believed and some believed not (Acts xvii, 32; xxviii, 23, 24). We are nowhere encouraged to hope that in this dispensation all who hear the Gospel will believe.

12. "Then arose Peter, and ran unto the sepulcher, and stooping down he beheld the linen clothes laid by themselves, and departed wondering in himself at that which was come to pass." This is probably the same visit to the tomb recorded in John xx, 6, 7; or if not, then Peter went twice to the tomb—once with John, when Mary told them, and again alone, when he received a personal message by the other women. Some time on this day He appeared to Peter (vs. 34); perhaps it was on this probable second visit to the sepulcher.

Clinton Column.

CLINTON, MICH., NOV. 27, 1890.

C. S. Burroughs spent the first of the week in Toledo.

Mrs. William Rogers spent Saturday in Tecumseh.

Blanche Smith returns to Detroit and her musical duties next Monday.

P. C. Smith was home from Ann Arbor over Sunday.

E. R. Smith and family spend Thanksgiving with friends in Mason.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Clark are pleasantly settled in their new home.

Elias DePuy went to Adrian on business Tuesday.

Louise VanDeMark was in Ridgeway this week Thursday.

Howard Hause leaves here Saturday for Ypsilanti for the purpose of attending business college.

We hear there is talk among the young people of having club dances here, this winter.

Miss Etta Rowland of Tecumseh visited her sister Mrs. B. F. Thompson a few days last week.

Work is progressing rapidly on Mrs. Collin's new house. It will be a great improvement to that street.

Mr. and Mrs E. VanDeMark visited friends in Blissfield last Friday and Saturday.

J. B. Hause and wife, Jennie Hause, and Miss Lillie Becker drove over to Ypsilanti Saturday.

Some of our young people attended the dance at Manchester last Friday night and report a pleasant time.

The teachers of the Union School are preparing an entertainment to be given at the close of this term.

Prof. Ole's concert Saturday night was very poorly patronized, though it was said to be deserving of a full house.

We are glad to report David Brooks as decidedly better. His condition is now such that his friends have hope of a speedy recovery.

The flower show and supper given by the Congregational society last week was an exceedingly pleasant affair, and netted the ladies quite a neat little sum.

Chauncey Ogden was thrown from an unmanageable mustang last Monday in front of J. L. Tuttle's residence. He was unconscious when taken into the doctor's office, but medical aid soon brought him around all right.

1,600 : MICHIGAN ; FARMERS !

are actual paid-in-advance subscribers to THE NATIONAL STOCKMAN AND FARMER. They appreciate its ninety-six columns each week, filled with well-classified reading matter, complete and accurate market reports and containing only clean reliable advertisements, and we appreciate their patronage.

We have no more intelligent and critical readers than those in Michigan. We want more of them. With more than 20,000 subscribers in Ohio where our paper is well known we have no difficulty in extending our list. We want 3,400 more in Michigan in the next sixty days. We would get them and double that number if farmers there knew what we have to offer them. A postal card will bring a sample copy.

Subscription price, $1.50 per year. In clubs of five, $1. The remainder of this year free to new subscribers for 1891. Will pay $3,000 in cash to our club raisers April 1, 1891.

RESTORED HIS WIFE'S HEALTH.

My wife suffered for years from debility and general breaking down of health, the results of diseases peculiar to women. A few bottles of Swift's Specific (S.S.S.) restored her to perfect health. It built her up, increased her appetite and weight, until she is now the picture of health. The speedy recovery of my wife from her long illness caused all my family, and several of my neighbors, to take S.S.S. As a tonic we are all delighted with it.

BABY CURED.

My baby had the worst case of Catarrh that I ever saw a small child afflicted with. The nasal discharge was very large and very offensive. Having some personal knowledge of the curative properties of S.S.S. I gave the baby a course of S.S.S., using nothing else. In a short time the discharge from the nose stopped, and the Catarrh was cured entirely and permanently as there has been no return of it since.

IMPORTANT TESTIMONY.

I have had sciatic rheumatism for eighteen years. The pains in my limbs and back were unbearable, and I could not use my left limb. I was confined to my bed weeks at a time with tormenting pains. Four bottles of Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup entirely cured me. C. L. DUNHAM, Druggist, Avoca, Iowa.

"THOU SHALT NOT STEAL."

Among the Ten Commandments is this one: "Thou shalt not steal." It is one of the commandments that most of us firmly believe we keep. We may covet our neighbor's goods, but we are much too respectable and well-raised to steal them. We consider stealing a despicable sin and the thief the lowest of mankind. The burglar who creeps into our house at night and makes off with our money, jewels, or other valuables, is a low wretch who deserves shooting. The petty thief who steals a lof of bread is placed in prison and forever after has the contempt of his more honest or less hungry fellow-men. The word "contempt" expresses clearly the feeling we have for those who break the commandment, "thou shalt not steal." We can have no pity for a weakness so mean, a sin so contemptible.

And yet, do not we, who pride ourselves on our freeness from this sin, sometimes take that which is not our own? We may not steal our neighbor's money or his jewels; we do not enter his barn at night and carry off his corn; we do not steal his coat, his hat, or his umbrella; but there is something more precious to men and women, more to be valued, more to be carefully guarded and protected than precious jewels or costly raiment, something that if man or woman lose, or have stolen from them, leaves them without a hope or prospect in life, cast adrift on the waves of public scorn, without a plank to hold to or a hand to help.

How many of us have been guilty of stealing from our neighbor his most precious possession—his good name?

We, who would scorn to steal a shilling, who would consider ourselves disgraced by having the word "thief" whispered in our ears, do not scruple to take from our brother or sister his or her good name. By hints, winks, shrugs and insinuations we steal away the character of a friend. Sometimes we do it thoughtlessly;—from mere love of talk we gossip. Gossip leads to slander, and slander is contemptible.

Sometimes from pure malice, because we wish and intend that harm may be the result, we steal the good name of one we envy or dislike. Can the petty thief of a penny cake be more mean, more low? Can he be half as cruel or malicious as he who thus steals away the pride of a human life? The good name of a woman is the great and most precious gift of her life; without it existence is but torment and misery. Beauty or wealth cannot compensate her for the loss of her name as a pure woman. Knowing this as women do, is it not strange that they should seek to take from each other their very life, to take that without which they would be scorned and mocked, to steal that which causes a woman to raise her head in pride, glorying in that precious gift of womanhood, a pure and spotless name.

God pity those who fall in the clutches of the scandal mongers. In quoting the Commandment, "thou shalt not steal," let us, who never feel tempted to abstract pocket handkerchiefs, rings, or other articles, pray that we may be held guiltless of stealing from our neighbor his or her name and reputation. JUSTICE.

HORSE THIEVES IN RIGA.

Last Saturday morning about 2 o'clock, a very valuable five-year-old mare, belonging to A. A. Lathrop, was taken from his barn, together with a buggy and harness belonging to the hired man. The horse not being a very tractable animal before a buggy, gave the driver the slip, and was taken upon its way home, with part of the harness still on. The badly demolished buggy was found in front of the postoffice in Sylvania.

It is supposed that the same thieves took Charles Rockinstire's horse and buggy, to convey them to Toledo, for it was taken from the stable some time that night, and found hitched in Toledo the next morning.

GOOD ADVICE.

The serious investigation of the Ann Arbor tragedy should be pushed to the utmost and the law officers of the county should not throw up their hands and announce their discouragement. There are people in the place—and plenty of them—who know the man by whose hand young Dennison died and that man should be found. This does not assume that he was altogether responsible for the crime, but it does mean to impress the people of Ann Arbor and the officials of Washtenaw County with the simple truth that the tragedy of a week ago was something more serious than are the usual results of students' pranks. There has been evidence that Ann Arbor is half-stunned by the nature and the horror of the event, and needs a little waking up.—Detroit Free Press.

A Woman's Discovery.

"Another wonderful discovery has been made and that too by a lady in this country. Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly and could not sleep. She bought of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night and with one bottle has been miraculously cured. WILHELM'S IMPROVED CREAMERY CAN.

Unequalled for private Dairies of from one cow to full size Creamery. $5.00 will buy FOUR 3-GAL. CANS making a capacity of 12 gallons of milk, and will PRODUCE ALL THE CREAM FROM 4 TO 8 HOURS, in a vat, tub, or any receptacle the farmer may choose, holding water from 10 to 14 inches in depth, and at a temperature from 40 to 60 degrees cold. IT MAKES A PERFECT STEAM and combines the advantage of deep setting, rapid cooling, protecting the milk from all impurities of the atmosphere which so quickly taints cream. Also preventing souring by thunder storms, from flies, insects, dust, and all bad odors, thus preserving both cream and milk, clean and sweet. Over 200,000 in actual use in the U. S. One setting of milk is all that is needed to prove the merit of the can. Usual size of can, 3-gal., price $1.25. A liberal discount on orders of one dozen Cans and upwards. Write for descriptive circular and testimonials. I also make a specialty of building Creameries and furnishing all the best improved machinery and apparatus. JOHN WILHELM, Wooster, Wayne Co., O.

C. L. Osgood, Samaria, Mich. says—The Milk Cans I bought of you give perfect satisfaction. We can make just as good and just as much butter in the most unfavorable season of the year by the use of your Cans as at any other time of the year. I have 4 Cans. Have used them 3 years and would not be without them.

OBITUARY.

Jacob Arner, was born January 15th 1819. He was a native of Pennsylvania. At the age of three years his parents moved to New York State where he spent his school boy days until 1834, when his parents moved to the wilderness of Michigan, and settled in Macon township. Here he spent his pioneer days in chopping and clearing land. He worked for Esquire Miller, of Ridgeway several years and was united in marriage to his daughter Ellen Miller, in the fall of 1849. One child a son was born to them, who was killed at Millwaukee Sep. 1873, at 23 years of age. The fall of 1850 he with his family moved to Laporte Ind, where he assisted Oliver Miller in the mercantile business. The following spring his wife after a lingering sickness with consumption died; the remains were brought here for burial. In 1853 he was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Benedict of Tecumseh and settled in our village where he lived until his death. Six children two boys Geo. W. Arner of Bridgeport Alabama and Walter B. Arner, now with his mother, Mrs. Ella Morley of Pratt Kansas, Mrs. Allie J. Barrett, of the village, Mrs. Ida Anderson, and Miss Lottie Arner, of Detroit, are left to mourn the loss of a kind and indulgent father, who after several weeks of failing health quietly passed away Nov. 4th, at the age of 71 years and ten months.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Roads are fair again.

Mrs. Hoag was away visiting her parents last Sunday.

The dance given by the S. of V. on thanksgiving eve was a success in every sense of the word. One hundred and four numbers were sold, and a most enjoyable evening was passed. Britton has never had such an orderly dance and even the greatest bigot against dancing, acknowledged this last party was a grand success and was a credit to our village.

Carl Roberts has quit the section to work on his mother-in-lews farm, and Herbert Cranshaw takes his place.

"Beyond Pardon" is the name of the play to be put on the boards shortly by the Britton Dramatic Club. The characters have all been chosen, and as soon as the parts are committed to memory the rehearsals will commence.

The person or persons who took the horse and conveyance from the barn door of the hotel a week ago last Sunday, had better be careful. No doubt it was done in a joke, but there are many horse theives around at the present time, and the missing horse being a very valuable one, and the carriage new and of the latest make, it disturbed the peace of mind of the possessor so much and caused him such anxiety at the supposed loss of his valuable property, that it was said he did not enjoy his evening's sparking in the slightest, although he had the most beautiful and accomplished young lady in Britton for his companion.

Mrs. D. Sloan was visiting friends in Britton last week.

The Wabash people have improved their entrance to the depot by drawing cinders and putting them on the road there. It was a terrible mud hole and the cinders are a great improvement.

George Exelby is drawing gravel around the hotel. If every one would take as much interest in Britton as George does we would have good roads.

Last Saturday night one of the hotel boarders found a dish of crackers in his bed. Strange how they got there.

W. Lenardson & Son advertise a large assortment of holiday goods to be in their store by Dec. 10th. Give them a call.

Last Saturday evening a Wabash car loaded with hogs got off the track here. After a good deal of trouble, the car was righted again and proceeded east.

We hear that John Gibson and Cunningham Patterson are going into the poultry business together, and will pay the highest market price for poultry and game.

L. Hause is doing a good trade in the butcher business. He keeps nothing but the finest meats; is obliging to his customers and gives universal satisfaction. We wish him success.

A Good Looking Face

We like to see. Yet Erysipelas disfigures the features and the disease is as dangerous as it is repulsive. It is sometimes called "St. Anthony's Fire," and often ends in sudden death. S. B. Carpenter, Grandville, N. Y., had it in both legs, and was cured by Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y. This medicine excels all others for the blood.

NORTH EAST FRANKLIN.

Abie Hunt's folks are rejoicing over a fine two week's old boy.

Mrs. Lafayette Spencer returned to her home in Holloway, Sunday, after spending several days with her parents and sisters in Franklin.

Thanksgiving passed off very quietly. Schools were dismissed and the pupils given a holiday, which was generally devoted to winding up the fall's work. It was time, for old winter seems to be upon us.

Miss Rose Hunter, of Clinton, visited the Misses Taylor last Friday and Saturday.

Horace Brown visited his brother, in Ohio, thanksgiving week.

Mrs. Dobson, formerly May Allen, of Litchfield, is with her husband, visiting among her cousins in this vicinity.

John Smith has been almost down to the gates of death, but we are glad to learn, is now likely to regain his health.

Ben. Lankin has bought the old Monaghan farm near Sand Lake. As the price paid was only eighteen dollars per acre it will be seen that farm values are not what they have been. They can hardly go lower. Wonder if the democratic tidal wave will bring them up. Let us all wait and hope for that desirable result.

The White Rose Club is appointed for next Saturday, p. m., at L. E. Taylor's. All are invited.

RAISIN RACKET.

Rev. David Lewis is carrying on revival meetings at the Raisin Center church, assisted by two young ladies from Cleveland.

Mr. Edwin Taft and family spent Friday with his sister, Mrs. Bloom Sherman.

Miss Phoebe Osgood attended the 45th reunion of the Martha Osgood Society, held at Mr. Wm. Osgood's place, in Macon, and after dinner being served, listened to an interesting program by the younger members.

T. G. Mead and family helped Thos I. Sutton and family to make way with a large turkey on Thanksgiving. It is good for neighbors and friends to turn out and help one another.

Walter Cornelius is having quite a seige with rheumatic fever. It is now nearly six weeks since he has left his bed.

The scholars at the Seminary had a very pleasant time Thanksgiving evening, oysters in all shapes and other refreshments to correspond, following the banquet. They held a mock trial, but it happened that the jury agreed to disagree.

The weather this morning makes one think that they had better get those felt boots around, for they would be very comfortable about these times.

Rabbits seem to be pretty plenty in these parts, but I guess they will get thinned out some by the sound of the guns in every direction.

Robert Westgate has a very nice flock of Shropshire lambs of a hundred, that he is feeding.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

Johnnie Smith whose recovery seemed at one time almost hopeless is reported as better.

Vern Roberts has been teaching in the Bradley Dist. the past week in place of Willis Smith who has been unable to leave his sick father.

Wm. Nolce is visiting at his aunt's Mrs. Fred Davenport.

Hudson Davenport is taken a few weeks vacation ere returning to his situation in Blissfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Willis Smith wanted to go to Tipton; the horse however had notions of its own on the subject and so unceremoniously dumped them by the road side and went home with the wheels of the buggy, having been frightened by some wayside object. Mrs. Smith we understand was hurt but neither of them seriously.

Mr. and Mrs. Dobson have been visiting at aunt Ann Allen's and other relatives; they started for their home near Litchfield Monday morning having driven out. Mrs. Dobson who had been an invalid for years and was restored to excellent health several years ago by the faith cure. Mr. Dobson was one of the men who rode with Gen. Sheridan on that immortal twenty mile ride to Winchester.

Good time at the Lyceum at Wm. Witherell's, Friday night; expect to have another good time at Reuben Langdon's one week from Friday night.

"At last, I can eat a good square meal without its distressing me!" was the greatful exclamation of one whose appetite had been restored by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, after years of dyspeptic misery. A teaspoonful of this extract before each meal sharpens the appetite.

MANCHESTER MATTERS.

Miss Matie Nelson is visiting relatives in Addison.

The social at J. R. Holmes's last Friday evening was a pleasant affair.

Bert Chase came down from Jackson to visit his parents last week.

Mrs. Barney Fay of Hillsdale was in town over Sunday.

Miss Jessie B. Allen began the school in the Spaford district on Monday.

George Payne has made a recent visit to Canada to see his father who is in feeble health.

Mrs. A. G. Cobb and Miss Anna Cobb, of Saline, spent several days last week at J. P. Lapham's.

Joe and Harry Lamb spent Thanksgiving in Ann Arbor the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred S. Gaige.

Mrs. H. T. VanValkenburg returned last Friday from a short visit with her daughters Mrs. Chas. Cooley and Mrs. Rob't Baur, at Muskegon.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Edmunds and their litt[illegible] terp Eda, from Montcalm [illegible] r visiting at W. E. Pease's.

Mr. and Mrs. John Curry of Ionia County and Mr. and Mrs. Warren Aylesworth of Norvell were guests at J. R. Hohner's, last Friday.

The Manchester friends of J. B. McMahon of Ludington will be pained to hear of the death of his eldest son from that dread and fatal disease, diphtheria.

Mrs. James McMahon of this township was called to Ludington, last week, by the news of her grandson's illness and death.

MACON CENTER CHIPS.

The month of November has been a fine one for finishing up fall work.

Hunters (with the aid of the snow) have made it lively for the rabbits during the past few days.

The Rev. Gulick, pastor of the Reformed Churches of Macon, is creating a lively interest in Church and Sunday-school service. His Thanksgiving sermon at the Central Church was a grand production, and we would be glad to see it in print.

The entertainment given by the prohibitionists of Macon, was to them a decided success, and a rich treat to the audience. The evening was fine and Grange Hall was packed to overflowing. Promptly at 8 o'clock the meeting was called to order by J. W. Baker, president of the Club. The program was lengthy, consisting of recitations, essays, declamations, vocal and instrumental music, it was well rendered and we refrain from commenting, excepting the part given by the children. The recitation of master Clarence Osgood was very fine and showed superior drill. A little boy 11 years old and his sister (children of Wm. B. Mellon) he playing the violin, she accompanying him on the organ, added much to the occasion.

Macon Grange meets Friday evening of this week. Program printed last week. Let there be a good turnout.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, DEC. 4.

Major McKinley did it with his little bill.

Grover Cleveland pressed the button and the people did the rest.

The Congressional bear garden is again opened and ready for business.

The Democratic majority in the next House has now reached 158. That's all.

Perhaps the pitchfork brigade had something to do with the late upheaval.

The defeated Republicans have one consolation, at all events. The Balm of Gilead has been placed on the free list.

The Indian scare is subsiding. Poor Lo is not likely to fight very savagely so long as he draws his rations regularly from Uncle Sam.

What a pity it is that Dr. Koch hadn't discovered his discovery and sold it to Major McKinley about a month before the election.

The tariff was revised by its friends and the McKinley bill was the outcome. The next revision of the tariff will be made by its victims.

An exchange hits the nail on the head in the remark that the people have just caught up with Grover Cleveland on the tariff question.

Electing the Speaker of the next House is not the business before us at present. It will be time enough to attend to that duty when the time comes.

The campaign to sustain the McKinley bill closed in a Waterloo defeat just thirty days ago. The campaign for the repeal of the McKinley bill has already begun.

It is now definitely settled that the Republicans have lost the legislature of South Dakota by seven majority, by which they will lose another member of the U. S. Senate.

Everybody in Wall street, they say, is watching Jay Gould. No wonder. A man who can shovel in ten millions in a single stock deal is likely to attract some attention.

The high taxers who didn't believe it would be much of a shower are probably sorry now that they didn't take Noah Blaine's advice and go into the reciprocity ark.

Ex-Secretary Wm. F. Vilas will be the next U. S. Senator from Wisconsin. Two years hence the Democrats of Michigan will commission Don M. Dickinson to keep him company.

Senator Cullom says the McKinley bill will have to undergo material modification. Just wait till the next Democratic House gets a whack at it and he will find out what material modification means.

Mr. Blaine's reciprocity would be a good thing for the manufacturers of New England, but Grover Cleveland's reciprocity would be a good thing for all the people, East and West, North and South.

Michigan did about as good work as any of the states at the late election. The Democrats have eight of the eleven Congressmen, and had there been an honest ballot and a fair count they would have had two more.

The Farmers' Alliance now holds the balance of power in Kansas, Nebraska, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin. That organization possesses the power to absolutely control the politics of these great States in the future.

The Democratic leaders have serious work before them and they should not get the big head. By wisdom and moderation they can hold what they have gained in Massachusetts, Michigan, Wisconsin and Illinois. To this task they should address themselves.

Here is the latest way in which an exchange puts it:

Mr. McKinley declares that he is "greatly satisfied with the result" of the election. Well, he ought to be. No other man in his party contributed so much to it, and he now rivals President Cleveland as the greatest tariff reformer in the United States.

THE ANTI-McKINLEY CYCLONE.

McKinley, Aldrich, and Tom Reed, like Jack Falstaff, have led their ragamuffins where they are peppered. Never since the war were the Republican prospects fairer than when this trio took the lead at the opening of the Fifty-first Congress. Never since that time has any party sustained such a crushing and overwhelming defeat. That this defeat is due mainly to the McKinley bills there is not a shadow of doubt. Some portion of the disaster may be ascribed, no doubt, to the overbearing, tyrannical behavior of Reed as Speaker, and to his thanking God that "the House is no longer a deliberative body." But the real cause of the cyclone which has emptied seventy Republican seats in Congress is the wicked and unprincipled measure which these people devised to pay the campaign debts of Quay and Wanamaker. The cash that was subscribed to elect Harrison was charged up to the American people in a gross, uncounted sum. It was to be collected by the duty on tin plate, worsted cloth, carpet wool, pearl buttons and a thousand other things that enter into the food and raiment of the people. Such a bill could never have been carried except as a cash transaction, so much for so much. The result is now before us. The Republican party is almost annihilated. It has lost all of New England except Maine and Vermont. It has lost New York, Indiana, Wisconsin and Nebraska, and probably Michigan, Iowa, Illinois, and Montana. It has given the Democrats a greater majority than they ever had in any Congress since the time of Andrew Jackson.

This result has come about spontaneously, in the face of imbecility if not indifference on the part of the National Democratic Committee. It is the result of the working of popular forces which had their start in Grover Cleveland's message on the tariff. That famous document gave the Democrats a fighting issue. They did not like it in the beginning, but they took it, and they carried the country with it on the popular vote, although they lost the Presidency then. The Republicans raised an enormous sum of money. They bought their "blocks of five" and elected Harrison. They then sought to pay back the money McKinleywise, and they have now been smashed so utterly that recovery before 1892 is impossible. The chain of cause and effect is complete.

We say that they cannot recover themselves, because the McKinley bill is a veritable shirt of Nessus. It will burn and sting as long as it lasts. The public have very little conception of it yet. Its worst effects have not yet been felt, because the public are still buying goods in most cases at the old prices. Wait till existing stocks are worked off, and see how the faces of the poor will be ground. That ill-starred measure has been devised, as all other protective tariffs in our history have been, to bear with especial severity upon the laboring classes. Whenever you see anything taxed by the yard, the pound, the gallon, the cubic foot, the dozen, the box, the gross, it means that the poor shall pay as much per head as the rich. As Senator Sherman said years ago, before he was brought to his knees by the Trusts and combines that are plundering the community:

A system of national taxes which rests the whole burden of taxation on consumption, and not one cent on property or income is intrinsically unjust. While the expenses of the national Government are largely caused by the protection of property, it is but right to require property to contribute to their payment. It will not do to say that each person consumes in proportion to his means. This is not true. Everyone must see that the consumption of the rich does not bear the same relation to the consumption of the poor as the income of the one does to the wages of the other. As wealth accumulates this injustice in the fundamental basis of our system will be felt and forced upon the attention of Congress.

This "intrinsically unjust" system of taxation has found its culmination in the McKinley bills. While we are writing these lines there comes to us a letter from a merchant saying that "black Milan braid, used exclusively by the poorer classes, has been McKinleyed up to 132 per cent. It may be added that the rate of duty decreases in proportion to the fineness of the goods." That is the general rule of McKinleyism. The rich people are not numerous enough to pay the party's campaign debts in this fashion. Moreover, the rich can look out for themselves when tariff bills are in the Committee of Ways and Means and in the Conference Committee, and the poor cannot. Per capita is the rule to go by when you want to raise a large sum for any purpose, either for Government or for Quay and Wanamaker.—N. Y. Post.

REPEAL THE McKINLEY BILL.

The following article, taken from the Chicago Tribune, the leading Republican paper of the West, shows that the leaven of tariff reform is working stronger than ever since the election.

Congressman Burrows, of Michigan, a member of the ways and means committee, who had a majority of 4,185 votes in 1888 and of 414 in 1890, or one-tenth as much, says in an interview that "the country will see its mistake when the good effect of the McKinley tariff have been experienced, which will be in less than three months," he thinks. Cannon, La Follette, Gear, of Iowa, and numerous other Congressmen who, less fortunate than Mr. Burrows, did not save their seats, are singing the same song, that if the bill had been passed earlier or the election had been held six months later the party would have gained by the measure instead of losing by it. Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts, offers this view:

"No management could have saved us, for we were defeated by a public feeling of alarm evoked by the high price panic. Time alone can show the real effect of the McKinley bill. The bill is on trial. I think it will be of help to the general prosperity of the country. If the opinion is well founded the Republicans will profit by the result and all the more from the reaction which a defeat on false ground always produces. If the Democrats are right, then we have received the reward of our misdoing somewhat early, that is all."

To all this there is but one answer. If these things have happened in the green wood what may be looked for in the dry? If a threat of high prices has worked so much mischief what will the high prices do when they come? And they may soon be here. The $40,000,000 worth of goods hurried over from Europe in anticipation of the higher duties of the bill and thrown on the market have swamped it. Until that surplus is worked off there will be no advance. The Republican Congressmen who foisted the bill on the country had on their side in the late contest the fact that while Democrats were saying prices had gone up they had not budged. But every storekeeper, without distinction of party, told his customers, male and female, that prices would rise on dutiable goods, especially prices of clothing, after the stocks on hand were worked off. Nor are the storekeepers mistaken in this. Unless European manufacturers will sell goods here more cheaply than in other countries the importers who handle their goods will have to charge more to the extent of the higher duties. The domestic manufacturer will thereby be enabled to charge more if he chooses. In the case of woolens he will have to, for the duty on the raw material—wool—has been increased. Each domestic manufacturer will charge as much as the trust he belongs to fixes as the price, or competition, when he doesn't belong to a trust will permit.

Therefore, as the weeks and months go by, the prices of goods, both foreign and domestic, will advance. Every week the purchaser will notice that something is a little higher and will curse those who passed the bill. Finally in a year or so prices and the curses at the McKinley bill and the Congressmen who voted for it will reach the maximum.

So if the election were to be held a year hence instead of now there is good reason to believe it would result even more disastrously, and that those Congressmen who have just escaped by meager pluralities would be elected with the others to stay at home. To put it in a mathematical form: If the fear of high prices cost the Republicans seventy seats in the Northern States, how many would the unwelcome presence of high prices pressing on the earnings of every consumer cost them?

Therefore is it not wise to cast an anchor to windward—to do something to prevent future disasters? Sixteen years ago Congress passed the salary grab. As soon as the members discovered, as they did at the ensuing election, what the people thought of that job they hurried to repeal it. The people have with even greater positiveness set the seal of their disapproval on certain tariff schedules which must inevitably raise the prices of the goods covered by them.

The duty of the Republicans is plain. At the short session, soon to begin, they should strike out the obnoxious schedules. They should put the wool duty back where it was, or, better still, take it off the coarse mixing wools altogether. They should free the minds of the people from this fear of high prices of clothing before the high prices have struck them. They also should give Mr. Blaine a fair chance to secure enlarged markets and let him have the sugar duties for trading purposes. He will do the best he can with the shadow of his plan which was given him, but let him carry out his ideas fully in his own way and the Farmers' Alliances will begin to dissolve.

If this is done at the short session the issue in the contest of 1892 will be between moderate protection with reciprocity in non-competing goods on the one side and Democratic free trade in manufactures with Europe on the other. On such an issue the Republicans can make a united and successful fight. But if the issue is to be the maintenance of immoderate protection and prices climbing higher and higher the result surely will be disastrous to the Republicans in 1892. Are the men who passed the mischievous McKinley bill and caused such a fearful defeat in 1890 prepared to take the responsibility of causing a greater one in 1892? Is it not better for them to admit what is patent to the eyes of all, that they made a bad mistake, and get back into popular favor as speedily as possible by undoing their blunder?

Fifty Spasms a Day.

Had Mrs. H. A. Gardner, of Vistula, Ind., lived two thousand years ago she would have been thout to be possessed by evil spirits. She was subject to nervous prostration, headaches, dizziness, backache, palpitation and forty tofifty spasms a day. Though having been treated by eight physicians for years without success, she was permanently cured by one bottle of Dr. Miles' Nervine. A trial bottle of this new and wonderful medicine, and a finely illustrated treatise free at Baker & Halls Drug store, who recomends and guarntees it.

The Wonderful Work of the Liver.

There are many kinds of billiousness. The liver is an organ on whose working much happiness or misery depends. In its many wonderful and dark recesses it carries on the manufacture of bile. It exerts an almost magical effect on every particle of our food, turns into blood what is available for that purpose and sends away for dismissal from the system such poisonous elements as are taken in with the food or formed from it by imperfect digestion. Brooks' Kidney and Liver Syrup cures every variety of billiousness restores the liver to proper working order, regulates the secretion of the bile, and puts the digestive organs in condition to do their best work. WHY!

WHEREFORE.

The virtues or merits of a remedy for pain do not consist in its being as good for relief as other remedies, but in the fact that it is better, in being more prompt and sure, and therefore the best for the specific purpose. It is not an idle catchline that strikes the eye thus:

ST. JACOBS OIL

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR PAIN,

IS THE BEST.

It is the best cure for all aches and pains, and it holds

THE TRUE PROOF.

To this specific fact Archbishops, Bishops, Clergymen, Lawyers, Doctors, Governors, Generals, Senators, Members of Congress and Legislatures, U. S. Consuls, Army and Navy Officers Mayors and Officials, testify and unite in saying: "We suffered pain; and St. Jacobs Oil cured promptly and permanently." For the same reason finds what he seeks and needs, is not deceived and will have it at any price.

OTHER REMEDIES FAILED,

SEEN IN ENGLAND.

THE M'KINLEY TARIFF AND ENGLISH TRADE.

Ex-Consul Hale Gives His Views on England and the McKinley Bill—It Will Help England in the Long Run—Why We Wear Shoddy.

Mr. E. J. Hale, who was President Cleveland's consul at Manchester, England, has recently returned to America, and has given expression to his observations in England on the subject of our trade relations with that country. What he saw there has led him to the conviction that a high protective tariff is the worst possible thing for us. This conviction is the result of an earnest study of the English people and their industrial life.

When Mr. Hale went to England he was much surprised to find that the British manufacturers favored the adoption of a high protective tariff in the United States. When he asked of Sir Joseph C. Lee an explanation of this fact that gentleman replied that a high protective tariff in the United States simply released to the manufacturers of Great Britain all the neutral markets of the world. This was a sufficient reason for the British manufacturers to desire a continuation of the high protective tariff policy in the United States.

This view is also shared by Mr. Gladstone, who recently said that "protection, although it might inflict incidental collateral blows on other countries, did far greater mischief to the people of the country which adopted such a policy, and whose people it plundered and defrauded."

Mr. Hale says there is no doubt that the greatest market in the world for our food products is the English market. This opinion is fully justified by the fact that more than half of all our exports go to England. On the other hand only about one-fourth of our imports come from that country. In view of these facts how foolish is the attempt of our high protectionists to shut out English imports from our markets, fancying that "England's loss is our gain."

Speaking of our trade relations with England Mr. Hale asks: "Does it not stand to reason that the more of her products England sells to us the more money she will have to pay for our products? In the trade of the world it is not gold, but the products of countries, that are interchanged. The American people lose in the English markets just so far as the trade between the two countries is restricted. The United States buys in the dearest markets in the world and sells in the cheapest, and its people consequently suffer; that is, the masses of the people suffer for the benefit of a privileged class."

We frequently hear about the "pauper labor" of England. On this subject Mr. Hale says: "We have heard a great deal at various times about the terrible condition of wage earners and mill operatives in England, and these alleged hardships have been attributed to the free trade policy of Great Britain. This is all nonsense. As a matter of fact, operatives in free trade England earn better wages and work a less number of hours than do the workmen in Germany, Austria or France, all of which are protected countries. Let us take for example the consular district of Manchester. In this district are 5,000,000 people, and they are the best clothed and the happiest people I ever saw. They work shorter hours, have more holidays, undergo less deprivation and suffer less distress than any other people. Every man of them lives in his own little house and has his own fireside. There is no community in America that can compare to this in the comfort and happiness of its people."

In this country there is so much talk about "British free traders" that we are apt to suppose that all Englishmen are free traders. Mr. Hale found that this was not the case. He says: "There is a certain kind of protectionists in England. They are agriculturists and land owners, who demand protection against our food products in English markets. They are called 'fair traders' over there, and they reverse the conditions of protection in this country. To this class Mr. Cleveland's message while he was president was a blow. His defeat was their restoration. With him as president and with tariff reform as the policy of his administration they could not successfully combat our food products in the English markets. But with high protection in America 'fair traders' are fortified in their battle against our food products. The free trader in England favors the importation of our food products into English markets because he can feed himself more cheaply by such importation, just as the American laborer could feed and clothe himself more cheaply if this country were to reduce the tariff or abolish it."

The protectionists in England, then, are the people who are opposed to trading with us. Naturally these "fair traders" are much pleased with the McKinley bill, since the tendency of that measure is to narrow our market for breadstuffs in England. Speaking of the McKinley bill Mr. Hale has this to say: "It suits the English manufacturer because it leaves him without American competition in the neutral markets of the world, and it suits the English 'fair traders' because it gives them grounds for opposing the presence of American food products in English markets. Incidentally I may say that during my five years' residence in England I found that opposition to Mr. Cleveland and his policy was confined to Tories. He was always popular with the Liberals."

It has been frequently observed that the clothing made from American made cloth is not so durable as that made from English cloth. Mr. Hale got some light on this subject in England. He found that the free wool of the world gave English manufacturers the power to produce good woolen cloth much cheaper than we can, and there is less temptation to use shoddy. As Mr. Hale says: "Under a high protective tariff the manufacturer can be careless in manufacturing because he knows that he can always sell poor and shoddy clothing, and as long as he is assured of this he will refuse to make better clothing. If he were forced into competition with the rest of the world he would manufacture good clothing, and the consumer would be benefited."

During Mr. Hale's stay abroad he made a visit to India, where he found that English cotton mill machinery was being imported rapidly into that country, and the manufacture of cotton was going forward by leaps and bounds, although India has no protection whatever against England. Mr. Hale points out a similar condition of things in our own country, where the cotton mills of the south are multiplying with astonishing rapidity without any protection against New England. The same thing is true of the southern iron industry which has developed itself so enormously in competition with its powerful rival Pennsylvania.

Wanted—Consistency.

Protectionists find it impossible to be consistent. McKinley can talk in the same speech about foreigners paying the tariff tax and also about saving the people useless taxation by removing a duty like that on sugar.

The Republican congressional committee has now "taken the cake" for talk of that kind. It issued about the time the McKinley bill was passed a most remarkable document on that most remarkable bill. The headlines of one section of it are in big letters. "The Tariff Not a Tax—At All Events, Not Upon the American Consumer." Under this heading the author starts out by saying: "Among the reckless assertions of the free traders oftenest met with is the statement that the tariff is a tax upon the consumer. Of course it is, and then again, of course it isn't. A revenue tariff undoubtedly taxes the consumer; a protective tariff has precisely the opposite effect."

In another part of the pamphlet the writer speaks of "a protective duty, which is often wholly, and always largely, paid by the exporter;" and immediately after this he says: "By its additions to the free list, then, the Republican party has left in the people's pockets a sum which last year amounted to more than $65,000,000, and has opened our ports to merchandise—upon which the American consumer has heretofore been paying a tax—which was last year imported to the value of $365,406,000. This is nearly 50 per cent. of the total importation, and is 10 per cent. greater than the face importation provided in the Mills bill."

In other words, where duties are removed the G. O. P. wants full credit for "leaving in the people's pockets" the tax they have been paying; but where duties are increased the people are not hurt, for there the foreigner will kindly step in and pay the tax! The best answer to that kind of nonsense is to be found in the higher prices which the people are now paying for many articles.

For example, here is such a practical answer: "Prices have been advanced on hundreds of articles in our trade. The principal advances are made in French prunes, raisins, macaroni and all canned goods. The increase in price ranges from 10 to 15 per cent., and can be attributed to the McKinley bill." The man who said that is a representative of the great New York firm of wholesale grocers, Thurber, Whyland & Co. Mr. Thurber himself is a noted protectionist; he ought to be free from The New York Tribune's imputation of making new duties the pretext for extortion.

The Gospel Against Cheapness.

The new doctrine of the protectionist leaders that cheapness is not a thing to be desired received a crushing blow on Nov. 4. In order that that doctrine may have the fullest possible publicity these germs of protectionist wisdom on that subject are here reproduced. Perhaps some wicked Democrat will wish to keep this rare collection for purposes of reference in 1892, to see whether the new school of protectionist statesmen will stick to their doctrine that dearness is better than cheapness.

Here are the words of the wise:

I cannot find myself in full sympathy with this demand for cheaper coats, which seems to me necessarily to involve a cheaper man and woman under the coats.—Benjamin Harrison, in an Address at Chicago in 1888.

Cheap! I never liked the word. "Cheap" and "nasty" go together. This whole system of cheap things is a badge of poverty, for cheap merchandise means cheap men, and cheap men mean a cheap country, and that is not the kind our fathers builded. Furthermore, it is not the kind their sons mean to maintain.—William McKinley, Jr., at Kalamazoo, Oct. 14, 1890.

The curse of cheapness! The vulture loves his carrion not more than the free trader longs for cheapness.—Bulletin of the Protective Tariff League, Oct. 17, 1890.

The attainment of cheapness of commodities is not the best purpose of the protective system.—The Manufacturer, Organ of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Club, Oct. 16, 1890.

Cheapness is the fetich of the Englishman. Let us then have done with this cheapness and with its advocacy.—Henry Carey Baird in Philadelphia, Oct. 16, 1890.

We want no return to cheap times in our own country. Where merchandise is cheapest men are poorest.—William McKinley, Jr., in House of Representatives, May 7, 1890.

Into this struggle for cheapness the Republican party does not propose to enter.—Julius C. Burrows in House of Representatives, May 8, 1890.

These are the choicest texts from the new gospel; let protectionists paste them in their hats in order to fortify their faith when called on to pay "McKinley prices."

The figure 9 in our dates will make a long stay. No man or woman now living will ever date a document without using the figure 9. It stands in the third place in 1890, where it will remain ten years and then move up to second place in 100 where it will rest for one hundred years.

There is another "9" which has also come to stay. It is unlike the figure 9 in our dates in the respect that it has already moved up to first place, where it will permanently remain. It is called the "No 9" High Arm Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine.

The "No. 9" was endorsed for first place by the experts of Europe at the Paris Exposition of 1889, where, after a severe contest with the leading machines of the world, it was awarded the only Grand Prize given to family sewing machines, all others on exhibit having received lower awards of gold medals, etc. The French Government also recognized its superiority by the decoration of Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, President of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor.

The "No. 9" is not an old machine improved upon, but is an entirely new machine, and the Grand Prize at Paris was awarded it as the grandest advance in sewing machine mechanism of the age. Those who buy it can rest assured, therefore, of having the very latest and best.

"Seeing is Believing."

And the best lamp ever made, like Aladdin's of old, a "wonderful lamp!" A lamp absolutely non-explosive and unbreakable, which gives a clear, soft, brilliant white light of 85 candle power! Purer and brighter than gas light, softer than electric light, more cheerful than either! That lamp is

"The Rochester."

And with it there is no smoke, no smell, no broken chimneys, no flickering, no sweating, no climbing up of the flame, no "tantrums" nor annoyance of any kind, and it never needs trimming. Its founts (oil reservoirs) being tough rolled seamless brass, with central draft, it is absolutely unbreakable, and as safe as a tallow candle.

Only five years old, and over two million of these lamps in use. It must be a GOOD lamp to make such a telling success. Indeed it is, for lamps may come and lamps may go, but the "Rochester" shines on forever! We make over 2,000 artistic varieties,—Hanging and Table Lamps, Banquet, Study, Vase and Piano Lamps,—every kind, in Bronze, Porcelain, Brass, Nickel and Black Wrought Iron.

Ask the lamp dealer for it. Look for the trade-mark stamp: "THE ROCHESTER." If he hasn't the genuine Rochester and the style you want, or if no lamp-store is near, send to us for free illustrated catalogue (and reduced price-list), and we will box and send you any lamp safely by express, right to your door.

If you write and mention this paper, will tell you how to get one for nothing. Address Retail Department of Rochester Lamp Co., 87 Barclay Street, New York.

DR. ERASMUS MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

"Seeing is Believing." KING OF THE BLOOD

The Most Thorough Purifier of the Blood Yet Discovered.

It purifies the Blood.
It invigorates the Liver.
It regulates the Bowels.
It strengthens the stomach.
It gives vivacity in place of lassitude; cheerfulness in place of gloom, and robust vigor in place of debility.

Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Disordered Liver, Constipation, Nervous Affections, General Debility, in short all the numerous diseases and discomforts caused by impure blood are speedily conquered by this powerful corrector, the chief and sovereign of all ancient or modern medical discoveries—KING OF THE BLOOD.

Its name is its best description as it is a royal dispenser of the blessings of health and vanquishes the foes that lurk in the blood.

It banishes PIMPLES, SALT RHEUM, SCALY ERUPTIONS, ULCERS, SCALD HEAD, FEVER SORES and all SCROFULOUS DISORDERS.

It checks CONSUMPTION in its early stages. It has frequently cured it when advanced.

It disperses TUMORS and CANCERS without the Surgeon's knife.

It cures DROPSY, general or partial.

It cures FEMALE WEAKNESS and DISEASE.

It reduces in a safe and effectual manner all swellings, external or internal.

It eradicates the effects of Venerial Disease and Mineral Poisons and establishes a sound constitution.

Many certificates, much further information and full directions following, will be found in the pamphlet, "Treatise on Diseases of the Blood," in which each bottle is enclosed.

Price $1 per bottle or 6 bottles for 12 ounces, or 50 doses. Sold by dealers in medicine.

If your druggist does not happen to have it on hand, request him to order a supply of it for you and you will be cheaper than for you to order direct of us, and less trouble.

An Eye For Futures.

The old family physician has come to make a friendly call and is surprised to find the young wife in tears.

"Why, my dear child, what is the matter?"

"Oh," she sobs, "Algie looks so sick, and I've tried and tried to get him to talk to you about it, for I know you'd persuade him to do the right thing; but he says there's plenty of time, and he won't take any care of himself, and I'm so blue!"

"There, there!" says the old friend, much touched at this exhibition of wifely devotion; "I'll call around at his office and get him to talking, and then advise him what to take to build him up."

"Take! Oh, doctor, I want you to get him to promise to have his life insured for twenty thousand dollars."—Judge.

American Credentials.

Anxious Mother—My dear, does that young man who comes to see you belong to a good family?

Daughter—Yes, ma. He comes of old colonial stock, dating way back to the Mayflower.

Mother—I am delighted to hear that. But are you sure of that?

Daughter—Yes, indeed. You ought to hear him cough.—Pittsburgh Press.

An Interruption.

Uncle Si—Wa-al; ye kin gimme a room on the first floor. I don't want t' risk sp'ilin' your rope!—Puck.

A Warning to Bachelors.

"Is there nothing capable of exciting your enthusiasm?"

"No! I am sorry to say I once felt enthusiastic about something, and eight weeks afterwards that something became my wife!"—Jury.

HE TOOK IT HARD.

The Straw That Broke the Poor Fellow's Confidence in Himself.

My room in a Virginia hotel was a large one, and the bed stood in the middle of it. As I lay on my right side I faced two windows opening out on a veranda. At one o'clock in the morning a sudden draught of air awoke me up from a sound sleep. It was bright moonlight, and a man had just entered one of the windows. I carefully lifted my hand and clutched the revolver under my pillow, and then I waited to see what the intruder would do. He kept perfectly quiet for five minutes, and then tiptoed over and took up my trousers. There wasn't over thirty cents in change in the pockets. He then tried to open my trunk, but it was locked. He picked up my coat and vest, but I had removed every thing. He stood for awhile as if in doubt, and then started to come to the bed.

"Want any thing?" I asked, as I covered him with the pistol and sat up in bed.

"Oh, shucks!" he exclaimed, as he sat down on a chair.

"Who are you?"

"Nobody nor nothin'! I hain't fitten fur hogs. If I knowed any thing, I'd hev pizened myself last year."

"You seem to take it hard, old fellow."

"Can't help it. Every thing I go into busts up on me. I've busted a sawmill, a sand bank, a yoke of oxen, a tobacco crop, and a saloon, and I was in hopes to get cl'ar of the county when this had to happen. Git up 'n tote me off to jail, and finish me up, fur I hain't fitten to be around alone."

I talked with him awhile, and, finding him down on his luck, I let him out by the window and closed it after him, giving him two dollars to start the world anew on.

"I'll try it, stranger," he said as he climbed out, "but I shall look fur a bust up. When a feller hain't fitten with fittenness, then he hain't, and all the fitten he kin do won't git him proper fittenness. Good-night."—N. Y. Sun.

A Pig Sticker Stuck.

Here's a true story of the Princess Engelichieff, who has been in Chicago, says the Brooklyn Standard. Not long ago that beautiful Russian lady attended a reception given at the Calumet Club. She was regal in old satin and gold jewels and was escorted by one of the handsomest officers of the club.

In the old settlers' room the portrait of Long John Wentworth was pointed out to her. Now, the late Mr. Wentworth was far from spirituelle, and at the first glance the Princess, with a little start, exclaimed, looking at a circle of friends:

"Do show me a pig-sticker! I have heard so much about the Chicago pig-sticker."

The gentleman flushed a little, there was an "audible silence" and her hostess replied:

"Princess, you are on the arm of one."

Art Note.

Livingston Snobberly is a distinguished New York amateur artist, who got his picture into a New York gallery. A sarcastic friend met Snobberly a few days afterward, and said:

"I was in the art gallery yesterday. By Jove! I saw such a big crowd. I spent half an hour before your picture. Yours was the only one I looked at."

"Ah, thanks, thanks. Quite complimentary. But why didn't you look at the rest?"

"Well, you see, there were crowds of people in front of all the other pictures, but there was nobody in front of yours except myself."—Texas Siftings.

Genius in the Kitchen.

Bagley (to newly-imported servant)—You never saw a lobster before, did you, Bridget?

Bridget—Shure, an' Oi've seen hundreds av the red things shwimmin' in the creeks av the old counthry.

Bagley—But lobsters are green, Bridet, before they are put in boiling water.

Bridget (not to be put down)—Shure, an' there's boilin' shprings roight in the creeks, sor.—Judge.

His Judgment Was Warped.

She—What do you think of this lace, John?

He—How much did it cost?

She—Ten cents a yard.

He—O, it is bewilderingly beautiful. How much more exquisite it is than the expensive kinds you used to buy!—Munsey's Weekly.

He Daren't at Home.

Wickwire—No; I don't think domestic troubles ought to be spoken of outside the family.

N. Peck—Great Scott! Isn't a man to be allowed to unburden his mind at all?—Indianapolis Journal.

"Well, the way you count your years you must have been about eight yourself at the time."—Harper's Bazar.

AMONG THE RUINS OF ANCIENT ROME.

The Baths of Diocletian—Baths of Caracalla—The Coliseum—The Forum—The Palaces of the Cæsars—The Catacombs—The Appian Way—The Tomb of Seneca.

Modern Rome has a population of upwards of four hundred thousand inhabitants. It is surrounded by a wall built sixteen hundred years ago. This wall is fourteen miles in circumference and is fifty-five feet in height. It has twelve gates. The modern city of Rome occupies about one-third of the enclosed space. No other city of ancient or modern times contains ruins more interesting to the visitor than are located within these walls.

It was the dream of my school-boy days, the oft-repeated wish of maturer years, to visit Rome; and these hopes were realized upon landing at the station, situated only a short distance from the remains of the baths of Diocletian, which were so extensive that three thousand ladies and gentlemen might daily enjoy the luxuries of the bath.

In another part of the city is situated the ruins of the baths of Caracalla, which bear evidence at the present date of the luxury and grandeur of the Roman baths. Here the warm or cold bath could be taken. In another direction the lusty Roman might indulge in a swimming bath. There is still remaining the ruins of the immense furnaces that were required for heating the water for this bathing establishment which has no superior in modern times. The ancient Romans practiced bathing, probably more than the inhabitants of modern Rome.

The most interesting ruins of ancient Rome is the Coliseum. This was the theatre of the Roman people. Your readers may have some idea of the magnitude of the Coliseum from the fact that it would seat eighty thousand persons, and yet there would be standing room for twenty thousand more.

The inhabitants of Toledo and Adrian could attend the Coliseum of an evening and still there would be ample room for the people of Tecumseh. A portion of the wall of the Coliseum remains entire, showing the height of the building, the great thickness of the walls and the durability of Roman brick. Here was where real tragedy was performed. Gladiators fought with each other and with wild animals. The prison still remains from which Christians were taken, and thrown into the arena, and there torn to pieces by wild animals and devoured by them. Occasionally the arena would be flooded with water and a fierce naval battle would take place. All this was done for the amusement of ladies and gentlemen of eighteen hundred years ago.

We proceeded from the Coliseum along the Via Sacra, or sacred road, leaving Nero's tower on the right, and examining the quarters of the Pretorian guards on the left, until we arrived at the ancient Forum, which is only about ten minutes walk from the theatre, or Coliseum. The Forum, in an early day, was a marshy valley situated between the Palatine and Capitoline Hills. It was the battle ground between the Sabines and the Romans. It afterwards became the seat of government that ruled the world. The floor of the Forum is in a good state of preservation. Columns of ruined temples stand here and there. Here was the scene of some of the most interesting events in the history of mankind. It was in this Forum that Cicero and Cæsar delivered many of their orations, and we were on the very spot where Mark Antony delivered his celebrated oration on the death of Cæsar.

Separated from the Forum by a mere pathway is the Mamertine prison, whose sombre appearance signifies the character of the building. It has a history dating back to the early kings of Rome. It was here that Jugurtha, king of Numedia, was slain, and here St. Peter was imprisoned.

Bidding farewell to the Forum, we ascended the Palatine Hill, where is pointed out a portion of the old wall of Romulus, and also a cave where Romulus was suckled by a she-wolf. This story of course is mythical.

Continuing our walk along the Palatine Hill, and only a short distance from the wall of Romulus, we came to the Tarpeian Rock. It was from this rock that the Romans disposed of a certain class of criminals, by dashing them to the ground below. The distance was sufficient to destroy life; and it certainly was a ready method of disposing of criminals. On the Palatine Hill were built the palaces of the Cæsars, which are now one vast ruin, but there is sufficient of them remaining to indicate the magnitude of these palaces. We entered the house of Livy and also an old school-house, which doubtless contained mischievous children before Christ was born; they were, however, too damp and cold to tarry long. We quenched our thirst at an old fountain in the palace of Caligula, only a short distance from the hall where the cruel tyrant was assassinated more than eighteen hundred years ago.

It is sometimes interesting to travel over an old road, and therefore we engaged a carriage to take a drive along the old Appian Way, which was built 312 years B. C. Roman armies had frequently marched along this road on their way to conquer distant nations. Victorious armies, laden with the spoils of vanquished nations, dragging in chains their numerous prisoners, entered Rome by this road. St. Paul, perchance, tired and dusty (as we were), entered the Eternal City by this road.

Proceeding leisurely on our way through the St. Sebastian gate, and about a mile beyond, we stopped to examine the Catacombs of St. Calixtus. Having registered our names, paid our fee, and following our guide, an old monk, each with a lighted taper descended by means of stone steps until we came to a hall, some twenty or thirty feet below the surface. On each side of this hall shelves are cut out of the hard volcanic earth, and on these shelves the Christians of an early day buried, or more properly stating the fact, laid their dead bodies. Continuing still further along this hall little chapels will be seen where Christians worshipped when Rome was pagan and Christians were persecuted. Certainly these early Christians were faithful followers of their Master. The temperature of the Catacombs is that of an extremely cold cellar and the visitor who has just left a burning sun for this region, soon finds it prudent to retrace his steps, and return to a warmer climate. It is estimated that all the Catacombs combined would extend to the distance of nine hundred miles and that seven millions of people have been buried in them.

Bidding adieu to the Catacombs and our old guide, the monk, we proceeded on our journey along the Appian Way, passing several tombs, the most noted of these being the tombs of the Scipios. When about four miles from the city we came to the tomb of Seneca, which we examined and found in a good state of preservation, although eighteen centuries have gone by since it was erected. J. F. JENKINS.

IN MEMORIAM.

At twenty minutes past seven on the morning of Nov. 5th, 1890, Mary, the wife of Mr. Philip Kehoe, departed this life at the age of 55 years, eight months and 2 days. The deceased was a daughter of Andrew and Ann McGovern of Macon Mich, and the eldest of a family of nine children, only three of whom now survive. For eight long years she has been a patient sufferer from a disease of the nervous system, and during the last few years of her illness has been almost childlike in her helplessness; yet in all that time she was never heard to murmur, but accepted it with a firm resignation. Though her attention was almost wholly absorbed in her family and home duties yet she was a charitable and sympathetic neighbor as well as a generous and cheerful giver, no stranger being ever known to leave her door hungry or empty handed.

Though we who have been left behind sadly mourn her loss, yet we feel thankful to our Heavenly Father for his mercies toward us in removing her so slowly and gently from our midst, and making it less hard to say, "Thy will be done."

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is still;
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.
God, in his wisdom has recalled
The boon his love had given,
And though the body slumbers here,
The soul is safe in Heaven.

WEDDING BELLS.

The foremost social event of the season took place at the cozy residence of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Perkins in this village, on Wednesday, when our popular young dentist, Fred A. Kotts and to the hymeneal alter their estimable and accomplished daughter Minnie Adele. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Geo. H. Wallace of Plymouth, in the presence of a company of relatives and intimate friends. A wealth of beautiful presents, ornamental and useful, were presented to the bridal party by their legion of friends. Amid a shower of rice and the best wishes for long and happy lives, Mr. and Mrs. Kotts took the Ypsilanti train for a short bridal tour and visit with friends at Pontiac and Toledo.

The foregoing is clipped from last weeks Manchester Enterprise. The doctor's numerous friends here will unite with the HERALD in extending their heartfelt congratulations to the happy couple.

THE OVIDE MUSIN CONCERT.

This Concert troupe, composed of five members, is one of the best now traveling. Ovide Musin, the great violin virtuoso, is the leader. He is ably supported by Annie Louise Tanner, the American nightingale, Inez Parmater, an eminent mezzo soprano, Karl Storr, the German baritone, and Eduard Scharf, a superior solo pianist.

From a large number of press notices we select a few, showing how the troup has been received elsewhere. M. Musin received an ovation at every appearance. He is a masterful performer, more brillant and vigorous than Sarasati. His execution is perfect. He gave as his opening number "Variations on Hadyn's Theme," which brought forth a storm of applause. The "Moise Prayer and Souvenir Variations," produced on single string, was an exquisite rendering that was also enthusiastically recognized.—Louisville Courier Journal.

A good-sized audience assembled at the Academy of Music last night in spite of the young blizzard, the attraction being M. Ovide Musin's first concert of the present season. The concert was not only enjoyable, but in many respects remarkable. M. Musin is, of course, a popular favorite, and his work is too well known to require praise, but it may be said that he has rarely been heard in better form. He played the Medelssohn concerto in E minor, a Caprice de Concert of his own composition, and in response to numerous recalls his own Mazurka Caprice, and for his second response his Carnival variations.—New York World.

The violin playing of Ovide Musin is worth the price of admission, and his brilliant performance on a violin of one string surpassed anything of the kind ever heard here. The character of the entertainment was fine and the number of auditors small.—Houston, Texas, Post.

I use Ayer's Cherry Pectoral freely in my practice, and recommend it in cases of Whooping Cough among children, having found it more certain to relieve that troublesome disease than any other medicine I know of."—So says Dr. Bartlett, of Concord, Mass.

The reason druggists find Dr. Craig's Kidney and Liver Cure such a saleable article is that it is infallible.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

We want some wood right off.

Patronize the Ladies' Fair to-morrow.

Get ready for the Musin Concert on Saturday evening, Dec. 13th.

Get ready for the War Concert which will be along this way week after next.

Reserved Seats for the Milk Maids' Convention will be on sale at Adamson's. Twenty cents.

Most of the Tecumseh students at the Normal came home to enjoy Thanksgiving turkey.

Anderson & Co. have put in a new furnace of large capacity which will heat their three stores very nicely.

Dr. D. J. Dewey of Washington, Iowa, is spending about ten days among his old Tecumseh acquaintances.

Miss Cora Hewitt, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. M. S. Hendershot, for the past three weeks, has returned to her home in Brooklyn.

The Frisky O'Leary Cow will be on exhibition at the Milkmaids' Convention, to be held at the Opera House Thursday evening, Dec. 11.

Come out to the Milkmaids' Convention at the Opera House Thursday evening, Dec. 11, and see the famous O'Leary Cow. Tickets only 15 cents.

The Tecumseh Coal & Mfg. Co. have put electric lights in their planing mill. These incandescent lights are the model lamps for shops and factories.

Thanksgiving services were held at St. Peter's Church by the Episcopal congregation at the usual hour of morning service, a good audience participating.

Martin Westcott of Van Buren Co. is spending two or three weeks with friends and relatives in Tecumseh. He attended school here when a boy, but went west in 1849.

Eli Gray and party returned from their hunting expedition last Saturday. They had a good time boarding at a hotel at $2 per day but they did not return overloaded with game.

The Ann Arbor Argus came out last week with a brand new suit of clothes and it looks too handsome for anything. The Argus marches at the head of the procession in Washtenaw Co.

Emmons Sherd of Leslie was visiting old Tecumseh friends last week. He left here seven years ago last spring and has been prospering since on a 140 acre farm, located five miles from Leslie.

E. Hause seems to be doing a driving business in real estate, having sold another house and lot in the village and closed the sale last week of the Monaghan farm of 386 acres to Ben Lamkin of Franklin.

A new time card went into force last week on both the Lake Shore and Mackinaw roads. The principal change is in the freight trains, the passenger trains running substantially the same as heretofore.

Thanksgiving was more generally observed in Tecumseh than usual. Nearly all the stores were closed during the day and nearly all of them in the afternoon. Family parties were numerous and people generally seemed to enjoy the festivities of the day.

The ladies of St Peter's church will hold their annual fair at Armory Hall, Dec. 5th, 1890, afternoon and evening. A large collection of useful and fancy articles for sale, particularly suited for Christmas gifts. Ice cream and cake served during the fair.

Union Thanksgiving services were held at the Presbyterian Church Thursday forenoon. A good congregation was present who listened to a fine discourse from Rev. Frank Arnold. The music was extra fine, having been especially prepared for the occasion.

The revival meetings at the M. E. Church are in progress this week and will close to-morrow evening. Mr. McIntosh has a peculiar fitness for that kind of work and the interest in the meetings has continued unabated throughout. Much good has been done, which will result in a number of additions to the Church.

The Thanksgiving dinner which was served at the Lilley House was probably the most elaborate meal ever served in that hotel. Landlord Patterson surpassed himself and his efforts were rewarded with a large attendance of guests. The menu card was especially attractive and served as a fine souvenir of the dinner.

Harper's Young People for December 2d will be a Christmas number. It will contain Christmas stories by Harriet Prescott Spofford, M. E. M. Davis, Mark Adams, and John E. Coryell, and a Christmas ballad by Margaret E. Sangster. The Rev. Dr. Charles E. Parkhurst will contribute an article on "The Nativity," and the illustrations will be more than usually attractive.

Go and see the Old Chums.

Lots are selling off like hot cakes in the new addition.

Come to see the cow that started the great Chicago fire of '71.

Leonardson & Son of Britton have a new card on the first page.

Heesen & Son have something to say about bargains this week.

Chas. Crossman of Toledo, is the proud father of a ten pound daughter.

Robert Hoy is home from Minneapolis two or three weeks visiting his parents.

Don't forget to attend the Milk Maids' Convention to see the wonderful Cow.

We have lots of new advertisements this week. Our readers should read them all.

Jas. Glasgow, wife and daughter, visited Frank Taylor at Britton a couple of days last week.

Do not forget the Ladies' Fair given by the ladies of St. Peter's church to-morrow afternoon and evening.

The sale of reserved seats for the Musin concert will open at Adamson's book store at 8 oclock, (sun time) Thursday morning, Dec. 11th.

The Old Chums Comedy Company is well worth listening to. They will anpear at the Opera House to-morrow evening. Give them a rousing house.

The Second entertainment of the Tecumseh course will be the Musin Concert to take place Saturday evening, Dec. 13th. Remember the date.

The performances of Annie Louise Tanner were a revelation of power that entitles her to rank among the most distinguished artists upon the concert stage.—N. Y. Herald.

The clerk of the weather has observed the calendar quite closely this fall. He gave us Indian summer in November and sent the first big snow promptly the first week in December

The meeting Tuesday evening to talk over the threshing machine project was adjourned until further notice, as the committee have not yet completed their work, ready to report.

David J. Lewis is engaged in holding revival meetings at Raisin Center and cannot attend to his appointments at Tecumseh at present. The Sabbath evening meetings at the Friends' church are therefore discontinued till further notice.

The effort to secure Pachmann must be responded to immediately or we will lose the opportunity to hear the wonderful Chopin interdreter, as the tour of fifty performances has nearly been arranged for. It is already understood Toledo has failed to secure him.

M. Pachmann presented the Chopin Concerto in F minor, No. 2, with the audience as a successful Chopin interpreter. Chopin, the composer, shone out, the player followed him. the audience was captivated and compelled them to call out Mr. Pachmann seven or eight times.—New York Tribune.

The impression created by the singing of Inez Parmater was of a most pleasing character, many pronouncing her the representative and best singer in Michigan, which by the way was originally her home. Her voice shows power and sweetness of tone combined.—Detroit Evening News.

The first heat at the Tiffany Iron Works was taken last Saturday forenoon. Many of our citizens visited the foundry in the afternoon, expecting to witness it, but the managers had stolen a march on them and the fun was all over before the visitors arrived. Several orders for machines have already been received and a full gang of hands will soon be set to work.

The meetings of the W. C. T. U. are held regularly on Friday of each week at their rooms at 2:30 o'clock, instead of 3 o'clock, as they were formerly. Visitors are always welcome, and especially do we invite the ladies of the town to our Mother's meetings, held the first Friday in each month. Next Friday, Dec. 5th, we hope to have an interesting program and solicit a full attendance.

At a regular meeting of the Royal Arcanum No. 634, Tuesday night, the following officers were elected:

Regent—Dr. W. A. Frost.
Vice Regent—G. H. Tansley.
Orator—E. J. Hollister.
Sec'y—A. S. VanWinkle.
Collector—Wm. Gaston.
Treas.—D. T. Hall.
Chaplain—Horace Westcott.
Guide—Abner Wilson.
Warden—Wm. Westcott.
Sentry—Jas. Mitchell.
Trustee for 3 years—C. A. McNeil.
Representative to Grand Council—J. T. McKinnev.

Go and see the Old Chums at the Opera House to morrow night. We are pleased to announce that the above Company will play a return date in Tecumseh and can assure the people an entertainment far above the general run of companies visiting our town. They have added a number of new features since their last visit. Among them we would make mention of Mr. Johnny Patton, Champion Balance Clog dancer of the world, the holder of six gold medals, and many other features too numerous to mention. We predict for them a full house.

TWO OLD CHUMS.

Seldom has a better and more enjoyable entertainment been listened to in the Albert hall than that presented by Harry Austin's company on Friday evening last. Messrs. Winchell and Field, as the Major and Professor, kept the audience in roars of laughter whenever they appeared, and when they gave their exhibition as catcher and umpire of a base ball game they fairly put many of those present in convulsions. Mr. Winchell as the catcher was simply immense, this act, coupled with the topical song, His funeral's To-morrow, being gems of originality that caused the most uproarious applause. Mr. Austin's specialties on the bells, glasses, etc., were also excellent, and established his reputation as one of the best performers ever seen in Strathroy. The mandolin quartette was likewise a most meritorious performance, and the dancing by Johnny Patten fairly took the house by storm, his balancing act being especially worthy of notice. Altogether the performance was fresh, intensely amusing, and rendered with a dash that was truly refreshing. If the company comes this way again they are sure to attract a full house.—Strathroy Dispatch.

THE DETROIT KIRMESS.

Special rates on all railroads are promised to those desiring to go to Detroit to attend the Kirmess, which is the great social event in the near future in that city. All the leading society ladies are participating in its preparation, which will include, as one of its most attractive features, the dances of twelve different countries, by young ladies in the costumes of those countries. The Kirmess will open at the Detroit Rink on Monday evening, December 8th, and will be continued each afternoon (4 p. m.) and evening (8 p. m.) the remainder of the week, or eleven separate entertainments, each being complete and showing all the dances. The Kirmess is to be given for the benefit of the Woman's Exchange, one of Detroit's Charities, and is to be managed by Miss Margaret McLeager, of New York. A circular of particulars may be secured by addressing the secretary, Mrs. Fitz Hugh Edwards, 530 Woodward avenue, Detroit, Mich.

Prof. F. S. Dewey of Alpena was at the old Cambridge home a day or two last week. He favored the HERALD with a pleasant call last Saturday.

It is to be hoped the people of Tecumseh will support the effort being made to get M. de Pachmann in Tecumseh some time in January. At the close of a performance in one of his New York recitals "a mighty sound of applause shook the house. It was one of the most genuine tributes ever paid any artist and attests the hold that a really perfect thing always takes."—New York Sun.

Riding to Rescue.

Buffalo Bill on a Secret Mission

And Will Seize the Big Indian Chief.

ARMY OFFICIALS FEAR THAT THERE WILL BE TROUBLE

If He Attempts to Arrest the Chief and Send Couriers to Intercept Him—A Wild Ride Through the Plains.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., Dec. 1. — A Standing Rock Agency, N. D., special to the Tribune says: Colonel Cody and Dr. Powell had not been at the agency many hours before the report spread through the agency and garrison that they had come for the specific purpose of arresting Sitting Bull and removing him from the reservation, and about 11 o'clock, accompanied by an interpreter and one or two others, Colonel Cody left the agency for Bull's camp, which they will doubtless reach some time tonight. It appears that trouble is anticipated in case the arrest is attempted, and the military people at Fort Yates, adjoining this agency are busily engaged making preparations for a campaign, although as quietly as possible. The troops of the eighth cavalry F and G, are getting in readiness to take the field at a moment's notice. Ammunition sufficient for an extended campaign and rations for ten days have been issued to the troops and all preparations made for a movement at any moment, day or night. It really begins to look like war just now, but it is hoped and believed that such a calamity will be averted. Information is obtained that the commanding officer of the post has received instructions from General Miles to take steps to postpone the arrest of Sitting Bull for the present. Maj-Major McLaughlin anticipated just such an order and sent two couriers out on the road toward Bull's Camp, one to take a station at a point ten miles and the other twenty miles out, so that when the news came a courier from here would be immediately dispatched with orders to Buffalo Bill to not attempt to make any arrest. The couriers are at this writing flying over the prairie as fast as their little ponies can carry them in order, if possible, to catch Buffalo Bill, who was six hours the start of them, before he reaches Bull's Camp. If they catch him, all will be well. Couriers who arrived from Bull's Camp last night reported dancing going on but everything quiet and orderly.

The Ghost Dance Resumed.

PINE RIDGE AGENCY, S. D., Dec. 1.—Plenty Bear, an old time friendly Indian, who lives at Wounded Knee, twenty-five miles northeast of here, came in last evening with an alarming report to Agent Royer. He stated there were 364 lodges, being over 2,000 Indians, at Wounded Knee, and they had resumed the ghost dance with many warlike accompaniments, and swearing vengeance upon the whites for conspiring to stop the ghost dance. They have taken an oath to resist interference, if it costs the last drop of their heart's blood. It was further stated by Plenty Bear that the Indians were burning the houses of settlers and stealing stock, and great loads of recently slaughtered beef were coming in every hour.

GHOST DANCING HAS CEASED.

General Morgan Says There Is No Possibility of an Outbreak.

ARKANSAS CITY, KAS., Dec. 1.—General T. J. Morgan, United States commissioner of Indian affairs, is in the city. He has just returned from an extended tour over the reservations of the various tribes of Indians in Indian Territory, having visited the chiefs of the following tribes: The Wichitas, Apaches, Comanches, Arapahoes, Cheyennes, Caddoes, Poncas, Otoes, Missouris, Iowas, Osages Kaws. He says the ghost dancing has closed in the territory and that there is absolutely no possibility of an outbreak.

DISSATISFIED FARMERS.

British Agriculturists do Not Like the Tithes Bill.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—The British cabinet are much concerned at the reports from their party managers of dissatisfaction with the Tithes bill. Landlords complain that whatever relief the clergy obtain from difficulty with the farmers will be at their expense. The clergy alone are friendly to the bill, because they think it will relieve them from demands for reduction on the ground of agricultural distress and from the religious objections of non-conformists. But it is the farmers who give rise to political anxiety in the government.

Without the farmers, the government could not hold a seat in the southern and midland counties, and the farmers grumble that the bill does nothing for them except to impose a new liability to ejectment, and that it deprives them of that claim on the person which is now often effectual to obtain a reduction or delay. But their strongest complaint is that the bill does nothing to revise the increase or modify the burden of the tithes. With no reason assigned, tithe is sometimes eight shillings on one side of a hedge and two shillings on the other. Then the farmers can not see how a tithe computed upon the prices of forty years ago can be equitable now. The bill is not at all popular with the Tory county members.

From Pulpit to Pen.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 1.—The Rev. Simon P. Anderson, an educated and distinguished divine, has for six years been pastor of the Central Baptist, the aristocratic negro church of this city. A year ago he drew from the bank funds belonging to the church to the amount of nearly $1,300 forging the signature of the church clerk to checks. Saturday he was convicted of forgery and sentenced to five years in the penitentiary.

Steamer Runs Ashore.

VICTORIA, B. C., Dec. 1.—During a dense fog the steamer Costa Rica ran ashore near Rae Rocks light at the southeast end of Vancouver Island. The fog was too thick to send assistance and no particulars of the wreck can be learned. The steamer is owned by R. Dunsmuir & Sons and was bound to San Francisco with a cargo of coal.

DROPPED DEAD.

Tragic Ending of a Sensational Arrest at Louisville.

LOUISVILLE, KY., Dec. 1.—Thomas Mann, a police officer, and Martin Kane, a hack driver, became involved in a quarrel about the pending mayoralty election. Kane assaulted the policeman, took the latter's club from him and used it on the officer. Mann followed Kane into a saloon, where he had fled and shot him, inflicting a fatal wound. Mann then surrendered to Officer Birch Puff. On their way to the station house Puff dropped dead on the street, and Mann proceeded to police headquarters and gave himself up.

PREACHERS SCRAP.

An Episcopal Minister Blackens the Eyes of a Divinity Student.

HALIFAX, N. S., Dec. 1.—The Rev. Brown, in charge of the Episcopal church at Middletown, assaulted G. H. King, a divinity student on the Annapolis train because King sat on his hat. King's nose was broken and both of his eyes were blackened. The car floor was covered with blood from King's wounds and there was extreme indignation among the passengers. The Rev. H. J. How, who was a passenger on the train, will report the occurrence to Bishop Courtney.

A LOCK AND KEY

PROVES NOT GOOD ENOUGH TO HOLD THE MURDERERS

SOMERSET, PA., Dec. 1.—Two years ago Herman Amberger, an aged farmer, residing here, was brutally murdered in the presence of his family and robbed of nearly $30,000. Joseph and David Nicely were tried and convicted of the murder and sentenced to death. Every possible effort has been made by their wealthy friends to secure clemency for the brothers, even to producing a man who confessed that he was the murderer, but without avail. Shortly after the adverse decision by the Supreme Court, the Nicely brothers broke jail but were recaptured.

At six o'clock last evening the new jail, just completed and occupied, and supposed to be one of the strongest in the country, contained seven prisoners—the Nicelys, convicted of murder, and five others, charged with burglary, arson, embezzlement, etc. At seven o'clock, four of them were gone and one of them named Alex Queer, charged with arson, was lying on the ground in the rear of the building, a bruised bleeding mass of flesh and bones. The alarm was given by Queer, who, in attempting to descend the rope by which the others had escaped fell a distance of fifty feet. His cries attracted attention and soon the entire population of the town, almost wild with excitement, had gathered about the building. Sheriff McMillen summoned a posse of one hundred men, divided them off in squads, starting them to scour the country. The sheriff offered $200 reward for the murderers' capture. The citizens assembled in the court house and in a few moments subscribed a large sum of money to defray the expenses of the search and rewards for the capture of the fugitives. No definite clue has yet developed. Relatives of the Nicely brothers were in town, and, it is believed, met the escaped prisoners and conveyed them to places of safety in carriages.

Deserted His Bride.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—George Hardy, formerly a waiter at No. 178 West Huron street, Chicago, and Laura Hall, of the same city, were married last Monday at Chicago and arrived here on the same day. Saturday the woman reported to the police that early in the morning, Hardy deserted her and started for Chicago with her savings of $80 and $1,500 of his own, together with their trunks.

A Bank Suspends.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., Dec. 1.—The Journal's Duluth, Minn., special says: The private bank of Hall & Co. has closed its doors temporarily. In a run Saturday $30,000 of the $70,000 of deposits were drawn out. When the cash was exhausted Mr. Hall addressed the crowd and told them that he could pay no more cash, but if they would wait a day or two they would be paid in full.

A State Officer Resigns.

HARRISBURG, PA., Dec. 1.—Charles W. Stone, secretary of the commonwealth, having been elected to congress from the Twenty-seventh district, resigned Saturday and Deputy Secretary Longenecker was appointed his successor. Captain C. N. Clement, corporation clerk, becomes deputy secretary.

A Gift to Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 1.—Mrs. Margaret Schmidlapp, widow of Charles Schmidlapp, has presented to the city $50,000 for Sunday afternoon concerts in Eden park. The gift is conditional that the fund be raised to $75,000 by popular subscription.

Safe Blown.

CINCINNATI, OHIO, Dec. 1.—The post office at Walton, Ky., was entered early yesterday morning, the safe blown and two hundred dollars worth of stamps and registered letters and a gold watch taken. No clue to the robbers.

Duty on Potatoes.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The treasury department has decided that sweet potatoes of commerce are different from Mexican yams and are subject to a duty of 25 cents per bushel of 60 pounds to the bushel.

Dr. Koch's New Hospital.

BERLIN, Dec. 1.—Plans for the construction of Dr. Koch's new hospital for the treatment of English consumptives have been accepted, and the preliminary work is progressing.

The Public Debt Increases.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—It is estimated at the treasury department that the public debt statement to be issued Monday will show an increase in the public debt for November of $4,000,000.

A World's Fair Commissioner.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The president has appointed M. D. Henry alternate commissioner of the world's fair for Kansas, vice J. F. Thompson, resigned.

Sounds Like Winter.

SKOWHEGAN, ME., Dec. 1.—At North Anson Dr. C. H. Smith, while skating in the mill pond, broke through the ice and was drowned. His body was recovered.

PARNELL SIZED UP.

The New York Press on His Manifesto.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—The Evening Post says editorially: "A more discreditable document than Parnell's manifesto has not been issued by a public man in any country for many a day. In avoiding all mention of the real question—whether his continued leadership of his party will not, under the existing circumstances, seriously injure the home rule cause, and his talking at considerable length about something else, he adopts one of the worst tricks of 'journalism,' which may possibly be forgiven a man in fighting for his life. But his revelation of his consultations with Gladstone and Morley looks like a piece of pure malignity, and will prevent any public man on the English side from ever entering into confidential relations with him again."

The Commercial Advertiser speaks in an exactly similar strain.

The World says: "Parnell's attitude in this crisis exposes him to serious suspicions."

The Telegram says: "Parnell's manifesto is more remarkable for what it evades or conceals than for what it discusses or reveals. It is a pity he cannot see the propriety of walking out instead of constraining his friends to lift him out."

The Mail and Express says: "Parnell's audacity is a combination of moral callousness, of utter selfishness and of ingratitude to his greatest and most important friend and ally, Gladstone."

Strong Opposition to Parnell.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Gladstone and Morley both dispute Parnell's version of negotiations which took place between them in regard to home rule and other matters concerning Ireland. Michael Davitt is engaged in preparing a manifesto in behalf of Parnell's opponents in the Nationalist party, which will confute all points advanced by Parnell as reasons for his retention as the head of party. Messrs. Sexton and Healey are taking the opinion of each Irish member of parliament as to the advisability of organizing a movement for the alliance of the anti-Parnellites with Gladstone. In an interview today Henry Labouchere, a member of parliament, and editor of Truth, said it would be charitable to suppose that Parnell is mad. It is impossible to suppose a sane man with any sense of honor or patriotism would issue a manifesto so dishonoring to himself and so injurious to his country's cause. Labouchere declared he must be crushed.

Gladstone has issued a reply to Parnell's manifesto, in which he denies in toto all the statements made by the Irish leader in regard to the retention of Irish members in imperial parliament, the settlement of the land or agrarian difficulty in Ireland, control of the Irish constabulary and appointment of judiciary in Ireland. Gladstone says he will not apply a single epithet to Parnell, not being his judge.

HE ATE GLASS.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 1.—Shortly before twelve o'clock in the night William J. Bell, a commercial traveler from Toledo, entered McGuire's saloon at No. 308 Washington avenue south, and called for a glass of whisky.

He took a seat at the table near by and drank the liquor, and, to the astonishment of the bartender and the people present, he began to bite off pieces of the thin whisky glass and swallow them; before he could be prevented he had bitten off nearly everything but the bottom of the glass. Then the bystanders interfered, but it was too late.

What was their horror, a few moments later, to see him fall to the floor with groans. The patrol wagon was immediately summoned, and Bell quickly removed to the city hospital.

He suffered intense pain on the way thither, and hardly entered the hospital before he was in the throes of death. The cause of the terrible deed was the discovery that his wife had begun leading a life of sin, having been arrested on Saturday night in the bagnio of Minnie O'Dell. Bell was about 30 years of age, and well connected in Chicago and Toledo. His wife was formerly a leader of society in Sandusky, O.

STEUBENVILLE.—The officials of the W. & L. E. railroad were tendered a banquet by the people of this city last night. There were 150 plates.

Catarrh

Is a constitutional and not a local disease, and therefore it cannot be cured by local applications. It requires a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, working through the blood, eradicates the impurity which causes and promotes the disease, and effects a permanent cure. Thousands of people testify to the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a remedy for catarrh when other preparations had failed. Hood's Sarsaparilla also builds up the whole system, and makes you feel renewed in health and strength.

N. B. If you decide to try Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to buy any other.

"I used Hood's Sarsaparilla for catarrh, and received great relief and benefit from it. The catarrh was very disagreeable, causing constant discharge from my nose, ringing noises in my ears, and pains in the back of my head. The effect to clear my head in the morning by hawking and spitting was painful. Hood's Sarsaparilla gave me relief immediately, while in time I was entirely cured. I think Hood's Sarsaparilla is worth its weight in gold." MRS. G. B. GIBB, 1020 Eighth Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla has helped me more for catarrh and impure blood than anything else I ever used." A. BALL, Syracuse, N. Y.

ESTATE OF JANE GORDEN.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the city of Adrian, on Monday, the 10th day of November, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety.

Present Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of John Boyd, alleging among other things that he is one of the principal creditors of said deceased; that more than thirty days have elapsed since the death of said deceased; and praying that administration of said estate may be granted to Charles Burridge, or to some other suitable person.

It is ordered, that Monday, the 8th day of December next at 9 o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

RICHARD R. ROBBINS, Judge of Probate.

Attention, Comrade. DO YOU WANT A PENSION? Do You Want Your Pension Increased? There is a New Pension Law and nearly every soldier is now entitled to a pension.

DR. J. H. REYNOLDS Late a member of the Board of Examining Surgeons at Adrian, Mich., and who has examined over two thousand soldiers for pensions, will hereafter devote two hours each day to PENSION BUSINESS. The Doctor was a soldier and is a pensioner, and with his five years' experience as Examining Surgeon for Pensions, believes he can make it PAY YOU to come and see him. He knows the RATE on every known disability. Knows what Diseases or Disabilities are the results of any other. Knows (as every EXAMINING SURGEON will tell you) that many men do not draw what the law allows them, because their claims are not presented in proper shape. Knows how to put your claim in such shape that you will get pay for ALL results of the disease or wound for which you are pensioned. Knows all the recent decisions made by Commissioner and how to give you the advantage of them in dollars. Knows that some recent rulings are of vital importance to many pensioners, if their claims are only properly presented. Knows whether you are entitled to Rerating, and how to get it. I charge just the legal fees because I earn them. ALWAYS BRING YOUR CERTIFICATE WITH YOU. If you want the benefit of a Pension while you live go and see Dr. Reynolds. I can get you from $2 to $6 more per month under the new law than other agents. To any person examined by the board at Adrian, before Aug. 1, 1889, I have something of importance to tell you. Come and let us examine you (no charge) and will tell you all about it. About one-third of the soldiers examined while I was on the board were rated for disabilities not claimed. You had better come and see me about it. Correspondence solicited, with stamp for reply. 15 East Maumee-st., Adrian, Mich.

ATTENTION, Soldiers & Sailors. Under the new pension law just passed by Congress all Soldiers and Sailors who served 90 days in the Rebellion, and who are disabled from any cause permanently, (need not have originated in the service,) are entitled to a pension of from $6 to $12. All soldiers' widows, minor children and dependent parents come under this law. Being located at the Capital near the U. S. Pension office, we can give our personal attention to your claim and thus ascertain any defect quickly and supply the same. Write for blanks. Give full description of service and disabilities. F. J. DODD'S CATARRH CURE. LOCAL AND INTERNAL TREATMENT. In order to cure catarrh it is necessary to allay the inflammation of the irritated membranes with a soothing application, cleanse the head of the plugging mucous secretions, to heal the discharging ulcers. For cold in the head and nasal catarrh Dodds' local treatment does this without the aid of snuff, douche or fumes. If the disease has extended downward affecting the bronchial tubes or lungs, the system and blood, the internal treatment both removes from the system the scattered poison, assists its building-up properties, assists nature in restoring the impaired parts. Send for our pamphlet treating on catarrh. FOSTER, MILBURN & CO., proprietors, Buffalo, N. Y. Sold in Tecumseh, Mich., by C. A. Wright & Co., druggists.

The Voice

Is easily injured—the slightest irritation of the throat or larynx at once affecting its tone, flexibility, or power. All efforts to sing or speak in public, under such conditions, become not only painful but dangerous, and should be strictly avoided until every symptom is removed. To effect a speedy cure no other medicine is equal to

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

The best of anodynes, this preparation rapidly soothes irritation, strengthens the delicate organs of speech, and restores the voice to its tone and power. No singer or public speaker should be without it. Lydia Thompson, the famous actress, certifies: "Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has been of very great service to me. It improves and strengthens the voice, and is always effective for the cure of colds and coughs."

"Upon several occasions I have suffered from colds, causing hoarseness and entire loss of voice. In my profession of an auctioneer any affection of the voice or throat is a serious matter, but at each attack, I have been relieved by a few doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. This remedy, with ordinary care, has worked such a that I have suffered very little inconvenience. I have also used it in my family, with excellent results, in coughs, colds, &c."—Jas. H. Quartly, Minlaton, Australia.

"In the spring of 1853, at Portsmouth, Va., I was prostrated by a severe attack of typhoid pneumonia. My physicians exhausted their remedies, and for one year I was not able to even articulate a word. By the advice of Dr. Shaw I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and to my surprise and great joy, in less than one month I could converse easily, in a natural tone of voice. I continued to improve and have become since a well man. I have often recommended the Pectoral, and have never known it to fail."—George R. Lawrence, Valparaiso, Ind.

Congress Convenes

Its Annual Grind Again Begins.

SECOND SESSION OF FIFTY-FIRST CONGRESS OPENED.

Only a Portion of Its Important Business Will Probably Be Disposed of Before Its Expiration—Some the Bills That Are to Be Considered.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—QUIET groups of politicians already throng the city preparing for the second session of the Fifty-first Congress, which opens at noon today. At precisely twelve o'clock Vice President Morton in the Senate, and Speaker Reed in the House of Representatives, will call those two bodies to order. The roll will be called, and three new members will be sworn it. Whitelaw, in place of Walker, of Missouri; Hayes, the successor of Conger, of Iowa, and Pindar, who has been elected to the vacancy occasioned by the death of Miller, of New York. Mr. Breckenridge, of Arkansas, will also have to be re-sworn.

The Congress has much important business before it, a very small proportion of which will likely be disposed of before its expiration at noon on the 4th of March. There are the necessary appropriation bills without which the business of the government would be suspended at least in part, and the reapportionment bill which has as yet received consideration in neither House, but which the Republicans in both Houses have said must be passed at this session.

Then there are many measures of importance on the calendars which have passed one House and therefore half through the legislative journey. The most important of these in the Federal election bill which passed the House at the first session, and which was resisted in the Senate by the Democrats so firmly that it was necessary for the Republicans to agree to a postponement of its consideration in order to bring about the passage of the Tariff bill and an adjournment of the first session. There are also on the calendar of the Senate and national bankruptcy bill which is being pushed by the representatives of the commercial convention; the bill to transfer the revenue marine service from the treasury to the navy department which was debated at some length during the first session; the bill to discontinue the coinage of the $1 and $3 gold pieces; and the Conger lard bill. These measures have passed the House. On the House calendar are the subsidy and shipping bills which have passed the Senate. A number of other measures of great importance on the calendars of both Houses, which have received final action in neither.

During the coming week action will be taken to outline as nearly as possible the work for the session in both houses. The Republicans in the Senate are pledged to the passage of the Federal election bill; but it is a question in the minds of some whether it is possible to pass it against the obstructive tactics of the Democrats, and then the question is raised whether there is any party necessity for its passage now that the elections for the Fifty-second congress are over. The Republican senators will probably hold a caucus during the week to determine what is to be done. There has as yet been no consultation of the Republican leaders on this point.

The first day of the session will be principally devoted to the receipt of the president's message which will be read at length in each house. It is not unlikely that on the following day the House committee on appropriations will be ready to report one or more of the annual appropriation bills. The pension bill and the fortification bill will be the first to come up for consideration. What will be done to push the appropriation bills forward will be determined in caucus. The Republican caucus has also to determine upon a postmaster for the House, the office having been declared vacant at the close of the first session.

AGAINST THE COMPANY.

A New York Judge Decides a Three-Cent a Mile Railroad Suit.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—An important decision was rendered by Judge Freedman in the case of Nicholas McQuade for a penalty of $50 against the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad company, for charging more than the three cents per mile allowed by law for transportation to the Morris Park races. The defendant moved to set aside the service of the summons on the ground that it had been served on a director of the company. While the service would be good in case of a domestic corporation it was insufficient for a foreign one. It appeared that the defendant had secured legislative franchises here as well as in Connecticut, and Judge Freedman held the service good.

Powderly's Plans.

SCRANTON, PA., Dec. 1.—Grand Master Workman Powderly has left for Florida to attend the Farmers' Alliance convention. He hinted that a new party will not result from the Florida convention, but thereafter the Alliance members and Knights will vote for, as well as work for their principles.

Defaulting Banker Missing.

Severe Winter in England.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—The snow storm in England is the severest since the Crimean war. Sheep are dying by the thousands it being impossible to give them food and shelter.

An Earthquake.

VIENNA, Dec. 1.—A series of shocks of earthquake was felt at Gaunersdorf Lower Austria, Saturday. Some of the shocks were very severe.

A TERRIBLE LEAP.

Caboose With Three Occupants Leaps Twenty Feet.

BRADFORD, PA., Dec. 1.—The caboose of a construction train on the Allegheny and Linzua railroad jumped the track when crossing a trestle six miles west of here at 7:30 last night. The caboose plunged down about twenty feet and was completely wrecked. The wreck caught fire from the stove and was consumed. The flames communicated to the trestle which was destroyed. Michael Dill, surveyor, Ernest Herman, H. C. Freck, a lumberman, and Freck's young son were in the caboose. Herman was seriously injured; young Freck had an arm broken, while Dill and Freck were cut and bruised badly. Herman and Dill were taken to the hospital.

HOLDS THE PURSE STRINGS.

How Parnell Has a Close Grip on the Irish Members.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—The Pall Mall Gazette says Mr. Parnell started last night for Ireland, in order to evade a definite declaration by the Parnellite members of the House of Commons on the question of the leadership. If a vote is taken on Monday, Mr. Parnell will treat that portion of his followers who remain attached to him, as the real Irish party, and will cut the deserters off. Forty-four members receive pay through Mr. Parnell, who retains absolute control of the fund for the payment of Irish members.

MANUFACTURERS

FORMING COMBINATIONS ON THE FARMER.

The Threshing Machine Manufacturers Organize and the Harvester Men Elect Officers of Their Trust.

CHICAGO, ILLS., Dec. 1.—It is authoritatively stated that the thrashing machine manufactures of the United States in session at the Auditorium hotel have practically agreed on the formation of a trust with a capital stock of twenty million dollars. The following are in the proposed deal: Goss, Scott & Co., Richmond, Ind., C. & G. Cooper, Mt. Vernon, Ohio; the Eagle Machine Co., Indianapolis, Ind., Springfield Engine and Thrasher Co., Springfield, Ohio, Minnesota Engine and Thrasher Co., Stillwater, Minn., Nicholas Shepard & Co., Battle Creek, Mich., Harrison Machine works, Belleville, Ills., C. The utmost secrecy is being observed and every attempt is made to keep the particulars from the public.

Harvester Trust.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—A meeting for the organization of the trust recently formed by the Havesting machine manufacturers composed of twenty-two concerns and called the American Harvester company, was held at the office of the Whitman & Barnes Manufacturing company in this city, General A. S. Bushnell, of Springfield, O., was elected chairman and Colonel A. L. Conger, of Akron, O., secretary. The following directors were chosen- Cyrus H. McCormick and William Deering, of Chicago; Walter A. Wood, Hoosac Falls, N. Y.; Lewis Miller, Akron, O., and General Bushnell. The election of officers was postponed until Monday on account of the absence in the east of Mr. Deering, the principal stockholder. The company was incorporated at Springfield, Ill., with $35,000,000 capital.

MAL-ADMINISTRATION

Developed by the Grand Jury at New Orleans.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 1.—The grand jury Saturday filed its final report in court. The investigation of the Hennessy murder trial led to the disclosure of a great deal of official mal-administration. With the report are presented indictments against Gilligan, captain of the yard, for assault and battery and robbing prisoners. In this report the jurors denounce the system by which a favored prisoner is put in command of the yard, and in the absence of the sheriff or his regular deputies, this "captain" becomes at once a ruler and a despot, beating and robbing the prisoners in a manner disgraceful to the reputation of the city and state. The report also calls upon the city council to repeal the law by which prize fighting is allowed.

Terrific Explosion.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., Dec. 1.—A terrific boiler and dynamite explosion took place on the Trunk sewer in the first ward in the morning. Edward Manning, twenty-three years old, one of the workmen, was killed and R. Van Cleve, the engineer, was badly injured. Several others had narrow escapes. Parts of the huge engine were thrown half a mile, one piece tearing its way into a brick house a quarter of a mile distant.

Rescued From the Sea.

BOSTON, Dec. 1.—The steamer Nessmore, at this port, from London, reports: November 22, lat. 42 34 north, long. 38, fell in with Norwegian bark Brage, Captain Jorgensen, from Shediac, November 7, with Deals, with eight feet of water in her hold and waterlogged. The Nessmore took off the captain and nine men and brought them here. One man, named Thorvalt Lauritzen, of Norway, was drowned.

Another Trust.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—President Thompson, of the National Lead trust, is in Chicago. The reported object of his visit to that city is to endeavor to form a combination of all lead and silver smelters in the country. The proposed combine is not connected with the lead trust in any way.

Actor Webster Secures Delay.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Actor Charles Webster, who was sentenced to seven years' imprisonment for killing Robert McNeill, secured a stay of proceedings from Judge O'Brien, of the Supreme Court, pending an appeal to the general term.

Suspended.

EDENSBURG, PA., Dec. 1.—Johnson, Buck & Co. have closed their doors. Liabilities and assets not yet known.

THE WALK TO EMMAUS.

LESSON X, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, DEC. 7.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xxiv, 13, 27. Commit Verses 25, 27—Golden Text, Luke xxiv, 30—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

13. "And behold, two of them went that same day to a village called Emmaus, which was from Jerusalem about three score furlongs." It was now afternoon, and all the events of the morning had doubtless become known to all the disciples, and many more than those mentioned in the last lesson had paid a visit to the tomb; perhaps these two among the rest; but if so they evidently doubted still His resurrection, for had they believed that He actually appeared to Mary and the other women we would think that they would have remained about the city hoping to see Him for themselves. So we have before us two more unbelieving disciples, one named Cleopas (vs. 18) and the other we know not. According to John xix, 25, Cleopas was husband to one of the Marys.

14. "And they talked together of all these things which had happened." They would no doubt rehearse every incident, perhaps going over the events of His arrest and trial and crucifixion and all attendant circumstances, as well as the events of that particular day.

15. "And it came to pass that while they communed together and reasoned, Jesus Himself drew near and went with them." They spoke of Him and He came to meet them.

16. "But their eyes were holden that they should not know Him." When Mary saw Him she knew not that it was Jesus, and when the disciples who went out fishing saw Him on the shore they knew not that it was Jesus (John xx, 14; xxi, 4). Whether He assumed a different form or appearance on each of these occasions, or whether Mary and the disciples knew him not, the one because of her weeping and the others because of their return to their old occupation, or whether it was a blindness from the Lord, as in II Kings vi, 18, does not seem very clear in the case of Mary and the disciples: but in the case of these two Mark xvi, 12, says that He appeared to them in another form.

17. "And He said unto them, What manner of communications are these that ye have one to another, as ye walk and are sad?" He knew, but He wanted them to tell Him; as if He had said, Tell me all about it.

18. "And one of them, whose name was Cleopas, answering, said unto Him, Art Thou only a stranger in Jerusalem and hast not known the things which are come to pass there in these days?" The whole city must have been filled with the things which had happened during the last few days and a man would need to be a very lonely sojourner (as the words "Art thou only a stranger" imply) not to have heard about the strange events.

19. "And He said unto them, What things? And they said unto Him, Concerning Jesus of Nazareth, which was a prophet mighty in deed and word before God and all the people." They could not forget nor deny that such mighty deeds and words had been seen in Jesus as had never been seen in any other; and, although contrary to all their expectations He had been put to death, yet these facts concerning Him were incontrovertible.

20. "And how the chief priests and our rulers delivered Him to be condemned to death, and have crucified Him." Their testimony corroborates exactly what Jesus had foretold (Matt. xvi, 21). Now if they had added what He also foretold just as plainly, that He would rise again the third day, then would they have been enlightened and glad.

21. "But we trusted that it had been He which should have redeemed Israel: and beside all this, today is the third day since these things were done." Like Zacharias, Simeon, Anna, Joseph of Arimathea and many others they looked for redemption for Israel, even the kingdom of God (Luke i, 68; ii, 30, 38; xxiii, 51), as all the prophets had foretold. They looked for the king to sit on David's throne, and even Gabriel, the last messenger from God, taught them so to look (Luke i, 32, 33). But they knew not the way to the throne by death and resurrection.

22. "Yea, and certain women also of our company made us astonished which were early at the sepulcher." If they had said "made us glad" it would have been right and according to the mind of God.

23. "And when they found not His body, they came, saying, that they had also seen a vision of angels, which said that He was alive." What they looked for (His body) they saw not, but they saw the linen clothes which had contained His body; and what they had not expected to see (angels) they saw, and heard that which they had not thought to hear, that He was alive. Life and not death is the topic of the Scriptures; or rather life through death.

24. "And certain of them which were with us went to the sepulcher, and found it even so as the women had said; but Him they saw not." The women simply found as He had said it would be, and as the angels said it was; and even though the others who went saw not Himself, blessed are those who see not and yet believe (John xx, 29).

25. "Then He said unto them, O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken!" If we spend much time on prophecy wise men may count us fools, but if we neglect prophecy, or any portion of it, Christ will count us foolish. Let us rather choose to be counted foolish by men than by Christ.

26. "Ought not Christ to have suffered these things and to enter into His glory?" When Paul preached at Thessalonica he taught from the Scriptures that Christ must needs have suffered and risen again from the dead, and that Jesus whom he preached was indeed the Christ (Acts xvii, 2, 3). The Christ must suffer because iniquity, transgression and sin must be put away and made an end of (Dan. ix, 24), and without shedding of blood is no remission; it is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul (Heb. ix, 22; Lev. xvii, 11).

27. "And beginning at Moses and all the prophets, He expounded unto them in all the Scriptures the things concerning Himself." Expository preaching, which many preachers despise, but which satisfies hungry souls. An Old Testament Bible reading by the Master Himself and all about Himself. Heavy hearts need Jesus only; and only when He is enthroned there will we have true gladness. Can you, dear fellow teacher, find Him in every book in all the Scriptures and in every lesson that you teach? It is only as we make Him the center of all teaching and preaching that we can hope to accomplish anything in His name. We are to be full of Him and His spirit and His word, and always speak of His sufferings, death, resurrection, ascension, intercession and coming glory; pointing to His holy life as the foundation, and, if saved by His blood, then taking that holy life as our example in all things.

Marvelous Endurance.

The vast amount of labor performed by the heart in keeping all portions of the body supplied with blood is not generally known. It beats 100,000 times and forces the blood at the rate of 168 miles a day, which is 3,000,000,000 times and 5,150,880 miles in a life time. No wonder there are so many HEART FAILURES. The first symptoms are shortness of breath when exercising, pain in the side or stomach, fluttering choking in throat, oppression, then follow weak, hungry or smothering spells, swolen ankles, etc. Dr. Franklin Miles' NEW HEART CURE is the only reliable remedy. Sold by Baker & Hall.

FARMERS, A WORD WITH YOU.

Do you know that the National Stockman and Farmer, of Pittsburgh, Pa., is the largest and best agricultural, live stock and family journal of its class published? It is the largest because it has twenty-four pages (ninety-six columns) every week the year round—no supplements. It is the best because it is the most practical, comprehensive and ably edited. It is, as its name implies, a magazine for the farmer and stockman. As such it covers the whole field. Each of its departments is ably edited; its matter is practical and to the point. All its correspondents are farmers and stockmen who keep up to the times in their various branches, and it combines more fully than any other journal of its kind all of the branches of husbandry. Each of its twenty-four different departments is represented in each issue, consisting of Agriculture, Horticulture, Live Stock, Veterinary, Dairy, Apiary, Markets, Poultry, Household, Young Folks, etc., etc.

Its market reports have a national reputation of being the most reliable comprehensive and freshest of any of its competitors. Their new press enables the publishers to mail their entire edition within twenty-four hours from the time it goes to press, thus enhancing the value of its market reports and other departments.

It accepts no fraudulent advertisements. Its organization page is one of its most valuable features. League, Grange and Alliance matters are intelligently and honestly discussed. It aims in this department to bring about a more equitable and harmonious state of affairs than now exists. It gives a table of contents with each issue and a complete index every six months, enabling one to find at once any article desired. It enters into political matters only so far as it is of interest to the farmer and his welfare.

The regular subscription price is $1.50 per year, but in clubs of five it is offered at $1.00 each; it further offers the rest of this year free to new subscribers for 1891. Send for a sample copy free. It gives way to its agents $3 000 in cash prizes this year. Send for terms and supplies. Address The Stockman and Farmer, Pittsburgh, Penn.

READ THIS TWICE!

The only Protection that will effectually protect all people, all classes, all labor and all interests is that styled SELF PROTECTION! acquired only from a truthful knowledge of ways and means, legal and illegal, just and unjust, by which the burdens of government, profits of labor and industry, are so unequally divided.

That knowledge is power, and ignorance its slave, is forcibly illustrated daily in all walks of life, among all people, in all countries.

Where knowledge is used as a power or a means for gaining wealth without labor or an equivalent therefor, it becomes necessary to deceive or keep in ignorance of such methods those from whom the wealth is taken; hence it is that of the ten thousand newspapers printed in the United States, less than ten are absolutely free and independent of the power or control of some class, party or monopoly whose interest it is to keep the great mass of people in ignorance of their methods.

The Cincinnati Weekly Enquirer is one of the few, if not the only one, absolutely free from such influences. It is the most honest, thorough, able teacher and exponent of truthful knowledge, of reliable data, free from partisan bias, fair, frank and explicit to such degree that one cannot but feel edified and capable of forming correct conclusions therefrom. Such a paper should be in every household. Sample copies can be obtained by addressing the publishers, at Cincinnati, O.

The children's health must not be neglected. Colds in the head and snuffles bring on catarrh and lung affections. Ely's Cream Balm cures at once. It is perfectly safe and is easily applied into nostrils. It also cures catarrh, the worst cases yielding to it.

On reading and filing the petition of Charles Burridge, administrator upon the estate of said deceased, alleging that the funeral expenses and debts of said deceased and the expenses of administration thus far incurred, have been fully paid, and that he is now ready to close said estate and to render his final administration account, and praying that said account may be allowed and that the residue of said estate may be assigned and distributed to those enititled thereto according to law, that he may be discharged and his bond cancelled, and for such other order and decree as to this court shall seem proper.

It is Ordered, That Monday, the 22d day o December next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

After vainly trying all the various remedies recommended for the troubles of teething, Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup gave magical relief, said our neighbor.

Merit Wins.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refun the purchase price, it satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. For sale by

BRITTON BUDGET.

Miss Hoag is on the sick list.

George Exelby has sold his bay team to Carl Roberts.

Lenardson and Son have a fine new display of holiday goods.

Notwithstanding the cold weather the coal kilns are progressing rapidly.

The friends of Dave Sloan will be glad to hear that he is improving in health.

Hank Taylor came down from Onsted last Saturday, and spent Sunday at home. He returned to Onsted Monday morning.

There was a Night Cap social at the G. A. R. Hall last Friday evening, held by the Patrons of Industry, they report a good time.

The bridge carpenters who have been working on the Wabash, got through their work last Saturday. They go from here to Butler.

James Sloan of Franklin, our former school teacher, bought one hundred bushels of corn last week from Mike Hart and George Getty, price 25 cents.

Mr. Lewis has hired Vern Ousterhout to look after his business here, he could not have secured a better man. Will Larrabee will drive Vern's team this winter.

On Wednesday Dec. 3rd, John Stewert and Mrs Adams were united in marriage by the Rev. Hoag. They have the best wishes of the community for their future welfare and happiness.

A Chicken Pie Social will be held on Wednesday evening the 7th, in the basement of the Church for the benefit of the Pastor. All are cordially invited to attend. By order of Ministerial Committee.

John Britton is always willing to help everybody. Last week he was seen picking chickens like a good fellow, and dressed twenty-five in a short time. Your kind help was appreciated, John.

Last Tuesday week Frank Gibson meet with quite a serious accident, while binding on a load of hay, the binder broke and threw him quite heavily to the ground, breaking his collar bone. At present writing he is doing nicely under the care of Dr. Hendershot.

Our poultry men, Cunningham Patterson and John Gibson are doing a rushing business. We visited their establishment one evening last week and were both surprised and pleased to see them so busy. They reported to us that during that day they had bought over $200 worth of chickens besides 74 rabbits.

We regret to say that Mr. James Haight met with quite a serious accident the other week. we did not learn the particulars but by some mishap he shot himself in the wrist. Rach Underwood is looking after things during Mr. Haight's sickness.

The heavy fall of snow we had last week has made lots of business for the livery stable here. George has three new cutters and last week they were running day and night, last Friday especially every one in town seemed to be taking a sleigh ride.

A week ago last Saturday Joseph Gregg was decking logs at Mr. Lewis' mill, and one fell onto him, breaking two ribs and injuring his spine. He was taken up for dead, but revived and at the present time is doing nicely and we hear that there are some slight hopes of his recovery.

Two noted horse jockeys came near fighting a duel to the death in our drug store a few evenings ago, and had it not been for the interference of the by-standers one or both would be sleeping 'neath the sod. There was blood in the eyes of both, and if revolvers had been drawn there is no knowing who would have been the victim, these jockeys are not the best of marksmen and if they themselves had escaped some of the bystanders would surely have suffered.

One jocky matched his horse to out pull both horses belonging to the other jockey, and thus the quarrel began, but if these men are really anxious to try the mettle of their valuable steeds, we are willing to put up a nickles worth of candy against a lead pencil that Vern Ousterhout's black dog "Rover" can out-pull the whole three horses.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES

The sleigh-bells are once more heard on our streets.

Marcie Kelley was under the doctor's care for several days during the past week.

Treasurer C. C. Smith was in the village last week collecting taxes. He will be found at Coryell & Smith's place of business again on the 19th of the month.

Attorney Henry Smith, of Adrian, was in the village last week.

W. H. Arner is reported not to be as well at present writing.

A. R. Arner went to Battle Creek Friday to take the agent's place for a few days while he is taking a lay-off.

Clara Temple returned the middle of last week from her holiday visit with Mrs. Luella Wilson-Smith, of Pioneer, Ohio.

Some of the young folks of the village attended the Farmers' Union held at Mr. John Cadmus' in Raisin, on Friday evening. Their next meeting will be held at Frank Davidson's on next week Friday evening.

There was a good attendance of young people at the L. C. S. held at Mrs. H. J. Williams' on Friday evening and all spent a pleasant hour together.

W. L. Jones started for Brooklyn with a fine carriage horse for Mrs. Bush. He will spend a few days with Mrs. Bush and the boys, and return accompanied by his wife, who has been with her sister during the past two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Burt Nobles were called to Homer last week by the dangerous sickness of her father.

H. J. Williams, our hustling hardware dealer, furnished three large Jewel Oak, extension door heaters, for the church, manufactured by the Detroit Stove Works. They are being placed in position and will be ready for use by the last of the week.

Mrs. H. J. Williams received a telegram Friday that her mother was very sick, with but little hope of recovering. She left at once for the home of her parents at Poultney, Vt.

The Church, which has been undergoing extensive repairs, will be completed this week, and on Sunday will be reopened. Dr. Bashford, President of the Wesleyan University of Delaware, Ohio, and others are expected to assist in the services during the day and evening.

Willie Harrington, having engaged to Mr. Cooley, five miles west of Clinton, for a year, is moving his household effects there this week, and will begin housekeeping soon.

Don't forget the Musin Concert to be given at the Opera House in Tecumseh Saturday evening. Tickets for sale at the Library. Single ticket, 50c. Season tickets, $1.25. Reserved seats free.

On Wednesday evening of next week the Library Reading Circle will give a public entertainment, consisting of literary and musical selections. The committee to provide the program —Mr. David Gibson and Miss Kitty Clark—are doing all in their power to furnish something interesting and pleasing. An admission of 10c. will be charged, to help bear the running expenses of the Library. The following is the program as arranged and provided by the committee having charge:

CAMBRIDGE CLIPPINGS.

[Delayed Letter.]

Dr. D. J. Dewey, of Washington, Iowa, W. C. Dewey and family, of Grand Rapids, and F. S. Dewey, of Alpena, and his daughter Alta, who is attending school at Ann Arbor, were all here to spend Thanksgiving.

Mrs. Hayden, of Charlotte, is visiting her sister, Mrs. C. H. Dewey.

Will Neely is buying poultry. Parties in this section would do well to see him before selling.

Mrs. M. Case, while coming from Brooklyn last Friday with a pasteboard box full of groceries, in a buggy, the top blew off into the wheels, and scared the horse, which ran, making things lively for her for over a mile.

M. Case has been raising one of his barns and putting on an addition.

A word to young mothers.-Do not dose your darlings with every old grandmother's receipt, (no disrespect,) but use that invaluable preventive of children's diseases,—Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup.

WOODSTOCK WARBLES.

There was so much visiting here on Thanksgiving that it would fill too much space in the columns to itemize. Turkeys had to roost high and even then all did not escape moving jaws.

Loss Parsons and Clarence Lewis were in Adrian last week on business.

Rev. Broody preached his farewell sermon in the F. W. Baptist church last Sabbath and will enter on the duties of pastor of the Regular Baptist church at Kelley's Corners next Sabbath.

Rev. Gray will fill the pulpit of the F. W. B. Church hereafter. Those who have heard him call him very eloquent and some think he will make a second Henry Ward Beecher.

Miss Jennie Minchin of Hudson has been the guest of Miss Blanche Harris and Miss Sadie Parsons several days. She returned to Hudson on Monday. Carl, Vern and Sadie Parsons, Jennie Minchin and Blanche Harris went to Prospect Hill and from the pinnacle of the tower took a view of the surrounding country through Mr. Beal's telescope. They report a fine time and a fine view.

Robert and Vern Drake and Percy Wareham report 30 rabbits as the result of a Thanksgiving hunt.

Miss Nelly Warner, from near Hudson, is the guest of Miss Bertha Wareham.

The funeral services of Philip Wareham took place at the F. W. Baptist church on Tuesday of last week. Sermon by Rev. Eichbaum of the Episcopal church, Brooklyn. A large number attended. All speak well of the sermon.

Freed. Harris is suffering with a distressing cough, which has troubled him for some time, and it is thought that he has the la grippe.

TIPTON TOPICS.

Mr. J. F. Smith is slowly recovering from a severe illness.

Lavern Roberts has gone to Grand Rapids to attend a business college.

Mr. F. Mangus cut his foot quite badly last Saturday. Dr. Armstrong rendered the necessary assistance.

The class in oratory, which has been fast improving under the competent instruction of Mrs. Chas. Kemp, will give an entertainment at the Congregational church on Tuesday eve., Dec. 16th. Arrangements are being made to make the program interesting and entertaining. The recitations will be interspersed with music and tableaus, adding to the attractions. Admission, 10 cents.

Winter seems to have stepped in upon us quite suddenly and now all are enjoying sleighing to its full capacity.

The M. E. social held at C. W. Luce's last Friday eve. was a decided success and all enjoyed a pleasant evening.

The M. E. Sunday School decided last Sunday to have a Christmas tree this year instead of a concert. The tree is open to any in the vicinity who wish to put their presents on the tree.

J. M. Burns' people have moved into their new house and are now enjoying a large and pleasant home.

MANCHESTER MATTERS.

Chas. Coon has had the misfortune to lose one of a span of work horses.

Our High School room has a recent acquisition in the form of a fine oak bookcase.

Will Martin will take his best girl for a sleigh ride in a brand new cutter this winter.

The next F. B. church social is to be at Albert English's on Friday evening, Dec. 12th.

G. H. Anthony has finished a large job of papering, together with other work, upon the interior of F. Breitenwisher's new house, near Pleasant Lake, in Freedom.

The next Farmers' Club meeting is to be Wm. E. Pease's, the second Friday in January.

Miss Grace Baldwin returned to Franklin on Monday, after a week's visit at Albert English's.

There was a bee to draw gravel upon the new road on Saturday.

BRIEF BUT TO THE POINT.

I had rheumatism all over my body for two years. Doctored with eminent physicians, and spent three months in Reed City Hospital. Four bottles of Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup entirely cured me. The greatest medicine in the world. CHARLES ROWE, Baldwin, Mich.

Song—Myrtie Whelan, Inez and Wilfred Allen.

Song—Geddie and Lawrence Dibb

Instrumental Music—Rena and Leon Allen, Clarence Wisner.

After intermission the question "Resolved, that the hope of reward has more influence on the human character than the fear of punishment," was taken up and discussed.

Several of the speakers of the affirmative were absent, and Carl Wisner and S. N. Munger, who represented that side, had to speak against Mrs. A. B. Wisner, G. W. Allen, Mrs. Reuben Langdon and Clarence Wisner, of the negative.

The vote of the judges resulted in one affirmative and two negative.

The society will next meet at Reuben Langdon's, December 12, 1890. A good program has been prepared, and will be presented.

The question for discussion is "Resolved, that the revenue should be collected by a direct income tax." Affirmative—J. S. Allen, G. W. Allen, Carl Wisner, Bertha Taylor, Mrs. Ed Spalding. Negative—S. N. Munger. H. P. Taylor, Mrs. A. B. Wisner, J. C. VanDoren, C. L. Wisner, Ed Spaulding.

EAST RAISIN ECHOES.

Pretty fair sleighing but better wheeling.

Mrs. Geo. Marshall, of Ludington, Mich., is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Doty. She expects to remain till after Christmas.

John Pease has been repairing his house.

Albert Dresser, of Ballaton, Minn., spent last week with his sister, Mrs. A. Richard.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of the Presbyterian church held a public installation of officers at the church last Sunday evening. Quite a number of visitors were present from the Raisin Valley and Palmyra societies. The following are the officers for the ensuing term:

President—Frank Kishpaugh.
Vice Pres.—Myrtie Kelley.
Cor. Sec.—May Rogers.
Rec. Sec.—Esther Binns.
Treas.—Edward S. Palmer.

Rev. W. K Spencer of Adrian will give an illuminated lecture at the Presbyterian church next Wednesday evening, Dec. 17th, under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society. He uses his calcium light and will give about fifty pictures in the course of the lecture. His subject is "Holland in the Time of William the Silent."

MACON MUSIC.

The Loyal Legion, assisted by the young people of South Macon, will give a concert in the M. E. church of that place, Friday evening Dec. 19th. An admission fee of 5 cents will be taken at the door, for the benefit of the Legion.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, DEC. 11.

The little shavers will all thank Major McKinley that he didn't put a prohibitive duty on Santa Claus.

Candidate Turner can now keep right along in the brick business. He will not be harassed and annoyed with the cares of state.

Our Republican brethren are beginning to realize the fact that they are confronted by a condition, and not a theory, at present.

Will Chairman Quay resign? It is very doubtful. He typifies the orthodox Republican office-holder, who seldom dies and never resigns.

Henry George says that the Republican party has 'gone bung.' This is a classical Australian phrase, synonymous with 'petered out' or 'gone up the spout.'

The public debt was increased four millions last month. The Republican leaders are bound to scrape the bottom of the treasury chest before they close the lid.

Honest John Wanamaker has been squeezed in Wall Street. The general opinion is that Jay Gould pocketed the $50,000 that Honest John dropped in a stock deal.

With a binding twine monopoly, a reaper and mower monopoly and a threshing machine mopopoly the farmers can look out for much better times during 1891.

Did the stay-at-home vote do it? Very likely it contributed to the result. But the excessive loss on the Republican side shows that thousands of former Republicans voted the Democratic ticket.

Speaker Reed will feel decidedly lonely as leader of the minority in the next House. It is fortunate that he is a member, however, as he will be able to contribute some variety to the proceedings.

Nothing but supreme folly on the part of the Democrats themselves can prevent the election of a Democratic President in 1891. Shall he be sustained by a Democratic House and Senate? That is the question.

The Republican attempt to force the passage of the Force bill shows how little the leaders respect public sentiment. The people condemned federal interference with elections no less than McKinleyism in the recent upheaval.

The National Farmers' Alliance in session last week at Ocala, Florida, passed a resolution strongly condemning the Force bill, and not one solitary delegate voted against it. Rather an emphatic declaration of opinion on the Force bill folly.

Senator Vest claims that Grover Cleveland is now in favor of free silver. Very likely. He is the most far-sighted politician that this country has known since Samuel J. Tilden. He has always been abreast of public sentiment or a little ahead of it.

Samuel J. Tilden once said: "The General Government should do nothing for the State which the State can do for itself, and no government should do anything for the individual which he can do for himself." A better definition of Jeffersonian Democracy was never given.

Grover Cleveland and David B. Hill met as pall bearers at August Belmont's funeral. What a fitting time and place for them both to resolve to bury their personal rivalry and henceforth work together to promote the cause of popular rights and tariff reform, to which the great financier gave his best energies.

The Chicago Tribune speaks out in meeting thusly:

It has been left to the present Congress to pass a big tariff bill with no preconceived idea of what its effect would be—to pass it out of fun, and then wait to see how it would work. Whatever other effects the bill may have this one is certain—it has cost sixty-nine Northern and Western Republicans their seats. That ought to satisfy the curiosity of the authors of the bill as to its workings, but it does not seem to.

THE TRUTH OF THE SITUATION.

The weeks roll by, and ere long the Christmas holidays will be nearer to us than the late elections; but in spite of the festal influence of this hallowed season, the Republican papers stick to the one solitary occupation which seems to have any interest to them—discussing the causes of their recent defeat. Was it the McKinley bill? they gravely inquire. Or was it the Force Bill? Or was it just nothing—a mere fortuitous concourse of votes for Democratic candidates?

Bless your dear souls, it was everything. It was the McKinley bill, and the Force Bill, and the Reapportionment Bill, and Speaker Reed, and the new rules, and John Wanamaker, and the Blocks of Five, and Benjamin Harrison, and the crooked pension business, and the Census, and any quantity of other things. You need not trouble yourself to hunt out any one cause of your defeat; there are causes in abundance, and there would have been more if you had had a little more time in which to worry the people. Do not distress yourselves to decide which sort of cake gave you the stomach-ache. You have eaten all the sorts there were. Any one would have been enough. Put the stomach-ache down to all.

You began amassing this vast accumulation of Democratic votes as far back as 1884. Before that, you had tried the patience of your supporters in the nomination of Hayes and the stealing for him of the Presidential chair. Nor were the choice of General Garfield and the unholy squabble that followed his election in any sense good politics. Still—you were forgiven. You had your people behind you. You retained their confidence. And you abused it. In 1884 you nominated a man whom a large majority of your followers could not support, for purely conscientious and unselfish reasons. We need not enter into the merits of the case. You were warned of the result. Yet you forced that candidacy upon men who had been loyal to you. They defeated him.

Then you lost your temper. You wanted revenge. You were hot in the defence of your principles; indeed you did not even care to vindicate your chosen candidate from the discredit of defeat. After spending four years in trying to annoy the Democratic President, and to obstruct all useful legislation, you nominated another man—a nobody, whose only claim to the place was that he had no bad record. By dint of shameless, avowed, open corruption you elected him. Since then you have acted as though the country belonged to you. That is the reason why you have received this little reminder that it does not.

As soon as you found yourselves in power, with a bare majority in the House of Representatives, you made a working majority of it by stealing, without even a decent trial, the seats of honestly elected Democrats. Then you denied their rights to the minority. You cynically announced that your return to ascendency was a "permanence," and you proceeded on that assumption—as if you had really turned the American Republic into an elective monarchy. You passed pension laws utterly indecent in their unwarranted extravagance. You threatened us—and you threaten us still—with two bills that would practically, between them, disfranchise half the country.

Then you did pass a bill the [illegible] of which could not be drawn up elsewhere, unless it were in Bedlam, than in the Fifty-first Congress. It is called the McKinley bill; but it ought to be called "A Bill to raise Prices and to Make life Harder for Everybody, except a Few Prosperous Manufacturers." So mad a production was this bill that it actually put a tariff tax on tin plates—something that every man, woman and child uses—not because any tin plates are made in this country, but because some day, some man, somewhere, might wish to think of making them. And on top of all that, to add gratuitous insult to wanton injury, raise the price of tobacco, so that every man can have a daily reminder that you don't care how hard you make life for him. Do you think of anything calculated to irritate and enrage the citizen which you have forgotten to treat him to?

Do you wonder that you will sit in the next House with a total representation hardly more than half the size of the Democrats' clear majority? Nobody else wonders. If the Democrats, after they have been long in power, become half as arrogant, selfish, and neglectful of duty as you became, they will be turned out of their places, too, if the people have to fill their seats with Farmers' Alliance candidates.—Puck.

THE PEOPLE FOR TARIFF REFORM.

Every State west of Ohio and east of the Rocky Mountains, excepting the new Dakotas and Wyoming, swung from their long Republican moorings at the late election on the distinct issue of tariff reform. Ohio elected a Democratic delegation to Congress because of the new gerrymander, but with all the demoralization of the Democracy caused by the extra session of the Legislature to undo Democratic abuse of power, the majority for the Republican State ticket is less than half the majority of 1888, and the Republican majority on Congress is only 9,062.

Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Minnesota, Michigan and Wisconsin, all strong Republican States for thirty years, gave positive majorities for tariff reform. The majority against the Republicans on Congress is 7,680 in Iowa; 12,218 in Kansas; 14,076 in Minnesota; 26,828 in Nebraska; 34,928 in Indiana, with like majorities for tariff and tax reform in Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin. There is not a sure Republican State left in the west outside of the new pocket States, and they are the most uncertain of political quantities in view of the sweeping revolution against wanton taxes.

The Farmers' Alliance has been an important factor in the revolution, but it was bred and vitalized solely by excessive taxation on the necessaries of life. It is simply an organized protest against the continuance of needless war taxes in time of peace, and it logically affiliated with the Democrats both North and South. No Congressman elected by the Alliance will hesitate about repealing the McKinley tariff, and all of them will demand a reduction of tariff taxes far below the standard of the tariff of 1883. There will be divided views among Democrats and Farmers' Alliance Representatives in the next Congress as to measures specially advocated for the farmers, such as the sub-treasury bill, but there will be no conflicting views as to the absolute necessity for severe tariff reform.

It is hoped and expected that the short session of Congress will make any practical effort to correct the colossal blunder of the McKinley bill, but the new Congress will strike squarely for tariff reform by a two-thirds vote, and it is quite probable that the new Senate, even with four new Senators from two new pocket States, may bow to the overwhelming demand for tariff reform to the extent of repealing the McKinley bill. Tariff reform has come and it has come to stay, and if the Republicans refuse to accept it, the people will call to power the men most certain to give them what they want. The people have declared in thunder tones against Debt, Taxes and Profligacy, and they mean that they shall be heard and obeyed.—Philadelphia Times.

FREE SILVER IS COMING.

The free coinage of silver is already being accepted by many of our contemporaries as inevitable when the next Congress assembles. We are by no means positive on that point. It is true that in the last session of Congress a majority of the Democrats in the House were only too eager to put through the free coinage bill which came down from the Senate. But this readiness may have been due in part to a desire to put the Presipent "in a hole," or to a willingness to have a radical bill passed when Congress was in the hands of a Republican majority, on whom the responsibility would rest. With the responsibility in the hands of the Democrats the situation will be changed. The Democratic party has never yet manifested enough progressive spirit to alter radically the policy of Government in any respect. In the whole history of the Nation, the only important act of constructive statesmanship to be credited to that party is the sub-Treasury at New York. To pass a free coinage bill on the eve of a Presidential campaign and in the face of the views held by Mr. Cleveland, in all probability their next Presidential candidate, would indicate a remarkable change in the spirit of that party. There is no knowing however, how strong the influence of the Farmers' Alliance, with its score of Congressmen, may be on the Democrats, and as well on the Republicans. It must be remembered that 15 Senators in the last session kicked over the party traces and voted with the Democrats for a free coinage bill. The Alliance is pledged to free coinage, and the West and South generally, whether Republican or Democratic, demand it. We should say its passage is by no means a certainty, but it is by no means a remote possibility.—The Voice.

THE NORTH DEMOCRATIC.

One of the results of the late election that attracts general attention is the shifting of numbers from the southern to the northern side of the democratic column. The north is democratic for the first time in nearly forty years. The northern democrats have an actual majority in Congress without a southern vote. In old times before the slavery question came to the front, the north was more solidly democratic than the south. Before the republican party was formed, such southern states as Kentucky, Tennessee, North Carolina, Georgia and Louisiana were relied upon as pretty sure to give whig majorities. Outside of New England, the reliable democratic states were in the north and west. Agricultural Michigan, Indiana, Wisconsin, Illinois and Iowa were democratic when the issues were substantially the same as they are now. They were opposed to high tariff, monopolies and special privileges for the few; but when the country divided on the slavery question they espoused the cause of freedom. More than sixty years ago the democratic party was more truly a workingman's party than has been the case with any other great political organization in this country. It was the party of the common people, and the aristocratic whigs called it the "hard-fisted" and the "unwashed" democracy. It believed in Jefferson, supported Jackson, opposed monopoly, and denounced a protective tariff. Farmers and workingmen constituted the voting strength of the party in those days and history is just now repeating itself.—Jackson Patriot.

The Wonderful Work of the Liver.

There are many kinds of biliousness. The liver is an organ on whose working much happiness or misery depends. In its many wonderful and dark recesses it carries on the manufacture of bile. It exerts an almost magical effect on every particle of our food, turns into blood what is available for that purpose and sends away for dismissal from the system such poisonous elements as are taken in with the food or formed from it by imperfect digestion. Brooks' Kidney and Liver Syrup cures every variety of biliousness restores the liver to proper working order, regulates the secretion of the bile, and puts the digestive organs in condition to do their best work. DODD'S CATARRH CURE.

LOCAL AND INTERNAL TREATMENT.

In order to cure catarrh it is necessary to allay the inflammation of the irritated membranes with a soothing application, cleanse the head of the plugging mucous secretions, and heal the discharging ulcers. For cold in the head and nasal catarrh Dodd's local treatment does this without the aid of snuff, douches or fumes. If the disease has extended downward, affecting the bronchial tubes or lungs, digestion and blood, the internal treatment both removes from the system the scattered poison, and by its building-up properties assists nature in restoring the impaired parts. JOBS IN THE BILL.

TRICKS BY WHICH McKINLEY GIVES HIGH PROTECTION.

Underwear and Hosiery Pay a "Terrific Increase of Duty"—The Window Glass Trust—How McKinley Gave It Protection.

For months to come the secret jobs in the McKinley tariff law will be gradually brought to light. The bill is full of these jobs, most of them hidden behind the mere omission of an adjective, the insertion of a two edged proviso, or the far reaching sweep of an iniquitous "basket clause." It is always some scheme of indirection by which some old Polonius in the shape of a trust or other monopoly can "find directions out."

A recent decision of the board of United States appraisers brings one of these jobs to light, and a very ugly one it is. This is the decision in regard to knitted wool underwear and hosiery. Under the old law these goods came under the paragraph which fixed duties on "flannels, blankets, hats of wool, knit goods and all goods made on knitting frames, balmorals," etc. The duties imposed in this provision on knitted wool underwear and hosiery were fixed at figures ranging from 18 cents per pound and 35 per cent. ad valorem to 35 cents per pound and 40 per cent. ad valorem on all goods valued at above 40 cents a pound.

In the new law a trick was performed by substituting the word "fabrics" here for the word "goods," making the paragraph read, "Knit fabrics and all fabrics made on knitting machines or frames." The duty fixed by McKinley on such goods is 44 cents per pound and 50 per cent. ad valorem. This would seem to be an ample increase to satisfy an infant industry which has already fattened on a full round century of protection. But the tariff makers did not mean to put the infant off with these duties. The substitution of that word "fabrics" had a trick behind it which meant enormous additional pap for the hoary infant.

The bill was no sooner in operation than the infant began to protest that it must be fed with a dagger spoon. It pointed out that underwear and stockings are not "fabrics" at all, but are "wearing apparel." But why should the infant want these articles called "wearing apparel?" Because there is a special clause in the bill for wearing apparel with duties higher even than the duties on "fabrics"—that is to say, 49½ cents a pound and 60 per cent. ad valorem. The domestic manufacturers pointed out this paragraph to the board of appraisers, and a letter was shown from Senator Aldrich, the high tariff maker of the senate, in which this eminent statesman said it was the intention of the tariff makers to include underwear and hosiery under this paragraph. After having had a leading part in making the iniquitous McKinley law, the Rhode Island senator was permitted to help to interpret it.

	Cents.		Per Cent.
Under the old law, three grades	18	and	35
	24	and	35
	35	and	40
Apparent duty under the new law	44	and	50
Real duty under the new law, as now fixed	49½	and	60

This rate of duty is so enormous that even protectionists stand aghast at it. The Boston Commercial Bulletin, a high tariff journal, is moved to say, "This is a terrific increase in rate." To give some idea of what these new rates mean it is only necessary to state that even under the old law goods costing $30 a dozen could not be sold at less than $22 a dozen.

Another trick put into the bill at the last moment is the proviso that all foreign window glass shall be packed in boxes containing fifty square feet. The bill as it passed the house last May made an increase in the duty on all sizes of window glass, notwithstanding the fact that the average duties paid last year were considerably more than 100 per cent., but the bill contained nothing about the size of the boxes.

The senate then took hold of the bill and restored the duties to the rates which existed under the old law, and the bill went through the senate with these old duties.

Meantime the $25,000,000 window glass trust was taking shape. On Aug. 19, the very time when the tariff debate was at its height in the senate, there was a meeting of the glass men at the Auditorium, in Chicago. On Sept. 2 they assembled there again to take the next step in forming their combination, and the dispatches to the press said: "They indignantly deny the report that they are engaged in forming a trust." Then, on Sept. 15, The New York Tribune printed a dispatch from Pittsburg which gave a report from Findlay, O., saying: "The new window glass trust is almost ready to go into operation." On Sept. 18 a dispatch from Chicago was printed to the effect that "the western window glass manufacturers have completed their work." The object, it was stated, was to "regulate production and maintain prices." This large combination swallowed up the two smaller trusts already existing, and prices have already been advanced.

The last week in September found the tariff bill in the conference committee of the house and senate. There was a struggle over the glass schedule; McKinley was reported to have stood out for the higher duties as passed by the house. Not being able to get these he accepted a compromise, the largest size of glass being taxed at a higher rate and all other sizes at the rate voted by the senate. The more important part of the compromise, however, to McKinley was the proviso tacked onto the glass schedule, that all window glass should be imported in boxes holding fifty square feet.

This was put into the bill at the instance of the trust, whose agents had meanwhile seen McKinley, in order to secure his aid in their scheme of driving foreign glass out of the market. Foreign glass had been coming in largely in boxes holding 100 square feet. McKinley was asked to compel the foreigners to pack their glass in boxes holding fifty feet, and he did so. As another part of the programme of the trust a rule was made that all domestic glass should be packed in boxes holding 100 feet, an organ of the glass trade saying: "By doubling the capacity of each box lumber and handling expenses will be reduced 40 per cent."

By getting McKinley to force this additional expense upon the foreign glass the trust secured the same result as higher duties would have given—and thus the glass monopolists "by indirection find directions out." Besides the protection given the trust in this indirect way it had already secured the equivalent of an additional 10 per cent. by the McKinley administration law, which went into effect Aug. 1.

McKinley's tenderness for the trust was remembered by the monopolists. The bill had hardly received the president's signature when the report came from Pittsburg that the "fat friers" were at work there among the glass men collecting money to aid McKinley in his election to congress. This was the natural and fitting conclusion to the window glass job.

"The Most Modest People."

Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, the eminent English statesman, is now in this country. In a recent interview he has expressed his opinion of us Americans, laying emphasis on a very curious contradiction in our national character. He says:

"Yours is a great country in every respect. Your natural resources are unsurpassed, and the enterprise and intelligence of your citizens are not excelled in the whole world. Your people have a good opinion of themselves, and justly boast of their prestige, their domain, their growth and their wealth. But when they come down to the consideration of the tariff question they are the most modest people in the universe. They seem to believe that anybody can beat them in the production of everything which is the result of a combination of hands and brains and money."

While we are being so diligently taught by our law makers that "we can't," events are happening every day to prove that "we can." Not long ago a Mr. Jordao, of Rio Janeiro, Brazil, was in Chicago for the purpose of buying machinery to be used by the Union of Industry, a great company recently formed in Brazil "for the purpose of manufacturing almost everything known in the trade." He had previously visited Europe to make investigations there. Referring to those investigations and his observations here, he says:

"I found that American machinery is superior to anything made in Europe. I visited Germany, France, Belgium and England. I found the price of European machinery a little lower, but the American machines are so much more labor saving that I find them more desirable for our use, and I shall make my purchases in this country almost entirely."

The Brazilian is not the only foreigner who has a high opinion of American skill and ingenuity. When the English and German iron men were in this country The New York Tribune printed an interview with Herr E. Schroedter, editor of a paper called Steel and Iron, at Dusseldorf, Germany. The Tribune argues for high protection every day, but it did not hesitate to print the following words from the German editor:

"We were especially desirous to see America, the land of rapid advancement. We have heard of your wonderful technical progress, and we wish to see it with our own eyes and take its lessons with us back to Germany. America has methods and machines which are strange to us. The iron cities of the United States will be revelations to us. It is only natural that a land in which the iron and steel industry has grown so enormously should be possessed of institutions and devices of which we inhabitants of the older countries are still ignorant. The iron works, rolling mills and blast furnaces in Germany still use the old time plants and machines. These are really rocks about Germany's industrial neck. For this reason we desire to study closely the conditions, changes and advances here. It would be a bad thing to shut our doors against these innovations."

We are strong and the Germans are weak; they come to us to learn lessons of progress. But—we need protection from them!

They See It Now.

During the recent campaign the rise of prices played a most important part. Republican journals and speakers denied that there was any advance in prices, and the talk about "McKinley prices" was denounced by The New York Tribune as the "most disreputable journalism."

Since the elections, however, they have opened their eyes to the fact that there has been a rise in prices, and it is even admitted that this was the cause of the great anti-McKinley tidal wave. This is the opinion of Senator Sherman. In explaining the defeat of his party he says: "The women did it; they found the prices higher when they went shopping, and the men had to vote against the tariff bill."

Sugar Trust Profits.

It is stated by Willet and Gray, the highest authority on matters pertaining to the sugar trade, that the profits of the Sugar trust have been $10,000,000 per annum. This is a gain of 20 per cent. on the capital of the trust, which is $50,000,000. But this is a watered capital, the original capital being $15,000,000, the real annual earnings therefore being 65 per cent. And yet the duty on refined sugar in the McKinley law gives the trust higher protection than it had under the old law. It is higher by ten cents per hundred pounds than Claus Spreckels, the great independent refiner of Philadelphia, said he needed in his business.

Epoch

The transition from long, lingering and painful sickness to robust health marks an epoch in the life of the individual. Such a remarkable event is treasured in the memory and the agency whereby the good health has been attained is greatfully blessed. Hence it is that so much is heard in praise of Electric Bitters. So many feel they owe their restoration to health, to the use of the Great Alterative and Tonic. If you are troubled with any disease of Kidneys, Liver or Stomach, of long or short standing you will surely find relief by use of Electric Bitters. Sold at 50c. and $1 per bottle at

PHYSICAL SLAVERY.

We are free American citizens enjoying our personal liberty; but most of us are in physical slavery, suffering from scrofula, salt rheum or some other form of impure blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the great blood purifier which dissolves the bonds of disease, gives health and perfect physical liberty.

NOT ABLE TO WALK.

I was confined to my bed for six months with Rheumatism, not able to walk a step. All of the remedies usually prescribed for this disease having been employed to no effect, I commenced taking S.S.S. I have now taken 11 bottles of this excellent medicine and am on my feet, attending to all my house work as of yore. I feel that I cannot sufficiently express my thanks for the benefit I have received from the use of this medicine.

A DYSPEPTIC'S ARGUMENT

Is a growl, and that growl marks the limit of argument with him. The best way to get him to try a medicine would be to advise against it—but notice how different his tone after using Burdock Blood Bitters.

"I have suffered with Dyspepsia for the last two years. Not long ago I commenced taking B. B. B. I am now on the second bottle and feel like a new man. G. KNOX,
12 Sherwood Ave.,
Binghamton, N. Y."

REPEATED TESTS WITH UNIFORM SUCCESS prove the fact that Burdock Blood Bitters will cure dyspepsia. The reason is plain, it tones the stomach to natural action and keeps the sluice ways of the system free from clogging impurities.

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia and heart disease for nine years and found no relief until I tried Burdock Blood Bitters. Now I am well after taking two bottles.

The figure 9 in our dates will make a long stay. No man or woman now living will ever date a document without using the figure 9. It stands in the third place in 1890, where it will remain 100 years and then move up to second place in 1900 where it will rest for one hundred years.

There is another "9" which has also come to stay. It is unlike the figure 9 in our dates in the respect that it has already moved up to first place, where it will permanently remain. It is called the "No. 9" High Arm Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine.

The "No. 9" was endorsed for first place by the experts of Europe at the Paris Exposition of 1889 where, after a severe contest with the leading machines of the world, it was awarded the only Grand Prize given to family sewing machines, all others on exhibit having received lower awards of gold medals, etc. The French Government also recognized its superiority by the decoration of Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, President of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor.

The "No. 9" is not an old machine improved upon, but is an entirely new machine, and the Grand Prize at Paris was awarded it as the grand est advance in sewing machine mechanism of the age. Those who buy it can rest assured, therefore, of having the very latest and best.

"Seeing is Believing."

And the best lamp ever made, like Aladdin's of old, a "wonderful lamp!" A lamp absolutely non-explosive and unbreakable, which gives a clear, soft, brilliant white light of 85 candle power! Purer and brighter than gas light, softer than electric light, more cheerful than either! That lamp is

"The Rochester."

And with it there is no smoke, no smell, no broken chimneys, no flickering, no sweating, no climbing up of the flame, no "tantrums" nor annoyance of any kind, and it never needs trimming. Its founts (oil reservoirs) being tough rolled seamless brass, with central draft, it is absolutely unbreakable, and as safe as a tallow candle.

Only five years old, and over two million of these lamps in use. It must be a GOOD lamp to make such a telling success. Indeed it is, for lamps may come and lamps may go, but the "Rochester" shines on forever! We make over 2,000 artistic varieties,—Hanging and Table Lamps, Banquet, Study, Vase and Piano Lamps,—every kind, in Bronze, Porcelain, Brass, Nickel and Black Wrought Iron.

Ask the lamp dealer for it. Look for the trade-mark stamp: "THE ROCHESTER." If he hasn't the genuine Rochester and the style you want, or if no lamp-store is near, send to us for free illustrated catalogue (and reduced price-list), and we will box and send you any lamp safely by express, right to your door.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years,

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

STATE S. S. CONVENTION.

Through the kindness of one of the Tecumseh delegates, who attended the Sunday School Convention at Lansing last week, we are enabled to give our readers the following interesting synopsis of the proceedings:

The State S. S. Convention, which was held in Lansing, Dec. 2d, 3rd and 4th, was a grand success both in regard to numbers and interest, and the speakers were among the best in the United States, including Mr. Wm. Reynolds, president of the 5th International S. S. Convention, Peoria, Ill., and Mr. Marion Lawrence of Toledo, who has, Mr. Reynolds thinks, the best Sunday School in America. There were nearly six hundred enrolled delegates and the room was crowded every session. Mrs. E. A. Hough, of Jackson, led the singing and Mr. E. K. Warren, of Three Oaks, made one of the best of presiding officers. Mr. Warren, by the way, is the inventor of "Featherbone" and if he makes money by his invention the Lord will receive his share, we are sure, for his consecration to Sunday School and church work is shown in every word. The first session was held in Representative Hall and standing room was at a premium. The address of welcome by Gov. Luce was not a mere formal word of welcome, but came from a worker in the cause, he having been, as he said, in Sunday School work fifty years. Then, after the response, an address by Rev. Washington Gardner was inspiring indeed to all. The other sessions were held in the M. E. Church. We wish we could give some of the thoughts as they come to us, but that is impossible; but we will jot down a few taken from notes.

"The responsibility of teaching is upon every one who is able. You cannot shirk it. Resigning does not remove it, for it is laid upon you by the Lord." "Our Christian business men are responsible for lack of young men in the Sunday School. Most of them march off home after church to take a nap." "In these days, when boys and girls have nickels to spend for candy and gum, don't talk about a 'penny' collection for Sunday School." "The successful teacher must have love for the Bible and love for souls." "Honor the Bible by using it in the class." "The destiny of America is in the hands of the children." "While we hail with joy all temperance legislation, the evil will never be wiped out till we have behind it an army of young men who hate the stuff and love the Lord." "The Lord Jesus took a little child and set him in the midst of his disciples and he has been there ever since." "Every teacher has an assistant—that is his conduct. What you say is important, but what you do is more important—what you are through the week." "Your work is like a wedge: you are the narrow edge, God's love is the wide. You open that little slit which will let in God's wonderful power over a human heart." "There is no person on earth who has so much poor work done for them as God. If we conducted our business as we do God's work we would be bankrupt in two months." "The angels would consider it an honor to come down to earth and do your work, but God has reserved that for His redeemed children. Still some of them don't want to do it." "I pity any teacher that gets through the lesson before the hour is up. Thirty minutes too long to tell all the wonderful things in these lessons." "A Sunday School without a teachers' meeting is as bad as a church without a prayer meeting." "As well bring the pots and pans onto the dinner table as to bring your lesson helps to Sunday School. They are good in their place, but that is at home." "The teacher is responsible for four things: His presence at class. For the presence of the class. 2d.—For order in the class. 3rd—For teaching the lesson (not merely amusing them.) 4th—He is responsible for the salvation of the scholars in his class and can never get rid of it." "Visit absent ones always by card or in person." "In interdenominational work we get the talent of the United States—yes, the whole world—at our disposal. This meeting is like a great Thanksgiving reunion: different families all come to honor our Father." "Parents must in some way be led to feel the responsibility they have in teaching the lesson at home." "The Sunday School gives to the church 80 per cent of her membership." "Jesus gave three-fourths of his time to teaching." "The Sunday School is not a substitute for the church; it is a part of it,- the teaching service." S.

A LETTER FROM NEW YORK.

Thanksgiving Day has just passed, and no one could plead lack of cause for thankfulness, with such a sky above him and such an atmosphere around. A few flakes of snow were flying in the morning—just enough to spice the air with true Thanksgiving zest—but most of the day was clear and bright.

There was much to interest New York through the day. Services were held in nearly all of the churches and many were richly decorated with flowers. Dr. Taylor preached in the Broadway Tabernacle an able sermon on Luke, 17:17—"Where are the nine?" At the close of the service an offering was made for the benefit of the poor. It is a pleasure to see some of the collections taken up in these city churches. Truly, one cannot feel that the wealthy are all selfish and grasping when he sees the plates piled high with bills. One church in Brooklyn recently gave four thousand dollars in a single collection for foreign missions. New York was liberal in her charities to-day, also. Several thousand pounds of turkeys and chickens were distributed among the various charitable institutions, and dinners given to the poor upon the streets in several places. At the Five Points House of Industry dinner was served to several hundred children which institution cares daily for four hundred homeless little ones. Over fifteen hundred of the outside poor were also fed here to-day. 300 children at the Colored Orphan Asylum were provided with a "turkey dinner," as were also the children at the Howard Home for Little Wanderers, and at many other homes for the destitute.

When we think of the children in this city going hungry, and cold, and untaught, it is with an inward protest that we read of money being solicited for such homes as the one on upper Tenth Avenue, which is provided for keeping in comfort and even luxury friendless cats and dogs. We read "the animals' life at the Home will be made one glad, bright holiday." To what purpose are these lives to be prolonged in expensive pleasure while little waifs, with immortal souls, are left to grow up in ignorance and vice, and one wonders where our criminals come from.

But to return to the subject of the day. Thanksgiving eve. one prominent dry-goods firm presented each of its employes with a fine turkey, weighing not less than ten pounds, the total number given being eight hundred and fifty, and the aggregate weight five and one-half tons. This is the annual custom of the firm.

The Mail and Express gave all their newsboys a dinner, it requiring two restaurants to supply their wants. Most of the day the streets were thronged with people and the trains were crowded to the point of discomfort.

To see the elegant costumes displayed by the ladies one would not dream that there had been recent hard times in Wall Street.

In the afternoon occurred in Eastern Park, Brooklyn, the famous foot-ball game between the Yale and Princeton clubs. From twenty-five to thirty thousand people witnessed the game, and there was much enthusiasm among the spectators over the spirited way in which it was played. The Yale men were victorious and but for one accident all would have passed off brilliantly. A temporary stand, with over 1000 people upon it, gave way, and many were seriously, though none fatally, injured. Defective timber and the thoughtlessness of the occupants, who were jumping on the seats to keep warm, caused the accident.

A free lecture was given in the afternoon at the American Museum of Natural History by Prof. Bickmore, on "The Trees of America and their commercial value." It was illustrated by the stereopticon. In the evening George Kennan delivered one of a course of lectures on "Russia and Siberia," at Broadway Tabernacle.

Next Wednesday evening, Dec. 3rd, Henry M. Stanley is to deliver for the first time, in Chickering Hall, an address entitled, "The Story of the Rear Guard." The audience which attended his reception and lecture at the Metropolitan Opera House, a few weeks ago, was a notable one in point of wealth and culture. The coming lecture will, no doubt, excite unusual interest. MRS. H. A. PUTNAM.

THE OSBORN REUNION.

The account of the Osborn family reunion, which was one of the most enjoyable events that has occurred in Tecumseh in a long time, was unavoidably omitted last week. We take pleasure in giving space to the following communication, and in extending to the family our congratulations.

The children of Mrs. J. W. Osborn met at the home of J. H. Osborn, of this village, on the 26th of November, to celebrate the 81st anniversary of their mother's birthday. There were present on that occasion all the living children save one—Mrs. Lucetta Bemis, of Sylvania, the youngest daughter.

Those present were:—Mrs. S. W. Hart and daughter, of Elkhart, Ind.; J. H. Osborn and family, Tecumseh, Mich.; Mrs. M. C. Lampman and son, Elkhart, Ind.; Mr. George Sherwood and wife, Englewood, Ill; Mr. B. A. Osborn and wife, East Saginaw, Mich.; Mr. Geo. F. Osborn, wife and daughter, Cincinnati, O.; Mr. Lewis A. Osborn, wife and two daughters, Elkhart, Ind.; Mr. Edward E. Osborn and wife, East Saginaw, Mich.; Mr. O. R. Lampman and wife, Chicago, Ill.; son of Mrs. M. C. Lampman, Mr. Edward Osborn, wife and child, of Elkhart, Ind., son of Lewis A. Osborn; D. W. Jacobs, Rockland, Mass.

Very few ladies are so well preserved at 81 as our mother, being able to sew and read comfortably without glasses. She has pieced, within the last three months, one quilt containing 1334 pieces, and another of 960 pieces, and spent many pleasant hours in the perusal of books and papers. She walks a mile at a time with comparative ease.

She was the recipient of a large boquet from her grand-daughter, Mrs. Alice Hoyt, of Mishawaka, Ind.; which was made into smaller boquets and placed by the family upon the graves of the dear ones who had gone before, each child placing a boquet upon the grave of the dear father, who passed from us to a higher life, on June 29th, thirteen years ago.

She also received from Mrs. O. B. DeWolf and Miss Emma Morse boquets of beautiful flowers, and a remembrance in the form of a beautiful book from her old friend, Dr. I. S. Hamilton, who is at this time only waiting to pass over to the better home.

The occasion was an exceedingly joyous one to us all and we separated with an earnest farewell and a promise from each to meet again in a year, with our sister, Mrs. M. C. Lampman, at Elkhart, Ind., if we are all spared to see that day.

Our only regret was that our darling baby sister, Mrs. Bemis, was absent, on account of sickness.

May the kind Father have us all in his tender keeping till we meet again, and may the dear old mother still live to see the return of this day for many years. COM.

THE COSMOPOLITAN.

The modern magazine may be taken as embodying the best literature of the world, as the magazine editor pays the highest prices to novelists, scientists, statesmen, soldiers, and even kings and princes, for the best they can furnish in the literary line. The well-edited magazine becomes an educating influence in the family circle, whose importance cannot be over-estimated. The children as they grow up, are attracted by its illustrations, and so come in time to have a taste for reading. There is always something that new, something that is strange, and something that is very interesting, and we consider that we are doing our readers a positive benefit if we are instrumental in placing such a publication within their reach. The special arrangment which we have made with the Cosmopolitan presents very unusual inducements. That magazine is already recognized as one of the most interesting publications of the day. It is seeking subscribers everywhere and obtaining them. The proprietors believe that the Cosmopolitan has only to be examined to secure a permanent subscriber. That is why we are enabled to make, if the offer is accepted before January next, such a very low rate, by which our readers can obtain the Cosmopolitan for little more the cost of this journal alone. Just think of what the combination means! You obtain your own home journal at about the same price, and have thrown in a magazine which gives you, in a year, 1,536 pages of reading matter by the ablest writers of the world, including over 1,300 pages of illustrations that are unsurpassed in point of interest and execution. Will it not pay you to send a subscription to this office for the HERALD and the Cosmopolitan immediately? Remember, only $3.00 for the two.

The correctness of the maxim "nothing succeeds like success" is well exemplified in Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The most successful combination of alteratives and tonics, it always succeeds in curing diseases of the blood and hence its wonderful popularity.

OBITUARY.

Entered into rest at his home near Tecumseh Mich on Monday morning Dec 1st, 1890, Charles W. Culbertson, aged 71 years. Mr. Culbertson was born in Groveland Livingston Co. N. Y. in 1819. In 1842 he came to Michigan. With the exception of two years at Ann Arbor, his life since then has been passed on the farm where he died. In 1850 he was married to Deborah Goheen who still survives him. In 1864 he became a member of Presbyterian Church of Tecumseh, and in 1872 he was made a ruling elder in that Church, a position which he continued to occupy while he lived. For a long time also he taught a class of adults in the Sunday school. The word of God was his study and from it he drew the principles which governed his life. He was a man of faith and prayer, and enjoyed the confidence of those who knew him; one of his leading traits was a sound conservatism both in secular and religious opinion. In his family he was an affectionate husband and father; and little children were attached to him. For several years he struggled with ill health. For one or two years he was confined almost entirely to the house and at last to his room and bed. Still however in all his infirmity he kept up his interest in affairs of church and state and made it pleasant for his friends to visit him by his cheerful conversation. At the funeral service on Thursday Dec. 4th. his children three sons and one daughter were present with several of his grand-children. Who will say that he was over-confident when he said to his pastor a few weeks ago, "One thing I am certain of. I am certain I shall be saved."

OBITUARY.

William S. Crittenden was born in Phelps Ontario Co. N. Y. July 12th, 1811 and died at the home of his daughter Mrs. James Cobb in Norvell, Mich Nov, 7th, 1890. He was married to Mary M. Hall Aug. 29th. 1832, in Phelps N. Y. and soon after their marriage removed to Michigan Territory and settled in Saline township, in 1840 he with his family moved to Lenawee Co. and resided in the vicinity of Clinton for many years, where his wife died in 1847. Five children: Norman Crittenden of Jackson mich, Willard M. and Burt E. Crittenden of Franklin Mich, Mrs. James Cobb of Norvell Mich. Mrs. Charles B. Cobb of Canyon City, Oregon, mourn the loss of a kind and devoted father. The funeral service was held at the home of James Cobb Rev. Patchin of Franklin officiating. His remains were taken to Clinton for burial.

CAMBRIDGE FARMERS CLUB.

The Farmers Club met at the beautiful and capacious home of our esteemed friends Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Blackmar for a good and profitable time and we believe that none were disappointed, both socially and intellectually. Sleighing was good, the day was clear and fine, and a very large gathering of members and guests. Soon after the Club was called to order, refreshments were served in abundance to satisfy their temporal wants. Program carried out as follows:—Singing by Club, Prayer by Chaplain, Duett by Mr. Allie Monaghan and Miss Hattie Daniels, Paper by Mrs. M. Reed, Subject: Example has a better influence over society than Precept. Discussion was lead by C. Cooper, M. Reed, Rogers, C. H. Dewey, A. F. Graves, Albert Dewey, John Staford, Mrs. J. Monaghan and others engaged in discussion.

Recess—Discussion completed.
Recitation—Anna Graves.
Essay—Mattie Graves.
Song—Allie Monaghan, and Hattie Daniels.
Adjourned.—Next meeting at Mr. Marion Case's, first Saturday in January 1891.

DANIEL E. SOPER.

Our Secretary of State elect is receiving congratulations by the wholesale from his numerous friends about the State, and what is more, he deserves them all. Here are a few comments from the newspapers:

Daniel E. Soper has received over 300 letters and telegrams of congratulation from far and near, and still coming in.—Newaygo Democrat.

The Saginaw Globe in its account of the Democratic jollification recently held in that city, says: "Daniel E. Soper, the newly-elected Secretary of State, whose first launching on life's sea was as a newsboy, gave a rattling ten minute speech, full of pungent good things and expressing the situation in terse, percussive style, evoking great enthusiasm and loud and prolonged cheers."

Daniel E. Soper, the newly-elected Secretary of State, was once a newsboy peddling papers in Hillsdale. Last Saturday he attended the Democratic ratification held in that city, and was given an ovation by the Hillsdale people without regard to party. Dan, as his old patrons call him, is not inclined to sentimentality, but a suspicious moisture gathered in his eyes and his voice was a little shaky when he faced his old friends at Underwood's opera house in that city last Saturday evening and received a welcome that would have made even a stoic's pulse throb more rapidly—Coldwater Republican.

It is Good Work to Give Health.

The only remedy for blood disorders is one that will expel the germs of disease, and make the blood pure and rich. That is best effected by Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y., a medicine of great value in the treatment of all blood disorders and diseases of the Kidneys. It tones the system and helps to do good work.

TIFFANY IRON WORKS.

As this new institution has now begun work and has been nicely launched upon the sea of business it seems to be a fitting time to give a brief resume of the inception of the enterprise, its present condition and its future prospects.

Mr. Geo. S. Tiffany, who can justly be called the father of the enterprise, has had considerable experience in getting up tile and brick making machinery and has taken out some patents on inventions of that kind. There was considerable informal talk during the spring about starting a foundry and finally a private meeting was called in July last at Mr. Tiffany's residence to "talk up" the matter. It was then resolved to go ahead and make an effort to raise $30,000 as capital stock. A public meeting was held at the Council Rooms on Thursday, July 24th, last, Lucius Lilley acting as Chairman and Chas. Burridge Secretary. The canvassing committee reported the stock all taken. Articles of association were signed and the following persons were chosen directors: E. G. Cook, W. H. Mather, J. S. Strong, C. F. Patterson, C. A. Wright and Geo. S. Tiffany. The Directors met on Saturday, July 26th, and elected Geo. S. Tiffany President, and C. A. Wright Secretary and Treasurer. In the mean time a contract had been made for the purchase of a site, near the south-east intersection of the Lake Shore and Mackinaw roads. Their lot, which is shaped like an L, extends to both roads. On the Monday following ground was broken for laying a side track from the Mackinaw road.

From that time work was rushed as rapidly as the materials could be gathered to work with. The trenches for the walls were dug the next week and upon the 18th day of August work was begun upon the foundation walls. The main building is 196 feet in length by 50 feet in width. A separate building, to be used exclusively for a blacksmith shop, is 24 by 34 feet in size. Both have stone foundations with walls of brick and slate roofs. There is also a smaller brick building with slate roof, in which to store paints, oils, etc., and two large sheds for fuel. The main shop is divided into two rooms: The machine room, 48 by 125 feet, and the foundry, 48 by 70 feet. They are both warmed by steam pipes, which are strung overhead instead of near the floor. This is a new method of fixing steam heating pipes and Mr. Tiffany claims it to be a great improvement over the old plan. The method certainly gives a very even and agreeable heat. A small lean-to on the east side of the main shop affords a location for the boiler, while the engine is planted in the machine room. Both were purchased from the Lansing Iron Works, and are of 70 horse power. The engine is a beauty and runs like a top. In fact all the accessories to the engine and boiler are very complete, all the latest plans and improvements having been adopted. The main line shaft runs the entire length of the machine room, that for the iron working machinery being overhead and that for the wood working machinery being placed under the floor.

The first casting was made a week ago last Saturday and was very successful. Everything worked as smoothly as though the shop had been running for six months. Two heats were taken last week and another one yesterday, all without the least hitch. The cupola is constructed upon an entirely new plan, which is the invention of Mr. Ingraham, by which the operation of melting the iron is performed much more expeditiously than under the old style of cupola. This is the first foundry in which Mr. Ingraham's theory has been put to a practical test and he is more than satisfied with its success.

The wood working machinery is now all in position and a part of the iron working machines. The remainder of these latter are expected soon and when they shall be placed the factory will be in complete working order. The large, double-balanced windows provide sufficient light and ventilation and make the factory a healthful and pleasant place for men to work in. There is an abundance of both light and pure air in every nook and corner of the shop. Mr. H. C. Ingraham has had full charge of the construction of the works and also of the arrangement of the shafting, machinery, etc., and will act as superintendent of the manufacturing department. Mr. Tiffany will act as business Manager, he being the President and largest stockholder of the company.

THE HERALD FOR 1891.

The HERALD is still in the ring, fully prepared to fill its accustomed place during the year of grace 1891. The 15th day of November last completed a cycle of sixteen years under its present management, and Providence permitting, the "old reliable" is likely to sail right along under the same pilot for sixteen years to come.

It is needless to inform the public what to expect in our columns during the ensuing twelve months. The general policy of the paper is well known and its record has been made. First and foremost, it will aim to be a first-class local newspaper, to act as a faithful chronicler of all local happenings of importance within the territory of its circulation. In this respect it will continue to lead all competitors.

Recognizing the stringency of the times caused by excessive taxation, we shall endeavor to accommodate the necessities of our patrons by placing our rates at the lowest possibl point, and our terms for 1891 have been adjusted with that end in view.

OFFER NO. ONE.

We have made arrange[illegible] with that wide-awake illustrate[illegible] g-azine, The American Fa[illegible] lished at Fort Wayne, Ind. [illegible] read by nearly 200,000 farmers, by which that great publication will be mailed direct to the address of any of our subscribers who will pay up all arrearages and a year in advance. The subscription price of the American Farmer is $1.00 per year. It costs you nothing. The two papers at our full rate of $1.50 per year.

OFFER NO. TWO.

The Great Divide is the title of a new monthly magazine published at Denver, Colorado, which has already taken a position among the best periodicals of this country. Our Club offer with the Great Divide is the most liberal one ever extended to our patrons. The Magazine for one year, the HERALD for one year and the Gemstone Cabinet for a premium will be given for $2.00. A sample copy of the magazine and a specimen of the Gemstone Cabinet can be seen at this office.

OFFER NO. THREE.

We offer reduced rates for the HERALD alone when payment is made strictly in advance. We earnestly urge upon our patrons the benefits of this plan. Call at our office in January, pay for your paper one year in advance, and thus secure the lowest cash rates. By so doing you will help yourself and help us at the same time. We will furnish the HERALD alone

THE SOUL OF NATURE.

Is the wind the soul of Nature?
Look, how the wild leaves blow!
Restless as human creatures
They flutter to and fro.
There is moaning in the pine-tree,
And whispering in the oak,
And a wailing at the window
As if a spirit spoke.

Is the sun the soul of Nature?
See how the buds awake
And spread their tender petals
When day begins to break.
How the brooks rejoice and glitter,
The slow, broad rivers smile,
And forest-tops light up and laugh
For many a leafy mile.

Is the sea the soul of Nature?
Hear how it raves and sighs,
Sometimes with breast of gleaming glass
It mirrors heaven's sweet eyes,
Sometimes with storm and thunder
Its milk-white surf it pours
In splendid crests of eager rage
Along the shrinking shores.

Ah! cold and mighty Mother,
Where is the soul we seek?
Thou hast no weeping for our woe,
No ear for song or shriek.
Thy heart is seamless granite,
Thou canst not heal or save;
Thou givest to the baby flowers,
And unto man—a grave!

—Rose Terry Cooke, in Youth's Companion.

ONE NIGHT OF TERROR.

A Drummer's Experience in a London Boarding-House.

I WAS a young commercial traveler going to London for the first time. On the steamer the sensation had been the many mysterious disappearances that were occurring in that great city, the victims being strangers like myself. From what was known they were robbed and murdered in their sleep by means of trap-door communications from the cellar to the floor under their beds and their bodies were buried in the cellar.

Owing to my blunder in taking a wrong train, it was long past midnight when I reached London station, and my resident friend was, of course, not there to meet me. The weather was drizzling and foggy, with a nasty chill striking into me, and, forlorn and tired, I took the first cab that was offered, telling the wicked-looking driver to take me to a hotel. By and by I began to notice that we were a long while in getting there, and that we seemed to be going through a slum quarter of the town, but just as I was feeling a little bit nervous about it the cab stopped and the cabman, taking my valise, helped me across the walk to what appeared in the dark to be more of a lodging-house than a hotel. Before I had time to question he had me in its ill-smelling hall, and after whispering to a vile-looking man holding a smoky candle he hurried off, saying the cab fare would be on the bill. Then my host, after locking the hall door and putting the key in his pocket (which proceeding I did not like), and hearing me say I would not eat, picked up my bag and led the way upstairs, drawing from me as he did so particulars about myself and journey that I didn't wish him to know, for I was already suspicious of the surroundings from which it was then too late to retreat.

Setting the candle on the bureau in a back bed-chamber he wished me a good night, and shutting the door, left me alone in my misery. Then I collected what wits I had and took a survey of the situation.

The gloomy room was big and carpeted; it had a double bedstead in the far corner, a washstand by the two windows, chairs, table and the high bureau, where the light, only a small bit of candle, as I then saw, was flickering dismally.

Stepping to a window I quietly tried to raise it, when the deep growling and clanking of a chain from some fierce brute below made me desist. I peered through the crack but nothing was visible in the blackness of that night. Then, all of a sudden, the tales of those murders told me on shipboard came to mind and for a moment I think I fainted.

When I came to myself I vigorously drank from my whisky flask, preparatory to searching under the bed. The candle was fast burning itself out as I placed it on the floor and crawled beneath the bedstead to look for that cellar-trap door, calling me a fool for my fears while doing so.

I reached the musty carpet in the far corner by the wall and nearly fainted again when I found it was not tacked. Using what courage I had left I carefully lifted it, and, feeling softly, my hand touched a cold iron ring sunk in the boards, and by the dim and expiring candle light I made out the square outline of the trap door—just where I had been told it was.

When I got back on my chair, strange to say, my fright and trembling was over and I was perfectly calm, as I had need to be.

Cautiously trying the door I was not surprised to find it bolted on the outside. I raised the window higher, but the ugly bull-dog below warned me to stop and quenched my idea of escaping in that direction. I was smart enough to make some noise, so the robbers and murderers waiting to come up might hold off a little longer—till I slept. There was no place in the room—not even a closet—to hide in, and I had no weapon but my jack-knife. Then I thought of the bureau, and pulling the drawers open found they were empty.

I quickly took the two lower drawers out (there was no time to lose for the light was nearly gone and in the dark I would be an easy victim) and with my knife managed to cut out the thin bottoms. Then replacing the drawers, first squeezing myself and the cut boards inside the big bureau, I crouched there and waited in the now pitch dark room.

It seemed an age before I heard the awful sound that I was listening for of the trap being raised. From my position I could look under the bed through a crack in my hiding place and see a dull glare of light shoot upward from the shaft. Then it dimmed a bit as slowly and silently the shadowy outline of a head appeared out of the hole. Then it darkened completely and I could hear the devil working his way like a snake out from under the bedstead straight toward me. Then the form stood by the bedside and listened. The suspense of that moment was horrible, and I feared the ticking of my watch in the dreadful stillness would discover me. Then I knew the bed was being examined and that I was missed, for the noiseless figure moved over to the window, which I luckily had left open. I heard a low whistle from the trap and the dog growl and then the shadow struck a match and seemed to be looking over the room. Then with an oath he whistled twice and another form with a bulls-eye lantern in his teeth crawled from the hole under the bed and with his companion began searching the room. Had I left a splinter on the floor by the bureau? A cold sweat poured from me at the thought. I heard them whispering that I must have escaped through the window and curse the dog for letting me. Then they said something about the bureau and, coming to it, opened the top drawer. But the noise they made prevented my breathing being heard. Then they started to open the next drawer when a female's voice came from the hall which stopped them. In answer to something they said I heard the bolt withdrawn and all three went out leaving me, thus far, untouched and the door open.

Not daring to move, of course, I waited for what was coming next, and soon by the sounds from the street and a glimmer of daylight shining through my peek-hole I knew to my great joy that the dawn had at last arrived.

For a long, long hour I kept in my hiding spot hoping that I could rush down-stairs and from the outer door—if it chanced to be unlocked. After awhile some one went out of it, and my time to escape or be killed in doing so was come. Slowly by degrees I pushed open the bottom drawer and crept on the floor to the hall. Every thing was still. Then I sneaked softly down, tried the knob, and, hurrah, I was outside, down the street and around the corner, and didn't stop flying till a policeman had me by the collar and in the station-house. There I told my story.

The next night the murderers' den was surrounded, and all hands, including my cabby, were captured, while under the cellar ground was a graveyard of no less than eight persons. I also had the pleasure of seeing the hole which was prepared for me.—H. C. Dodge, in Goodall's Sun.

The Police Force of London.

The metropolitan police force is not under the control of any local authority, but is directed by commissioners who are responsible to the Home Office of the general Government. There is a strong demand in London for the transfer of the police authority to the county council, and the subject has provoked much discussion. It is urged that the concentration of imperial and national enterests in London is so vastly important that the higher authorities should maintain control of the police in protection of all those central concerns that pertain to the greatest capital in the world. Ultimately a compromise will probably be reached. The county council ought certainly to have some share in the police administration of the metropolis.—Century.

Genius and Talent.

Genius looks to the cause of life; it proceeds from within outward, whilst talent goes from without inward. Talent finds its models and methods and ends in society, exists for exhibition, and goes to the soul only for power to work; genius is its own end, and draws its means and the style of its architecture from within, going abroad only for audience and spectators, as we adapt our voice and phrase to the distance and character of the ear we speak to. All your learning of all literature would never enable you to anticipate one of its thoughts or expressions, and yet each is natural and familiar as household words.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

KEEPING CABBAGES.

The different methods of keeping cabbage during the winter are as numerous, almost, as are the varieties of cabbage grown, and nearly all methods have their records of success and failure. There is, no doubt, says the American Agriculturist, that much depends upon the meteorological conditions of the winter, and that a method which proved eminently successful during a severe winter would give indifferent results during a mild or open one. The cabbage grower must, therefore, either strike a medium or else adapt his methods to suit the varying conditions of the winter.

There are two of the different methods of storing cabbage which we have found satisfactory. One is to select a high piece of gound to afford natural drainage. A light mat or bed is made with dry straw, about the width of two cabbage heads, and as long as may be desired. The cabbage are pulled up, carefully carted to this place, and then, having the outside leaves neatly closed against the heads, the plants are placed, roots uppermost, on the straw, and as closely together as possible, making two compact rows. A few inches of straw are put carefully on the cabbage, and the earth is thrown on gradually to the depth of about a foot, drawing in the roots to form the top of the ridge. The earth is taken alongside of the row, thus affording additional drainage, while the mound when finished must be well packed down with the back of the spade. When this is finished, a row of corn fodder is piled along each side to still further protect from the weather. This will keep off both rain and cold, if properly placed. In taking out any cabbage during the winter, at once cover up the row to protect the remaining heads.

Another method is to place the cabbage roots downward instead of inverting them, and then pursuing the same general plan as above. If there is a root cellar (not underneath the dwelling-house, as vegetables should never be stored there), the cabbage can be stored there in almost the same manner, except that no litter need be used, and instead of earth a small quantity of sand, there being but little covering needed to protect from cold when thus sheltered, and what is used being to keep the cabbages from drying out. In whatever manner the cabbages are stored, if it is desired to keep in prime condition, the roots must not be removed until the heads are needed for use or shipment. Rats and mice are very fond of this vegetable, and growers must do all they can to keep them out. As the straw used in storing makes fine nests for them and the cabbage affords plenty to eat, these rodents naturally like to find such quarters to pass the winter.

TO PREVENT COWS BACKING.

A Very Good Device, Simple and Easily Made.

Our illustration shows an effectual method by which a cow can be kept from backing off of her stall, especially when lying down to rest. As shown, take a light pole and place behind the cow, on a line with the gambrel joints as the animal stands on the floored stall, and about six inches behind her. A pole long enough to pass two cows is more convenient than a longer or shorter one. To each end of this a piece of small rope, suspended from the ceiling above, is fastened with a wire fence staple. A piece of wire through the rope, high enough to clear a man's head; is bent into a hook upon which to hang the pole when not in use; a second wire staple being driven partly into the pole to serve as an eye for this purpose. The pole being light does not interfere with the cow's movements to and fro, and she may back off against it and get the benefit of a change in position, but in doing so the pole dangles at her heels and she soon moves away from it. The pole is but very little in the way when doing the stable work, as it can be swung out at either end, or hung up out of the way; and it is so low that a person can easily step over it. If it is desired to keep the cow from getting off of the stall floor except when led out, then fasten a small rope from partition, between the stalls, to the pole. By the device given the cow can be kept clean. Use a halter in tying the cow, so as to give her all the freedom possible.—Orange Judd Farmer.

The Blanket.

We are reminded by the advice given in a contemporary "to get out the blanket now," that it is a good time to preach our annual little sermon on the subject; and we begin by saying, do not get out the blanket. Indeed that is pretty much all we have to say upon the subject. Your horse does not need a blanket any more than you need ear muffs; and the animal will not need it for many weeks to come. Even in cold weather blanketing should be done with the greatest possible judgment. A horse sweats easily under a blanket. If he is blanketed when the weather is only moderately cool, after driving, he will sweat quite easily. The skin is active after exercise, just as the skin of a man is after he has taken a brisk walk. He sits down and feels hot, and perhaps perspires. Now if the horse becomes sweaty under the blanket the chances for taking cold when it is removed are mighty good.—Western Rural.

A QUART of coal tar in half a barrel of water should always be kept on hand. Stir it up well and sprinkle the water over the floors of the house and against the sides; it will kill the lice and purify the house.

THE CLEVELAND BAY.

The English Coach Horse Described by Secretary Sterricker.

The general characteristics of the Cleveland Bay horse have so often been described that it is not necessary to repeat them here; suffice it to say that as a first-class coach and general-purpose horse he not only maintains his ground, but is to-day a greater favorite than he ever was, the failure of the more recently-established breeds of coach horses to produce a uniform color and type in their offspring having made many converts to the old and firmly-established Cleveland Bay. Crossed on mares of entirely different character his progeny show his potentiality in their unvarying color and form, making them easily mated and good to sell at remunerative prices. Their lofty style and noble carriage commend them to the wealthy as the finest large coach horse extant, and their free, bold action, endurance, size and power place them right at the front for coaching and farm work.

I had occasion during the hottest weather of the past summer to be looking for some good teams of coach horses, and stopping at a farmer's whom I knew had been breeding to a Cleveland Bay asked if he had any thing likely to suit me. He said: "Why, yes; I have a four-year-old horse that I think would suit you, but I can not spare him yet; he is the best horse I have on the place, and can stand more heat and work than any horse I ever owned. My son, who is working him, will be home in a few minutes, and then you can see him." I waited and saw the horse—a typical coach horse, and one I would have paid a very handsome price for. Notwithstanding the heat and hard work when trotted out his head and tail went up in a manner that indicated the true character of the animal which would have been just as much in his place in the family carriage as he was on the farm.

I have found teams of well-mated half-blood geldings good to sell, and have sold quite a number this summer at excellent figures, and have covered a large area of country, some having gone to Connecticut and others as far west as Old Mexico.

Still a greater demand exists in Europe, and so satisfactory do we consider the get of the Cleveland Bay coupled with ordinary mares that we have made arrangements for shipping a car-load or two to England during November next, and should this venture prove as satisfactory as we anticipate we expect to make it as much a part of our business as importing full-blooded stock for breeding purposes. If we draw on England for a large percentage of our breeding stallions it is only fair that we should reciprocate by sending her a portion of our good roadsters and coach horses. It is not a difficult matter to "pick up" any number of the former, but the latter are not so easy to find. I have been on more than one wild-goose chase to see what were described as No. 1 teams of coach horses, and when I have got to see them found they were not coach horses at all, in the proper sense of the term. I have found the only way to get well-mated horses of good color, style and size, is to go into a neighborhood where a good Cleveland Bay has been kept, and there I can find just what the market calls for. There is no doubt it takes a little more judgment to breed a coach horse than it does a draft horse, but if farmers will breed their light mares to a good Cleveland Bay they will have some good coach horses to market at no very distant day.—Breeder's Gazette.

Electric Treatment Good.

Wasting of the muscles of the shoulder may be due to any continued foot lameness, including laminitis or founder. It may also be due to severe strain of the muscles. The displacement of the shoulder blades is only a seeming displacement, the wasting of the muscles causing the bones to become unnaturally prominent. If the trouble is of long standing, cure is not to be expected. Treatment consists in relieving any lameness which may have caused the trouble and in rubbing the shoulder several times daily, the following liniment being used night and morning: Camphorated soap liniment 7 oz. and water of ammonia 1 oz. the bottle to be kept well corked. The horse should have light carriage work only. If there is a veterinarian at hand who can treat the case with electricity, he should be employed. A horse whose shoulder muscles are swollen and inflamed because of strain should be given from five to seven drams of aloes or a quart of raw linseed oil and should have the shoulders wrapped with blankets wrung out in hot water. This treatment well carried out may subdue the inflammation and prevent wasting of of the muscles. An interesting fact in connection with this trouble is that the wasting may become complete within three weeks after the infliction of the injury.—Farm and Home.

A Model Tie-Up.

My tie-up has been in use for eight or ten years and gives the best satisfaction. I have taken pains to visit improved barns and have not yet seen any thing that equals this. The great mistake generally made is in having the mangers too deep. The cattle reach forward too far and soil the platform. My mangers are but twenty inches deep. The stalls are six feet wide with a stanchion three inches from the partition on each side. This gives three feet for each cow and I find it sufficient. The floor timbers have two-inch pieces under the walk and a piece two by three at one end and three by three at the other end of the platform. The walk, manure drop and the under floor of the platform are made of inch spruce or pine, running lengthwise of the tie-up. —S. S. Soule, Cumberland County, Me.

A MODEL TIE-UP.

A SWILL AND TEMPER-SAVER.

This is Both Simple and Ingenious—Make One for Yourself.

Any one who has fed pigs and been annoyed by their getting into the trough while it was being cleaned out, and then after they are driven away pushing back and getting their feet in the trough just in time to have the swill poured all over their heads and much of it spilt, will appreciate the contrivance represented in our illustration, engraved from a sketch furnished by Mr. Willard F. Hallock, Middlesex County, Conn. The trough is fastened inside of the pen; two boards are hinged so as to swing in over the trough. In the middle of each board is a strip fixed to slide up and down. sweep out and pour the swill. Mr. Pig is on the other side of the boards and must bide his time. In Fig. 1 the trough is shown as closed against the pigs; in Fig. 2, free to their access.—American Agriculturist.

THEY DON'T PAY.

Some Experiments with Commercial Fertilizers.

It would appear from experiments at the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station that the use of commercial fertilizers was not a very paying investment for Ohio farmers. Manufacturers of such fertilizers have been doing a thriving business in this State for the past decade at least. It is estimated that not less than a million of dollars is annually expended by the farmers of Ohio for commercial fertilizers, and according to the chemical analyses of such fertilizers, over fifty per cent of them possess no fertilizing value whatever.

From developments at the agricultural station it is plain to be seen why Ohio farmers have not grown rich from the use of such fertilizers, for in all cases where they have made tests with corn, oats and wheat, their testimony has been that the increase in the crop was not sufficient to justify the use of commercial fertilizers, or in other words, was not sufficient to make up the difference in expense. In the case of wheat, the following is the testimony verbatim:

"The result of six years' work is that, as a rule, no more wheat has been harvested from the plats treated with commercial fertilizers than from those receiving no fertilizers, whereas the manures of the farm have produced a marked increase of crop when judiciously used." And again: "The most important conclusion to be drawn from these tests is, however, that in very many, if not the majority of cases, neither wheat nor corn will return sufficient increase of crop to cover the cost of any artificial fertilizer at present prices of grain respectively."

This is certainly discouraging, and shows why the average farmer of this State has been able to receive so little return for his labor for the past decade of years, or more. From these developments at the experiment station the Ohio farmer must conclude that if he would make his business a success he must resort to other than commercial fertilizers as a means of recuperating his worn-out soils. So far nothing seems to answer every purpose better than barnyard manure. This means the keeping of more stock and the feeding out of nearly all the feed substance raised on the farm. It means a careful hoarding of all the refuse of the stables and the barnyard. It means a resort to "Sam's" ensilage and T. B. Terry's covered barnyard. The writer lays no claim to the gift of prophecy, but it does look as though the commercial fertilizer must go.—H. Richards, in Ohio Farmer

HORTICULTURAL NOTES.

The following horticultural notes are from the columns of the Practical Farmer:

WHEN cold, freezing weather is anticipated, green tomatoes should be picked and placed under cover in a warm, sunny place, where they will ripen up in a short time.

BEFORE frosts catch bedding plants, secure some cuttings for next spring's use. It is often left till too late for fear of spoiling the plants for display now, but it can be but a few more weeks before the cold will finish them for the season in most places, and stock should be preserved now.

EUONYMUS radicans is a hardy evergreen of slow growth, useful for climbing up trees and walls. At one time it was hoped it could be used as English ivy in Europe for the covering of houses, but, in many places, it is subject to attacks of scab, which renders its cultivation undesirable.

As SOON as your vegetable crops are past kitchen use clear them out. Do not suffer them to seed. A seed crop exhausts the soil more than two crops taken off in an eatable condition, and, for seed, the refuse of the kitchen is not likely to give any thing but degenerate stock. Good seed saving is an art by itself, always claiming the earliest and best to insure perfect stock.

A PRESENT TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

It is with pleasure that we announce to our many patrons that we have made arrangements with the wide awake, illustrated farm magazine, the American Farmer, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., and read by nearly 200,000 farmers, by which that great publication will be mailed direct, FREE, to the address of any of our subscribers who will come in and pay up all arrearages on subscription and one year in advance from date, and to any new subscriber who will pay one year in advance. This is a grand opportunity to obtain a first class farm journal free. The American Farmer is a large 16-page journal, of national circulation, which ranks among the leading agricultural papers. It treats the question of economy in agriculture and the rights and privileges of that vast body of citizens—American Farmers—whose industry is the basis of all material and national prosperity. Its highest purpose is the elevation and ennobling of Agriculture through the higher and broader education of men and women engaged in its pursuits. The regular subscription price of the American Farmer is $1.00 per year. IT COSTS YOU NOTHING. From any one number ideas can be obtained that will be worth thrice the subscription price to you or members of your household, YET YOU GET IT FREE. Call and see sample copy.

FORTY YEARS MARRIED.

Wednesday, the 10th, being the fortieth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Garlinghouse, their three sons planned to surprise them. Accordingly between six and seven o'clock in the evening about fifty of their neighbors and friends met at their home. The surprise was complete and the supper which the sons provided was all that could be desired. The boys, who never do things by halves, had purchased an elegant full set of china, which was tastefully arranged in the parlor while the old folks were at supper. Uncle John Margeson, a life long friend of the bride and groom, made a very neat presentation speech; it was nearly twelve o'clock when the company broke up. Those who were there will not soon forget it. It was one of the occasions when the old grow young, and all, both old and young, enjoy themselves. Mr. Garlinghouse is the youngest of a family, six of whom are now living; the combined ages of the six being something over 458 years. His oldest brother, David, nearly 86, was present and enjoyed the occasion as well as the younger ones.

Our Compliments to the Tribune.

It is amazing that for a dollar a year The New York Tribune can provide a weekly newspaper, which will contain such features as are proposed for 1891. No one can read what The Tribune has to say for itself without being struck with the sincerity, patriotism of purpose, and enterprise of that great national newspaper. It has collected a large corps of special contributors comprising many of the most prominent men in America, and will have long articles from them on leading questions of the day; and it is noteworthy that The Tribune, true to its own patriotic purposes, has made up its list of writers, without going abroad for any of them. We risk little in saying that its enterprise in securing Roswell G. Horr, of Michigan, to explain the Tariff to the farmers of the country, will receive a rich reward. Secretary Rusk, Julius C. Burroughs of Michigan, P. T. Barnum, and a long list of other special writers will supply important essays. Readers will do well to send for a sample copy before making their subscriptions, for the coming winter.

December trade has opened up in good shape with our merchants.

Remember the War Concert next week Friday evening, Dec, 19th.

The weather growlers have been taking a rest for the past ten days.

A masquerade dance will be given at Armory Hall on Christmas Eve, Dec. 24th.

Reserved seats for the second entertainment went off with a rush this forenoon.

The additions to the Commercial Telegraph line are keeping manager Bowen busy these days.

Mr. Enoch Tindall visited his daughter in Toledo last week and attended Stanley's lecture while there.

Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Babbitt and Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Slayton attended the State Sunday School Convention at Lansing last week.

Frank Bowerman of Raisin is selling a patent farm fence, which he claims to be the best thing yet invented. He controls the County of Lenawee.

David Garlinghouse of Napoleon is spending the present week with relatives in Tecumseh. He always happens down this way about this time of year.

Rev. Oscar Heck has accepted a call from the South Rome Baptist church on a year's engagement. We believe the new arrangement will be acceptable to both pastor and people.

Owing to the extra work attending the issuing of our holiday extra last week, several matters of local importance were crowded out. We have endeavored to catch up this week.

H. D. Cutting, of Clinton, who has made chemical fire protection a study for years, has secured a situation with the Muskegon company, and will have charge of putting their apparatus in buildings.

The old Ridgeway telegraph line has become the Macon branch of the C. T. line. If members of the Commercial Telegraph line wish to call up any one on the Macon branch, they should first call Q. S. and then M. B. C.

Prof. Maybee, of Blissfield, used the birch on a pupil, last week Wednesday. This started family pride in the youngster's dad, who started in to take vengeance out of the professor. Result—The dad wears one eye in mourning. Moral—Don't fool with an agile young country school teacher. —Adrian Times.

Harper & Brothers have just published the seventh number of the Franklin Square Song Collection, compiled by Professor J. P. McCaskey. The collection now includes fourteen hundred popular songs, hymns and melodies, besides a large amount of reading matter on musical subjects.

The following scholars have been neither absent nor tardy during the fall term of twelve weeks, in fractional district No. 1, Raisin, Miss Minnie Westcott, teacher: Lena Lewis, Alzina Lanning, Abby Jay, Maude Osborn, Jimmie Lanning, Millard Russell, Howard Mathews, Vernie Russell, Clarence Jay, Johnnie Heath.

THE OVIDE MUSIN CONCERT.

This distinguished and phenomenal artist was born in Liege, Belgium, in 1854. At the early age of eight he evinced so remarkable a talent and strong inclination for music that his father sent him to the Royal Conservatory of Liege, where he received the first prize for violin playing when but a boy of eleven. Meanwhile his father endeavored to persuade him to abandon music as a profession, but this was impossible. The boy rapidly developed a musical talent which is only born of true genius.

In 1870, Leonard, the celebrated violin player and composer, having heard Musin, was so well pleased with him that he tried, and succeeded, in persuading his parents to let him chose the career of an artist, and from that time to the present his progress has been a succession of triumphs and ovations, both on the Continent of Europe and in America.

In Vienna he played in the celebrated Philharmonic Concerts, under the direction of Hans Richter, who, in the name of the board, sent him a very handsome letter complimenting him in the very highest terms. It is generally conceded by the best critics that the world has never seen more than one, or, at the most, two violinists who could be considered the equal of Musin. Certain it is, that he now overshadows all others who have been seen or heard on the concert stage.

Musin has received higher prices in large cities than any other virtuoso, and his playing on "one" string is well worth the price of admission, He was recently paid $300 for two solos, and often receives $200. His receipts on fifteen concerts in San Francisco last year, with three artists, averaged over $1,200 per night.

With the excellent support to be given Musin for the season of 1890-'91, there is no reason why he should not outrival all previous efforts.

M. Musin is a violinist of international reputation, and he more than sustained what has frequently been said of him heretofore by his renditions last evening. He proved that his successful career as an artist was due not only to ability but to a warm heart, which made him enter into his work with a fervor seldom equalled. M. Musin has played in public since his eleventh year, and has traveled from Tobolk, in Siberia, to San Francisco. The routine of his production was something remarkable, and every individual piece drew forth rounds of applause, and he was forced to give an encore repeatedly.—Washington Post.

ALBERT J. SLAIGHT, EXECUTOR.

Justin McCarthy

Is Chosen Leader by the Anti-Parnellites.

GLADSTONE'S ANSWER TO THEIR RESOLUTIONS.

They Will Issue a Manifesto to the Irish People—Gladstone's Letter Throws Things in a Worse Fix Than Ever.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—The majority of the Nationalists under the chairmanship of Justin McCarthy, met after the breaking up of the full meeting and unanimously adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, that we, members of the Irish Parliamentary party, solemnly renew our adhesion to the principle in devotion to which we have never wavered, that the Irish party is, and always must remain, independent of all other parties.

Resolved, that we further declare that we will never entertain any proposal for a settlement of the question of home rule except such as satisfies the aspirations of the party and of the Irish people.

When this result was communicated to Mr. Gladstone, he exclaimed: "Thank God. Home rule is saved."

Gladstone's Letter.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—Mr. Gladstone's letter acknowledging the receipt of the two resolutions at the Nationalist meeting says: By the first resolution the subject of our correspondence is entirely detached from any connection with the conversation at Hawarden. In the second, I am requested to receive a deputation which, besides stating the parties views, is to request my own and my colleague's intentions regarding the details of settlement of the land question and the control of the Irish constabulary.

Mr. Gladstone proceeds to explain that his letter to Mr. Morley was on the question of the leadership, which is a separate matter, having no proper connection with home rule. He reaffirms his desire to uphold the independence of the Irish party, no less than that of the Liberal party, and he approves the sentiment heretofore expressed that no party and no leaders can ever hope to carry home rule without the fullest support of the Irish nation.

Parnell Expected it.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—There is now no doubt that Mr. Gladstone's written reply to the committee suggested by Mr. Parnell has left things in a worse condition than before and is not the assurance that the committee had hoped to receive and which would have been followed according to promise, by Mr. Parnell's retirement. Mr. Gladstone refuses to discuss the control of the Irish constabulary, the settlement of agrarian difficulties, or any other issue while Mr. Parnell remains at the head of the Irish party and until his retirement is an accomplished fact. This announcement is probably what Mr. Parnell expected.

McCarthy Chairman.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—Mr. Parnell's adherents have adopted resolutions regretting Mr. Gladstone's refusal to state his views and have ratified the re-election of Mr. Parnell as chairman.

The majority faction of the Nationalists are preparing a manifesto to the Irish people. They have unanimously chosen Mr. Justin McCarthy as chairman.

An Historic Scene.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—The scenes in the committee room of the house of commons where the Nationalists were assembled together as it proved for the last time, will form one of the most stirring chapters of Irish history

There were no spectators of the stormy session of this miniature Irish parliament and its disruption, but the stories told by the members after the break up agree in describing the proceedings as most exciting. The semblance of good feeling which had with difficulty been maintained between the cotending factions in the previous meetings was no longer kept up. All realized that compromise and conciliation were impossible, and there was no further concealment of the bitter passions which had all along been smouldering beneath the surface. Mr. Parnell though never losing the wonderful command over himself, which is so marked a characteristic of his strength, yet did not refrain from launching the barbed shafts of denunciation and vituperation upon the heads of those whom, to use his own bold phrase, he had made, politically, and who now seized upon the moment of his personal embarrassment to seek his overthrow for their own advantage.

These accusations were reiterated by the devoted adherents of the former leader, and were as vehemently denied and resented by the men at whom they were aimed.

So the war of crimination and recrimination went on and questions of policy were forgotten in the hurling to and fro of personalities.

THE CLIMAX

of the wrangle was reached when Mr. Parnell, taunting his opponents with what he termed their cowardly surrender to a vain-glorious and weak-kneed old Englishman, cried angrily, "Who is master of Ireland, Gladstone or myself." Instantly Tim Healy's voice was heard above the chorus of angry protests shouting: "You better ask who is Mistress of Ireland." Blood surged into Parnell's face, and he shook his fist threatingly at Healy as he retorted passionately: "Sir, you are a to insult a lady in the presence of Irish gentlemen" When the majority started to withdraw, after Mr. Parnell had refused as chairman to put the question on the motion for his retirement from the leadership, there was a tumult. Bitter epithets were exchanged and each faction warned the other that the verdict of the people of Ireland at the polls would overwhelm traitors with ignominy. It is not to be doubted that Mr. Parnell will make considerable capital with the rural constituencies by describing the action of McCarthy's as a secession. The fact that they bolted the regular meeting will be utilized to throw discredit upon their loyalty to the party organization, though the bolt was in reality caused by his own violation of the rules of deliberative bodies in refusing to entertain any motions but such as suited his own interests.

Mr. Gladstone is given great credit for his shrewdness under difficult circumstances in bringing the dispute back to the original issue of the Irish leadership, and escaping Mr. Parnell's trap of a political twist in the negotiations. There will be a great mass meeting in Phoenix Park, Dublin, today, at which an expression of public feeling in the Irish capital on the momentous issue of the day will be given. This will be the inauguration of a series of meetings which will embrace all Ireland.

Cruelty in Shipping Cattle.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—The government committee of enquiry of the cattle trade in the U. S., and Canada is holding the meetings with closed doors. The committee is expected to urge a vigorous exercise of power to prohibit carriage of cattle by the tramp steamers. Evidence adduced shows excessive cruelty to the cattle on voyage. Last month over a thousand head died on the voyage from Montreal alone.

It's a Nuisance.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—Justice Remed has decided the boxing contests of the Pelican club a nuisance and granted an injunction against its continuance.

SWEPT BY THE SEA.

THE CAPTAIN OF THE MARYLAND INSTANTLY KILLED.

Many Other Officers Killed or Wounded—Three Hundred Cattle Killed by the Storm—The Vessel Is Disabled.

LEWES, DEL., Dec. 8.—The British steamer Maryland, from Baltimore, November 27, for London and Swansea, arrived at the breakwater at 2 o'clock this afternoon. On the morning of December 1, about 600 miles off shore, the ship encountered a terrific gale from the south, and at 7:30 her decks were swept by a tremendous sea which instantly killed Captain Luckhurst, the boatswain and the second cook; also breaking the leg of the first officer Lloyd, breaking the arm of the carpenter and injuring others of the crew. Nearly everything moveable was swept away, including the bridge, three boats and many other deck materials. Of the 526 cattle on board 300 were killed any many more so badly injured as to be worthless. The boatswain and cook were buried at sea. The captain's body is still aboard awaiting orders from the agents at Baltimore. An undertaker went aboard this evening to prepare the remains for further disposal. The ship is in charge of the second officer, who describes the force and effects of the sea which swept the ship as terrific beyond description, tearing up and twisting iron fastenings like pieces of tin. The fearful condition of the ship after the wave swept her, the sufferings of the mangled men, and the frantic and dying cattle, were awful to witness.

Surgeon Orr, of the Marine hospital here, boarded the ship immediately on her arrival and is doing his best to relieve the sufferings of the wounded men. The ship has been ordered to Philadelphia for repairs by her agent at Baltimore.

A CANADIAN TRUST.

Nine Cotton Mills Enter Into a Combine.

MONTREGL Dec. 8.—The Dominion Cotton Mills Company, composed of wealthy Montreal dealers, A. E. Gault being president, and Mayor Grenier vice president, has completed an amalgamation of the nine gray cotton mills of Canada. These mills, built at a cost of $4,800,000, have been purchased out and out by the company for $3,800,000, and will come under the new management January 1. Two or three of the smaller mills will manufacture exclusively for export to China, West Indies and South America. The capital of the company is $5,000,000.

OMINOUS.

The B. & O., Strike at Pittsburg May Extend.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 8.—The strike of the yardmen on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad is assuming a threatening aspect. Brakemen say they are only waiting official orders to join their brethren. These orders, they say, may come this morning, when a general tie-up will ensue. Only one engine moved out of the yards at Glenwood today and that a shifter. The strike seems to have been brought about by dislike for one of the bosses and not because of any special grievance against the company.

A FATAL BUILDING.

Two More Workmen Killed in the Building Burned at Pittsburg Thursday.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 8.—William Long and Nicholas Franz were employed to remove a safe from Mahood's Liberty street store, which was destroyed by Thursday's fire. A wall fell upon and buried both men. When rescued, twenty minutes later, it was found that they were fatally injured. Both men have families residing in this city.

An Anarchist Sentenced.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Dec. 8.—Emil Vogt, one of the anarchist rioters who made an attack on the police at a picnic some months ago, has been sentenced to six months in the county jail and Charles Klop one of the ringleaders, to two years in the state prison.

Over the Palisades.

ENGLEWOOD, N. J., Dec. 8.—The coroner's jury the case of the death of the wealthy retired lawyer, John Townsend, jr., who leaped over the palisades last week, brought in a verdict this morning that he came to his death by his own hand.

Porter and the Census.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—The house committee on census today examined Superintendent Porter in reference to the census of New York. He defended the work saying it was intelligently and carefully taken and did not think a recount at all necessary.

Confirmed by the Senate.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—The Senate in executive session confirmed the nominations of the following postmasters: Alabama J. C. Goodloe, Jr., at Tuscumbia; Illinois, Miss E. D. Parker, at Lebanen; Ohio, W. B. Gamble, at Akron.

His Last Visit.

NASHVILLE, TENN., Dec. 7.—Dr. M. C. Hanner, a prominent physician of Shelbyville, this state, was crushed to death by his horse rearing and falling backward upon him, while the doctor was returning from a visit to a patient.

Burned in Effigy!

Ireland all Ablaze With Excitement.

Opponents of Parnell Are Denounced

AND BONFIRES MADE OF THEIR COUNTERFEITS.

A Turbulent Mass Meeting in Dublin and Similar Gatherings at Other Points in Ireland—Great Excitement and Startling Rumors in England.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—Ireland was ablaze with excitement yesterday, many public meetings being held, and the split in the party being the universal topic of conversation and discussion everywhere. The mass meeting in Phœnix park, Dublin, was not so large as had been anticipated, in fact was not a formidable gathering in point of size, though it was quite turbulent. It was distinctly a Parnell meeting; and Healy and other opponents of that leader were burned in effigy. Judging from the bitterness of the denunciations against them, they would have been burned in person had they been present.

So far as returns have been received, most of the impromptu meetings hastily convened were in Parnell's favor, and in more places than Dublin the chief enemies of Parnell were figuratively destroyed by fire. The Bishop's manifesto condemning Parnell, was read in all the churches at mass, and the priests added exhortations to the people to obey the spirit of that document in their political action. The people did not seem to take kindly to this clerical interference in some cases, and at Mitchellstown and Kilkenney, the Nationalists met after services and adopted resolutions supporting Parnell. In Armagh the priests propose to stump the country against Parnell. It is believed, however, that on the whole, the church will confine its moral suasion.

The excitement in London political circles is intense, and Monday's action of the Irish factions in Parliament it awaited with the greatest interest, particularly as there are rumors of startling developments in the way of a Tory-Irish alliance.

DIED OF GANGRENE.

Death of Brakeman Kyle—A "Slick" Thief—Small Wreck.

NEWARK, O., Dec. 8.—C. C. Lyle, the B. & O., brakeman who so unfortunately had his foot taken off at Shawnee, a little over a week ago, died of his injuries after suffering the most excrutiating pain. The death of the young man was not expected when the Shawnee physicians amputated the foot, but gangrene set in, producing death. He leaves a wife and one little child. His remains were today taken to Cambridge where they will be given interment.

Saturday noon a tough looking tramp passed the dry goods store of A. E. French, on the east side of the square, and as no person was around, placed several suits of underwear under his coat and skipped. He was seen by Tom Cherry, who gave chase and recovered the goods, but let the thief off as he pleaded very pitifully. Shortly afterward this same tramp was noticed pilfering around a buggy on First street. He stole a fine robe from it and was making off when an alarm was given. Officers gave chase but the tramp made off, though without his booty.

A couple of Panhandle freight cars were wrecked near Pataskala by being thrown from the track. In one of them were twe fine pianos which were also demolished.

Work of Congress.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—The Senate Saturday passed a resolution calling on the attorney general for a list of election supervisors. Mr. Morgan offered a resolution calling for a statement of money paid on requisition of Supervisor Davenport, of New York, but it went over under objection.

The amendments to the bill to issue arms to settlers was agreed to, and Mr. Gray continued his remarks in opposition to the elections bill.

In the House the resolution directing the president to request Mrs. Grant to permit the removal of the remains of the general to Arlington was debated without action.

Senate bill appropriating $100,000 to rations for the Sioux Indians was passed with verbal amendments, also Senate bill to retire General Stoneman. At 4:30 the House adjourned.

Insanity Robs Him of His Bride.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 7.—Miss Katie Kamm, the betrothed of Fred Freund and an exceedingly pretty girl, some weeks ago developed symptoms of mental derangement and her removal to the state institute was made imperative.

She had realized her condition, but she would not consent to be removed by any one save Mr. Freud, and he accompanied her to the institution. His manner was as devoted as if she had been going to the bridal altar, but he is heart broken over this sad ending of his martial hopes.

ROBBED THE HEATHEN.

Big Shortage Found in the Treasury of the Georgia Methodist Conference.

WASHINGTON, GA., Dec. 7.—The Methodist conference of North Georgia, which is in session here, has discovered a shortage of $10,000 in the account of Hon. J. S. Stewart, treasurer of the missionary fund. The treasurer has been displaced from his position. He claims that the apparent deficit is due to bad book-keeping, and is paying up the shortage.

Fewer Trustees.

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 8.—Certificates were filed with the secretary of state today, setting forth a decrease in the trustess of the following companies from five to three: The Standard Oil Company, Atlas Refining Company and Acme Oil Company, of New York.

A Costly Strip.

CHICAGO, December 7.—Colonel Snyder, president of the Cherokee live stock association, telegraphed Chief Mays, of the Cherokees, offering $10,000,000 in cash for the Cherokee strip.

ESTATE OF ERASTUS ADKINS.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss. At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the city of Adrian, on Tuesday, the 2nd day of December, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety.

Present Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Erastus Adkins, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Frank Adkins, a son of said deceased, praying that administration of said estate may be granted to Petitioner or some other suitable person.

It is ordered, that Monday, the 29th day of December, 1890, at 9 o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

The Best Blood Medicine

So say Leading Physicians and Druggists, and their opinion is indorsed by thousands cured by it of Scrofula, Eczema, Erysipelas, and other diseases of the blood.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla has won its reputation by years of valuable service to the community. It is the best."—R. S. Lang, Druggist, 212 Merrimack st., Lowell, Mass.

Dr. W. P. Wright, Paw Paw Ford, Tenn., says: "In my practice, I invariably prescribe Ayer's Sarsaparilla for chronic diseases of the blood."

Dr. R. R. Boyle, Third and Oxford sts., Philadelphia, Pa., writes: "For two years I have prescribed Ayer's Sarsaparilla in numerous instances, and I find it highly efficacious in the treatment of all disorders of the blood."

L. M. Robinson, Pharmacist, Sabina, O., certifies: "Ayer's Sarsaparilla has always been a great seller. My customers think there is no blood-purifier equal to it."

"For many years I was afflicted with scrofulous running sores, which, at last became so bad the doctors advised amputating one of my legs to save my life. I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla and soon saw an improvement. After using about two dozen bottles the sores were healed. I continue to take a few bottles of this medicine each year, for my blood, and am no longer troubled with sores. I have tried other reputed blood-purifiers, but none does so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—D. A. Robinson, Neal, Kansas.

The Week's Work

Debate on the Federal Election Bill

WILL BE PUSHED AS RAPIDLY AS POSSIBLE.

The Republican Senators May Insist That it be Taken up Each Day to the Exclusion of the Calendar—Other Work Before Congress.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.

THE Republican caucus committee has not determined on an order of business as yet, so nothing definite can be known of the prospects of business in that body, except that the debate on the federal election bill will be pushed forward during the week. The election bill is the unfinished business of the Senate and as such, it comes up each day at two o'clock. If the Democratic seators continue to speak at length in opposition to the bill, during this week, the Republican senators will doubtless insist that it be taken up immediately after the morning business to the exclusion of calendar business in order that it may be brought to a vote at as early a day as possible. Senator Blair may make another effort during the week to get the labor bills before the Senate, but this is extremely doubtful. So much opposition has developed that he does not care to make the issue on the question of consideration.

Should the caucus committee deem it necessary to bring in the proposition to change the rules so as to establish the previous question, the debate on the election bill may be diverted into a discussion of this question; but it is altogether unlikely that the committee will act at this time. A great many Republicans believe that rather than see the rules changed and so much power put in the hands of the majority, the Democrats will virtually consent to the passage of the election bill.

The committee on appropriations will get to work on the pension bill this week and will be ready to report it before the week is completed.

There are thirty-three public building bills on the calendar of the House awaiting final action, and the committee on rules will give the public building committee a day and possibly two days this week for the disposition of their measures. Speaker Reed shut down on public buildings appropriations last session, but he has agreed to the request for a special day in which to dispose of the bills referred to. It is probable, however, that there will be no more public building legislation this session, excepting perhaps one the last six days of the congress, which are usually given up to the passage of bills under suspension of the rules. The commerce committee has a number of bridge bills to dispose of, and a day will probably be granted for their final consideration and passage. During the week it is likely that the appropriations committee will report the fortification and deficiency appropriation bills, and an effort will be made to have these considered, if the reports are made early in the week.

Monday will be devoted to business affecting the District of Columbia.

KUHNS CAUGHT.

OFFICERS FIND HIM NEAR FT. WAYNE, IND.,

And a Desperate Fight Ensues—Kuhns is Shot Twice but Escapes—He is Taken Again—His Wounds Fatal.

FT. WAYNE, IND., Dec. 8.—A special to the Morning Journal from Kosciusko county, Ind., says: Mervin Kuhns, the desperado who is wanted in different localities for crimes ranging from horse stealing to murder, and for whose arrest $1,000 reward is offered, was shot and probably fatally wounded by Deputy Sheriff Wilkinson, of Ft. Wayne, near here this evening. A desperate gun fight between Kuhns, two of his gang and three deputy sheriffs followed the attempt to arrest the desperado. In the fight, James Mease, of Kuhns' gang, shot Officer Kennely in the head inflicting what is thought to be a mortal wound and was himself shot in the leg. Kuhns received two bullets in the back, but succeeded in escaping on horsback. Reenforcements were had and a hot pursuit was given. Kuhns was found two hours latter at a farm house near by where he fell off his horse. His wounds are fatal.

Followed His Father's Example.

SHELBYVILLE, IND., Dec. 7.—William Busch, a shoemaker, had been out of work for five days and ended his suspense by hanging himself.

About nine o'clock in the morning he went into Harry Walker's store on Washington street and called for a rope, stating that he wanted it to tie up his trunk.

Thad Purvis, a clerk in Walker's store, went back to the barn and ran against the hanging man. He was so frightened that he jumped through the scuttle hole to the floor. Busch's father hanged himself a few years ago in Germany.

They Are Solid for Parnell.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 7.—Captain James McHugh, chairman of the committee for the reception of the Irish delegates, gave notice that all subscriptions would be returned, the Irish envoys having concluded it unwise to visit this city and other points, in view of the strong Parnell sentiment which they found to exist. The envoys having gone on record as opposed to Parnell, it is believed they would have met with a cold reception here.

The Festive Cracksman.

SHELBYVILLE, KY., Dec. 7.—The safes in the coal offices of Hall & Son and Allen & Bell company, coal dealers, and Guthrie & Sons, millers, were successfully cracked and robbed of their contents, about $100. The safes were utterly ruined. Two suspicious characters, supposed to be the cracksmen, were arrested on an outgoing train and will be brought here for trial.

A BRILLIANT RECEPTION.

Mrs. Harrison Meets the Literary Lights of Indianapolis.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 8.—When it first became known that Mrs. Harrison was to visit this city, a delegation of ladies from the Katherine Merrill club, of which Mrs. Harrison is a member, waited on Mrs. McKee and asked if Saturday could be reserved as the day on which the club could have the presence of the distinguished guest.

In consequence the meeting was held in the afternoon at the residence, on North Tennessee street, of Miss Katherine Merrill, for whom the club is named.

The invitations were limited to members, the only exception being made with Mrs. Harrison, who was allowed to invite five guests. The president of the club also invited the women presidents of the various clubs in the city. Among them were Mrs. T. L. Sewell, president of the contemporary club; Mrs. Hufford, president of College Corner club, and Mrs. Bell, president of the Women's Club. During the afternoon Mr. James Whitcomb Riley read a paper on "Dialect and Literature."

After the regular exercises were over the meeting was converted into an informal reception, giving those with whom Mrs. Harrison had been connected by these literary associations a chance of having a pleasant chat with her. Later in the afternoon refreshments were served.

Speaking of Seals

The Industry Fast Being Exterminated

BY BRITISH POACHERS WHO KILL REGARDLESS OF SEASON.

Some Startling Statements From Mr. Sheldon Jackson, Who Has Been in Alaska Investigating the Subject for the United States Government.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Mr. Sheldon Jackson, who was last spring appointed United States general agent of education for Alaska, having completed his labors, has returned to Washington, and reported to Secretary Noble for assignment in the bureau of education. Mr. Jackson, in conjunction with his mission for the bureau of education, was also an agent for the census bureau in the capacity of enumerator. Soon after his appointment, he started for Alaska, and since that time has directed his attention principally to a thorough examination of the condition of the natives; their modes of living, education, etc. He will soon begin the preparation of a report on these subjects which it is believed will be one of the most valuable documents of its kind ever submitted to the government on the needs and condition of the Alaskan territory.

Mr. Jackson was on board the revenue cutter Bear four months, which enabled him to get at the heretofore inaccessible portions of Alaska, and to secure some valuable statistics respecting the number of natives now there. On the voyage the Bear reached a point as far north as Point Barrow, where Mr. Jackson established a school under the supervision of the United States, which he says is the northermost school in North America. While he was chiefly interested in the subjects enumerated, Mr. Jackson also studied the fur seal fisheries.

He is very emphatic in his denunciation of the illegal actions of the British poachers and the "bull-dozing" tactics of the English government against the United States. "If the government of the United States," he says, "does not immediately take aggressive measures to prevent the wanton destruction of fur seals, this great and lucrative industry will, in a year or so, be totally exterminated. Last year the North American Fishing Company executed a contract with the United States, agreeing to pay equivalently one million dollars annually for the privilege of taking sixty thousand skins, but were unable to take more than 21,000; while the British poachers swarming the waters in open defiance of our revenue cutters and the laws of the United States, illegally and indiscriminately captured more than fifty thousand seals. This number, however, only represents about one-fifth of their actual plunder, for while in an endeavor to capture them under water, the poachers killed more than 200,000 seals which they could not bring to the surface.

"The officers of the Bear, very often without orders or authority, were powerless to do anything to prevent the destruction of the seals and the poachers, in sheer defiance of their presence, continued the destructive work as long as there was anything in sight, until there are very few live seals remaining. They indiscriminately killed in or out of the catching reason, and the female seals were treated with no more consideration than the males. Young seals, almost unable to take care of themselves in the water, were maliciously killed. They were not taken from the rockeries by the poachers as demanded by the contract of a legitimate company paying enormously for the privilege, but were killed by carbines directed by Indians in canoes, under the protection of English cruisers."

"It is absolutely necessary that the United States should send her navy into those waters to seize every English poaching vessel found within the three mile limit, illegally killing off the remaining seals. Three years ago, the rockeries at this season of the year were black with breeding seals, while now, there are scarcely any of them, and if nothing is done to protect the seals, the industry, in a little more than a year, will have been totally exterminated."

Ohio Man Dead.

LOUISVILLE, Dec. 7.—When the depot master of the J., M. & I., at Fourteenth and Main streets, went into the ticket office at seven o'clock, he found John Henderson with his head upon his folded arms. On trying to rouse him the body fell to one side. Henderson had been stricken with heart disease and died at his desk. He came to Louisville from Northern Ohio less than two weeks ago.

Disgrace and Death.

ZANESVILLE, O., Dec. 8.—Clara McNeil an eighteen-year-old girl, who lived with Commissioner-elect Rutledge, near Taylorsville, committed suicide by jumping into the Muskingum river. She was enciente and despondent.

JESUS MADE KNOWN.

LESSON XI, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, DEC. 14.

28. "And they drew nigh unto the village, whither they went; and He made as though He would have gone further." The threescore furlongs had been passed over and probably the two disciples were surprised that they had reached the end of their walk so quickly, for with pleasant company and such instructive conversation as they had enjoyed a long walk would seem a very short one. And now they have reached the end of their walk, and He will not further thrust Himself upon them unless they desire it. He has enlightened them, and instructed them, and made them glad; and now it is for them to say if He shall continue with them or pass on. How often has He by His Spirit given us light upon His word, both in public and in private, but have we always felt grateful and desired to detain Him, or have we willingly allowed Him to pass on. He will not tarry where He is not wanted.

29. "But they constrained Him, saying, Abide with us; for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent. And He went in to tarry with them." Foolish and slow to believe though they were, yet He is easily constrained and goes in to abide with them. How much they would have missed if they had allowed Him to pass on.

30. "And it came to pass, as He sat at meat with them He took bread, and blessed it, and brake, and gave to them." It may not be necessary to see here that which He instituted on the night of His betrayal as a memorial of His death till He come again; but the action and the words are so similar (Luke xxii, 19) that we cannot help thinking of it, and as they afterward rehearsed the matter that same night to the disciples at Jerusalem they told how He was known to them in breaking of bread (verse 35).

31. "And their eyes were opened and they knew Him; and He vanished out of their sight." In a moment they understood why they had been so interested; they knew whose company they had enjoyed; the report of the woman was indeed true; their own eyes had seen Him. But He was gone; as mysteriously as He had joined them (which perhaps they had not thought of) so He left them; gone in a moment. So shall it be with us when in bodies made like unto His (Phil. iii, 20, 21) we shall reign with Him over the earth (Rev. v, 9, 10). We shall go here and there as He may send us, appearing and disappearing at pleasure, manifest to and companions of those on the earth, in His service, but no longer of the earth.

32. "And they said one to another, Did not our heart burn within us while He talked with us by the way, and while He opened to us the Scriptures?" It was a precious heart burn which they enjoyed by the way; the burning of holy peace and joy and delight, because of His presence; that blessed presence which burns out self and sin, and the world, and self righteousness and self pleasing, and lays and keeps us low at His feet for His service and pleasure.

33. "And they rose up the same hour, and returned to Jerusalem, and found the eleven gathered together, and them that were with them." What a contrast between the sad hearts of a few hours before when they left the city and the joyful hearts which they now possess as, unmindful of threescore weary furlongs, they speedily retrace their steps.

34. "Saying, The Lord is risen indeed, and hath appeared to Simon." Paul also mentions this appearance to Peter (I Cor. xv, 5). How like our Lord Jesus to appear specially to that poor, self confident disciple whom Satan so severely sifted, but for whom Jesus prayed. So Godlike, but so unlike what man would do.

35. "And they told what things were done in the way, and how He was known of them in breaking of bread." They told of their sad hearts as they left the city, of the stranger who joined them, of His questions as if He knew not anything of the events which had happened, how they in their simplicity told Him everything, and how He then took up the many references to Himself in Moses and the prophets and made them see and understand them as they never did before; how, having arrived at Emmaus, He made as though He would have gone farther, but they constrained Him and He went in to tarry with them; how He then took bread and blessed it and brake it and gave it to them, and all at once they recognized Him; but instantly He was gone they knew not where. They probably also told how it seemed that they could not get back to Jerusalem quickly enough to tell these glad tidings.

36. "And as they thus spake, Jesus Himself stood in the midst of them, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you." As they again talk of Him again He is in their midst. This is His fifth appearance on that day on which He arose from the dead.

37. "But they were terrified and affrighted, and supposed that they had seen a spirit." How strange a reception! He brings peace and proclaims peace, but they are filled with agitation, fear, doubt, unbelief. Is it not so still?

38. "And He said unto them, Why are ye troubled? and why do thoughts arise in your hearts?" Much of our trouble arises from thoughts, or, as in the R. V., "reasonings."

39. "Behold My hands and My feet that it is Myself; handle Me and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see Me have." If in the things which make us afraid we would only see Jesus Himself, that would surely dispel our fears.

40. "And when He had thus spoken He showed them His hands and His feet." There were the wounds; they could doubt no longer.

41. "And while they yet believed not for joy, and wondered, He said unto them, Have ye here any meat?" John xx, 20, says: "Then were the disciples glad when they saw the Lord." They would have been more blessed had they believed the report of Mary and the other women in the morning.

42, 43. "And they gave Him a piece of a broiled fish, and of an honeycomb, and He took it and did eat before them." Here is another feature of the powers of the glorified body. Not that we conclude from this that the resurrection body will need food as these mortal bodies now do, but as the Lord and the angels ate Abraham's food, and as our Lord now actually ate this food, so when we are like Jesus, and with Him reigning over the earth, we shall be able to eat with people as socially as now if necessary, and we shall also eat and drink with Him at His table in His kingdom (Luke xxii, 30).

They all Failed.

The following letter from Mr. W. A. Thomson, of Columbus, Wis., is peculiarly interesting: "My wife," say. he, "has been treated for her head, stomach and nervous prostration by three doctors in New York, two in Chicago, one in Philadelphia, one in Cincinnati, and at the large institute in Buffalo for 16 months. They all failed. But one bottle of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine helped her wonderfully." This should be used in all headaches, backaches, changes of life, nervous disturbances, fits, rheumatism, etc. Ask at Baker and Hall's drug store for a free trial bottle and Dr. Miles' new book on the Nerves and Heart.

She Was Completely Cured.

A daughter of my customer suffered from suppressed menstruation, and her health was completely wrecked. At my suggestion she used one bottle of Bradfield's Female Regulator, which cured her. J. W. Clinton Column.

CLINTON, MICH., DEC. 11, 1890.

Card parties are the order of the day, or rather evening. A large party was given at the residence of C. S. Burroughs Friday evening, and on Thursday evening of this week, an enjoyable one at Mr. Dow Draper's.

Mrs. Frank Morey, of Manchester, is visiting at Mrs. David Woodward's this week.

Wm. Amspoker expects to move his family to Manchester the last of the week.

Mr. Frank Fisk, of Newton, Iowa, is visiting his sister, Mrs. P. C. Smith. Frank is an old Clinton boy, and his many friends are glad to greet him.

Mrs. Ed. Smith and daughter, Mrs Ed. VanDeMark and Mrs. Wm. C. Rogers attended the Fair in Tecumseh last Friday.

Dr. E. M. Conklin and wife, of Manchester, were in town last Sunday.

F. D. Lancaster visited Detroit Monday and Tuesday, seeking more clothing.

Mr. Kos. Davis has fitted up a neat and attractive confectionery counter in one side of his jewelry store. Kos knows how to make many kinds of toothsome sweets and he will enjoy a good trade.

Ed. Kirchgessner and Eugene Van DeMark drove down to Tecumseh last night to the entertainment.

Last Thursday being D. E. Palmer's 36th birthday, a large number of invited guests gathered in the evening in honor of the occasion. A merry time was had by all.

The stores are filling up with goods dear to the hearts of the little ones May Santa Claus visit every hearth with preseuts for all. It is not the expensive gift but the remembrance that cheers us.

Pork is moving slowly. Farmers are evidently waiting for enhanced prices

E. R. Smith's store is the center o attraction, as B. O. Randall & Co. are using it for their large holiday stock.

Jas. Hause attended a funeral in Napoleon, Tuesday.

Sleighing is pretty good in town and every afternoon cutters are flying around, filled with pleasure seekers.

W. D. VanTuyle's little boy, who was seriously ill last week, is better.

Mr. Frank Thompson is nursing a boil on the back of his neck.

Wm. Rogers is buying the festive hen. Hen fruit comes high.

Mr. David Brooks is reported on the mend. He has had a long pull and a hard pull.

The Union School gives an entertainment next Friday evening, the 19th ult., to raise funds for the purpose of buying a flag.

MRS. GLADSTONE'S KINDNESS.

A pretty American girl recently called upon Mrs. Gladstone at her London home. She carried a most favorable letter of introduction as a member of a well-known American family. Her brightness and sparkle attracted the wife of the great English statesman and for an entire afternoon and evening she lived in the Gladstone household. She confessed to Mrs. Gladstone that her visit had a pure pose—that of writing an article on th home-life of her hostess for an American magazine.

"But, my dear," said Mrs. Gladstone, "your people are interested in Mr. Gladstone; they do not know me."

"That is just why I came," replied the girl, "in order that Americans may learn a little more of you."

At the tea-table, Mr. Gladstone joined with his wife in entertaining the American girl, and few were ever given a better opportunity of seeing the Gladstone home-life.

The quiet part which Mrs. Gladstone has played in the career of her famous husband is known to only a few. While thousands of articles have been written of Mr. Gladstone, none of an authoritative character have been printed of his wife. Even her portrait is seldom seen in the English shops; rarely in the prints. She has always felt that public interest in her own country and across the sea was centered in her husband, and in order that his greatness might stand out more strikingly, she has each year further retired from public view. A freshness will, therefore attach itself to the story "A Day with Mrs. Gladstone," as it will be told by her bright young visitor in The Ladies' Home Journal, of Philadelphia, during the coming year. This article will be one of th series of "Unknown Wives of Well-known Men" which this excellent magazine will contain during 1891.

It is said that a great many English men are visiting this country this season. I asked Jinks what they came for. He said he supposed "to marry soft-pated, millionaire women, to talk the fellows out of their money, who want to be fooled, and to lay in a supply of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup."

"The greatest cure on earth for pain, Salvation Oil; take up the strain.

Their Business Booming.

Probably no one thing has caused such a general revival of trade at C. A. Wright & Co's Drug Store as the giving away to their customers of so many free trial bottles of Dr. Kings New Discovery for Consumption Their trade is simply enormous in this very valuable article from the fact that it always cures and never disappoints. Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Croup, and all throat and lung diseases quickly cured. You can test it before buying by getting a trial bottle free, large size $1. Every bottle warranted.

C. A. Wright & CO.

It is dangerous to tamper with irritating liquids and exciting snuffs. Use Ely's Cream Balm, which is safe and pleasant, and is easily applied. It cures the worst cases of catarrh, cold in the head and hay fever, giving relief from the first application. Price 50 cents.

The harsh, drastic purgatives, once deemed so indispensable, have given place to milder and more skilfully prepared laxatives; hence the great and growing demand for Ayer's Pills. Physicians everywhere recommend them for costiveness, indigestion, and liver complaints.

The children's health must not be neglected. Colds in the head and snuffles bring on catarrh and lung affections. Ely's Cream Balm cures at once. It is perfectly safe and is easily applied into nostrils. It also cures catarrh, the worst cases yielding to it.

READ THIS TWICE!

The only Protection that will effectually protect all people, all classes, all labor and all interests is that styled SELF PROTECTION! acquired only from a truthful knowledge of ways and means, legal and illegal, just and unjust, by which the burdens of government, profits of labor and industry, are so unequally divided.

That knowledge is power, and ignorance its slave, is forcibly illustrated daily in all walks of life, among all people, in all countries.

Where knowledge is used as a power or a means for gaining wealth without labor or an equivalent therefor, it becomes necessary to deceive or keep in ignorance of such methods those from whom the wealth is taken; hence it is that of the ten thousand newspapers printed in the United States, less than ten are absolutely free and independent of the power or control of some class, party or monopoly whose interest it is to keep the great mass of people in ignorance of their methods.

The Cincinnati Weekly Enquirer is one of the few, if not the only one, absolutely free from such influences. It is the most honest, thorough, able teacher and exponent of truthful knowledge, of reliable data, free from partisan bias, fair, frank and explicit to such degree that one cannot but feel edified and capable of forming correct conclusions therefrom. Such a paper should be in every household. Sample copies can be obtained by addressing the publishers, at Cincinnati, O.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

BRITTON BUDGET.

The new drug clerk seems to be quite popular with the young ladies.

One of our grocery stores will soon have a new partner, so they say.

J. H. Taggart was in Tecumseh Saturday.

Britton can boast of a young lady so small that she can weigh herself on a pair of confectioner's scales.

Report says one of our merchants lives by sucking eggs.

We are glad to say that Joseph Gregg is getting on nicely and can now sit up a little.

There was a fight in Britton one evening last week, but both parties were unable to do each other much harm.

The Good Templars held a shadow social at G. A. R. Hall last Thursday. There was a large attendance and a most enjoyable evening was passed.

The C. J. & M. have put down a new crossing at Britton.

Miss Maggie Exelby has left the hotel and is now working at Tecumseh.

Cunningham & Gibson bought a turkey last week that dressed thirty pounds.

Samuel Kniffen has had two new sawdust burners put into the mill this week.

E. E. Burnham shipped a carload of hogs last Saturday.

Election of officers at the G. A. R. last Saturday night.

Mr. Sink will be in attendance at his photograph gallery every day until the 1st of January. Every tenth order will be executed free of charge. Give him a call.

Our harness maker seems to be doing quite a business and his work gives general satisfaction.

George Exelby was in Adrian one day last week.

Riley Coryell of Dundee paid Britton friends a visit last Saturday and stayed over Sunday.

Irv. Osborn was busy all last week loading lumber, and furnished employment for quite a number of men. Britton would surely prosper if some of our moneyed men would follow Mr. Osborn's example and lay out a little capital in some new enterprise.

Some of our new stores are still empty. There is a good chance for an enterprising man in the furniture and undertaking business.

What about our elevator? Will it be built in the spring?

Will Ousterhout and Fred Miller killed a coon last Thursday, while working in the woods.

Lyman Ousterhout was badly scared by "Vern's" black dog "Rover," one day last week.

F. Brown & Son have got a new telegraph instrument in their store, in connection with the Commercial Telegraph Company.

William Underwood has added 80 acres more to his farm.

Mr. Strong intends returning to his home at Fort Plain, N. Y., in the early spring.

The following letter was picked up by our Supervisor a few days ago. The owner can have same by applying at the hotel and leaving one dollar, the cost of this advertisement:

James Hines went to Tecumseh last Friday and caused quite an excitement in our village on his return.

Lawrence Brown's horse got loose n the stable at Ve n usterhout's some time during Saturday night, and e of Vern's horses kicked him quite badly. Mr. Waldron was sent for and he sewed up the wound.

We are glad to say Frank Gibson is getting on nicely with his broken collar bone.

James Haight was in our village two or three days last week.

Last Wednesday evening a surprise party, consisting of between seventy and eighty persons, invaded the house and premises of William Underwood. The invaded party, however, was pleased to see them, and his doors were soon thrown open and a hearty invitation extended to all. The evening was passed with music and singing and after a splendid supper of the good things which Mr. and Mrs. Underwood know how to provide, the party dispersed to their several homes, after spending a most enjoyable evening.

One beautiful afternoon, some few weeks ago, a prominent young man of our village persuaded one of his acquaintances to take a ride with him on horseback. They accordingly put the saddles on their horses and started for an afternoon ride, the first-mentioned young man taking the lead and heading in a northwesterly direction. His friend kept close behind him until the shades of night warned him that he had better return to Britton. He accordingly turned his horse's head and started home, leaving his companion heading steadily in the direction of Macon. We have since learned that the former young gentleman, feeling tired and weary from his long ride, stopped at the house of Jesse Coller to rest, just for a few moments, you know, but hour after hour passed and still our prominent young man was not rested from the effects of his long ride, and it was not until Mr. Coller remarked that he would probably rest easier and better in bed, that he awoke from the dream of bliss and ecstacy which all lovers experience during the days of their courtship. The young lover, taking the hint, departed to the barn to saddle his noble steed, but to his dismay he found his saddle missing. After a diligent search, in which Mr. C. joined, the young gentleman accepted the hospitality of his host and remained the rest of that night. In the morning he renewed his search for the missing saddle and found it on the pump in the barn yard, where some imp of mischief had placed it. To make matters worse, it began to rain, but Mr. Coller, fearing that his self-invited guest would remain all day, gladly lent him an overcoat and our prominent young man returned to Britton, a sadder and wiser man.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES

The L. C. S. will be held at the home of Mrs. James Pocklington, on North street, on Friday evening of the present week.

Mrs. Boyd and Mrs. John Beckler returned Monday from Albion, where they had been to attend the funeral of a friend.

There were quite a good many who attended the Musin Concert at Tecumseh on Saturday evening and were well pleased with the entertainment.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Jackson spent Sunday with relatives and friends, returning to their home in Tecumseh Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lamont Bangs spent Th us day eve with Mrs. John Arner and family.

Smith & Coryell, of the General Supply Co., received a large invoice of the latest styles of rocking chairs last week for the holiday trade.

Vote and Emma Miller visited friends in Monroe county last week.

Fred Fagan, having engaged to Lucius Lilley for a year, has moved to his new home, formerly the Wolston Comfort property, in Raisin.

C. E. Triplett and wife, of Washington, D. C., visited relatives in the village last week.

Chas. Bennett, of Detroit, called on friends the first of the week.

Several of the Britton friends were in attendance at the services Sunday.

The services at the reopening of the Church Sunday passed off very smoothly. Miss Grayson, of Tecumseh, assisted the choir in their selections and hymns. Dr. J. W. Bashford, President of the Wesleyan University of Delaware, Ohio, preached two of as instructive and interesting discourses, if not the finest, that were ever delivered in the Church. The attendance was large, both morning and evening, and the day was like early spring. The Church looks like new and is more complete, comfortable and cosy than it ever was before, and it is with pleasure that we can report that the expenditures are all provided for and the Church is clear of debt. Many thanks are due to the kind friends who so readily responded in raising the amount necessary to complete the work.

ONSTED ODDS.

Very nice winter weather and very nice wheeling, all of which makes business lively.

Albert Howard and John Hand are buying up hickory logs to be converted into lumber of different styles.

Sicknor and Grogers shingle and pickett mill is crowded to its fullest capacity these days.

The North Rome P. of I. Association No. 1405 held a social on Thursday evening of last week at the residence of Mr. Frank Nickloy, and a large turnout was the result.

The grangers of this vicinity will hold an entertainment at their hall on Saturday evening of this week. All come.

David Holmes, of Tecumseh, visited at his daughter's, Mrs. Pratt, last week.

The Rome Union Association of P. of I., held their union meeting on Saturday last, with the Wolf Creek Association, when a good program was carried out and listened to by a good audience. Their next meeting will be with the South Rome Association on the second Friday in February next

It is rumored that Mr. John Lee, of this place, and Mrs. Clara Carruthers, of North Rome, were married last Sunday and if such is the case, we extend them our best wishes.

Fred Morton is stopping in Adrian at present.

Our dealers are well supplied with holiday goods, so dont go to any other town to make your holiday purchases, as you can get them here just as cheap as anywhere else.

The farmers are slaughtering their cattle and hogs for future use.

It will soon be one, eight, nine, one.

The people of this locality are making preparations to enjoy the coming holidays.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

Aunt Freelove Wheelan is very feeble.

Wright Doty and Frank Skinner went to Sioux City, Dakota, last week on a visit to George Skinner.

The Ann Arbor Argus of Nov 28, contains the following: "Warren F. Mills, who recently graduated in both the literary and law departments of the University here, and was married here last summer, died in San Francisco recently. He was well known and esteemed in this city." The deceased was the only child of Heman Mills, of Bridgewater, who it will be remembered taught school in Dist. No. 3, in Franklin, and was well known there many years ago, and who died in San Francisco last winter, a very rich and successful man. The son Warren, the last of the family, the picture of robust health and strength, with youth, love, wealth and hosts of friends, died very much as his father died, from pneumonia following an attack of la grippe.

NORTH EAST FRANKLIN.

Dannie Taylor returned to his home in Somerset, Saturday.

A Miss Simmons, of Nebraska, is visiting in the family of her uncle, Fisk Beebe.

Bert Kempton drove out from North Adams last week to visit his numerous relatives and acquaintances in Franklin. He is nephew to Jehiel Kemp and Mrs. R. Butrick.

Rodman Taylor was climbing out of his hay barn Sunday morning, when the ladder slipped and he fell to the ground. He was quite badly hurt in his hip and shoulder, but, it is thought not dangerously. It is pretty hard though, for a man of his age to bear.

TIPTON TOPICS.

J. F. Smith who has been seriously ill, is rapidly recovering.

Miss Carrie Stebbins, of Tecumseh, spent last week at C. Vedders.

West Franklin Farmers' Club at Frank Bradley's next Friday evening, Dec. 19.

Frank Mangus is recovering from the severe wound inflicted by a sharp axe last week.

The M. E. Society will hold their Christmas entertainment, Christmas Eve. The tree will be open to all in the vicinity who wish to put presents on.

BRIEF BUT TO THE POINT.

I had rheumatism all over my body for two years. Doctored with eminent physicians, and spent three months in Reed City Hospital. Four bottles of Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup entirely cured me. The greatest medicine in the world. CHARLES ROWE, Baldwin, Mich.

James Craig has rented John Steels farm of 60 acres for three years.

C. C. Hendershot has removed his old kitchen and is building a new one. His wife's health has improved so that they contemplate moving back on the farm in the spring

John Patton, son of Robert Patton, formerly of this Township, but now of Barry county, was killed by a falling tree last week, Mrs. John Beckley attended the funeral on Wednesday.

A child of John Vanzeluff's, near Cone, has diphtheria. Dr. Howell is attending it.

By the way, the doctors says that the Government should issue its own money direct to the people in paying Government expenses and that all money should be a legal tender, and at par with each other. He also favors the free coinage of silver which in connection with this always favoring the prohibition of the liquor traffic, makes pretty good politics.

Capt. Allen, says—"I will rise again"—Yes the good book says; "The dead shall rise"—But not as American Statesmen.

The recent run of sleighing started the sawlogs right lively, and the sawmill has been running several days, which seems like old times, when everybody ound good employment at good wages, while now only a small portion of the laborers can get work at even $1, per day by boarding themselves. What is the cause? Contraction and protection.

Our telegraph is working nicely, and the operators are making commendable progress. Still there is an occasional key left on which always happens when there are through messages. Last Saturday when there were three doctors wanted, all urgent cases, some one had had their ground on, causing delay and anxiety and one of the parties had to go after the doctor. We would caution operators to be very careful about leaving keys open, and to never use the ground except in cases of necessity. There are two instruments at Lake Ridge post-office, and by cutting the line in two when grounded, the grounded end will work through in an under tone, and the operator by putting and ear to the sounder can tell who has grounded and can read the message, but can not break them, or communicate with them, by request for through message. The station agent at Ridgeway will give standard time at 11 a. m. each day about 11:28 sun time if unmolested. He made two attempts last week but some one broke in and made him quit. A little less fun and more business will give better results.

David Gregory, received a severe scalp wound Saturday night, and the appearances indicate an attempted case of robbery. He sold his hogs that day receiving about $70, in money. He went to the barn at night to do chores and after being out about half an hour, came staggering into the house in a dazed condition, bleeding profusely from a scalp wound about three inches long just above and back of the right ear, the flesh on the lower side being peeled down. From his chilled condition it is supposed that he had lain some little time before recovering sufficiently to go to the house. Dr. Hendershot was summoned by telegraph, who dressed and sewed up the wound. Mr. Gregory has no recollection of anything happening or of seeing any one.

The Farmers' Alliance is doing a grand work in one direction at least It is wiping out sectional lines.

The Democratic majority of 12,500 in Boston indicates that the Republicans of the Hub are in the—bean soup.

Whatever our views on the tariff and silver coinage may be, we can all give old St. Nicholas a hearty welcome next week.

Boston comes up smiling with 12,500 majority for a Democratic Mayor. The political revolution in the old Bay State has evidently come to stay

Prices on many articles are gradually but surely going up. People will know more about the McKinley bill six months hence than they do to-day.

The latest theory advanced by the Republican organs to explain their defeat is this: "A concatenation of circumstances." Jes so. It does look that way, certainly.

If the war tariff robbed the Democrats alone, Major McKinley would find smooth sailing; but it robs the Republicans also, and the latter are now beginning to rebel.

Experience is better than theory. Thirty days experience with the McKinley bill gave the people a better insight into the tariff robbery than two years' discussion had done.

A farmer down in Georgia has recently harvested a Spanish potato that measured four feet and eight inches in length. And yet they tell us agriculture is on the decline.

If the Republicans fail to steal the New Hampshire and Kansas legislatures it will be owing to no lukewarmness on their part. There will be lots of political fun in both these states.

Senator Plumb's revolt against the Force bill and his advocacy of free coinage is the little cloud which may develop into a whirlwind, that will sweep away the Republican majority in the U. S. Senate.

The free trade bugaboo has joined the bloody shirt scare. The last election killed the first and the Farmers' Alliance has strangled the second. The cause of tax reduction and tariff revision will now move right along, unhampered by either.

The improvement of country roads is a question of practical importance to every farmer in Michigan. Every farmers' club in the State should get up a strong petition to the incoming legislature, asking for a thorough and stringent enactment on that subject

Our Republican bretheren claim that the McKinley bill was condemned, because it was not understood. On the contrary it was because it was too well understood: and the more the people learn on the tariff question, the more they will condemn McKinleyism.

Senator John James Ingalls says that "the decalogue and golden rule have no place in politics." The Senator is consistent at all events. Judging from the means and methods he is employing to compass his re-election to the U. S. Senate, he is evidently acting on that theory.

The Republican party appears to be in a hole, said a Democratic senator to one of his Republican colleagues a few days since, at Washington. "Yes, in three holes," replied the latter, "and it is a question which hole is the deepest and most difficult to climb out of—the silver hole, the tariff hole or the force bill hole." "Just stay where you are," said the Democrat, "and the people with their little shovels will do the rest."

Speaking of domestic woolen goods, the Dry Goods Chronicle, a well known trade journal says: "With the upward tendency of wool under limited supplies and restrictive tariff clauses, mill owners will find it no easy task to supply their consumptive wants unless at enhanced values, which as a matter of course must enter in some way into the cost of the manufactured articles." Regarding foreign dry goods the same journal says: "As to prices, there is a steady tendency toward full new tariff standards, and while all lines have not as yet reached the top figure, the evening-up process is gradually but surely going on."

PARTY AND THE TARIFF.

The following letter from Thomas G. Shearman, the distinguished free trade advocate, to the New York Tribune, contains a few historical facts which we commend to the Republicans of this vicinity who believe in tariff reduction.

EDITOR OF THE TRIBUNE.—Sir: For more than forty years I have been a constant reader of the Tribune. Forming a boyish admiration for Horace Greely, founded upon a conviction of his honesty and unselfishness, I accepted his views upon some points, upon which eventually we differed, because his opinions about slavery and aggressive war agreed so entirely with my own. As a matter of course, I was a Republican from the birth of the party, and helped to form the party in my town.

My political ideas were, in 1860, almost exactly the same as they are to day. I was a Free-Trader then as now, though not so radical in my views. So was William Cullen Bryant, who headed the electors of New York in 1856. So was Salmon P. Chase. So was Francis E. Spinner; and so were several hundred thousand Republican voters. In 1858 a Congressional committee reported in favor of the total abolition of all tariffs; and the only dissentient member was a Georgia Democrat, who was consistently opposed to Free Trade, because he was avowedly in favor of reopening the slave trade. Both of the Republican members of the committee agreed in the report; and one of them was afterward appointed Treasurer of the United States by Abraham Lincoln. So you see that this question was left open to individual judgment, and not made a test of party fidelity.

The National Republican platforms, for the first twenty years of its history, either said nothing about the tariff, as in 1856, and 1864, and 1868, or nothing but what Free-Traders, as well as Protectionists, could indorse. Not until 1880 was there anything in the platform which committed the party to the policy of Protectionism. Yet, to listen to the men who now control the party, one would suppose that it never had any other special reason for existence.

Well, the old Whig element has gained full control; and the Republican party, which assumed that name avowedly because it professed to represent the ideas of the original Republican party, founded by Jefferson, now boasts that it is nothing but the old Federal and Whig parties restored. Notice has been given to all Free-Traders to quit, notwithstanding the urgent appeals which were made to them in 1856 to come in. Attachment to the party has prevented many thousands of them from taking leave until this year, but now nearly all have gone, as you have desired. And where are you?

It has lost Congress by the largest majority ever known.

It has increased the majority against it in New York City to over 85,000, and in Brooklyn to 22,000; figures utterly unprecedented.

It has lost Kansas by 60,000, Nebraska by 70,000 (running third in the race), Minnesota by 30,000 and even South Dakota, where last year you had seven-tenths of all the votes.

You have passed the McKinley tariff at the cost of a majority against you of 700,000, of which the Northern States alone give, upon Congressmen, about 300,000. Is the article worth the price?

And what are the prospects of the party for the future? You try to look hopefully forward to 1892. But what have you to count upon?

The result of the last elections, according to unimpeachable Republican testimony, has convinced manufacturers that the increased duties on tin-plate, linens and other articles not now made here will not be maintained; and therefore no new works will be constructed for the production of these goods. Such of them as are to be used must still be imported; and the prices will be increased by the amount of the duty. Therefore, if the country is prosperous for the next two years, "McKinley prices" will prove an even better political card in 1892 than in 1890.

If the country should not be prosperous, and so consumption should fall off, prices may not advance, because people will go without the things they want. But can you imagine that two years' hard times under the McKinley tariff will help the Republicans in 1892?

Whether business is good or bad, for the next two years, either condition will injure the prospects of Republican victory. You have hurried the admission of new States, with a small population, for the sake of a brief control of the Senate; and you will speedily see those very States turn solidly against you, just as South Dakota has already done. These petty States will be pocket boroughs, sending to the Senate men of local power, without regard to National interests; and the votes of these Senators will reduce the influence of New England and New York to a cipher. Their votes will yet pass a free silver coinage bill over any Presidential veto.

You have swallowed up the surplus and created an enormous deficency. To meet this, new taxes must be imposed, to the amount of $50,000,000 a year; or else the Government must run into debt for that amount. This sum cannot be raised by any kind of indirect taxation, and therefore you will have forced direct taxation upon the country. Unpopular as this will be among the rich, who will for the first time pay something like their share, it will be immensely popular among the poor, and especially in the West; because it will take the form of an income tax, exempting all incomes under $1,000.

When direct taxation is once introduced, as, thanks to Mr. McKinley and Mr. Reed, it soon will be, it will remain, gradually displacing all indirect taxation, and carrying the country irresistibly toward the breadest free trade.

My long attachment to the party which did such good work in its earlier days makes me regret that it should be ignominiously destroyed by its new masters; but, since they are bent upon its destruction, I thank them most sincerely for choosing means for that purpose which will confer such vast benefits upon the Nation. Just as the pro slavery policy of the Democratic managers in 1856 brought about the total destruction of slavery, so the fanatical protectionism of Republican managers to-day is bringing about the destruction of protectionism itself. Thanks to the madness of slaveholders, we have a Nation of free men; thanks to the madness of monopolists, we shall soon have a Nation of free trade. THOMAS G. SHEARMAN.

NO FORCE BILL FOR THE FARMERS.

The farmers assembled at Ocala grappled with the Force bill on Wednesday, and in such a vigorous manner as to disconcert those who have been loudest in seeking to discredit their political sagacity. Here is their opinion:

"WHEREAS, Said bill involves a radical revolution in the election machinery of the Union, both State and national, and its passage will be fatal to the autonomy of the States and cherished liberties of the citizens; therefore be it

Resolved, That we do most solemnly protest against the passage of said Lodge Election bill, and we most earnestly petition our Senators to employ all fair and legal means to defeat this unpatriotic measure; and

Resolved, further, That a copy of these preambles and resolutions be forwarded to each Senator in Congress."

These are impressive truths, tersely put, and declared in a practical, business like, and expeditious manner.

Every Senator and Representative, and especially every Republican Senator and Representative, should read with the eye of care these declarations of the congregated grangers; and some of them might read them with profit more than once. The rural representatives now gathered in Ocala may have trousers which bag at the knees, and hats which may have withstood the bombardment of many prolonged winters, and they may have much to learn about the routine of deliberative bodies and the methods of politicians; but they know an undemocratic, un-American, despotic, and insidious bill against the liberties of the people, and they do not hesitate to condemn it.

Whatever else the associated grangers may do, or fail to do, this much is settled. They are on record against the Force bill, and the hopes of the Republican managers for a contrary course are dashed. No bayonets for the grangers! Hayseed and horse sense, it is evident, are not incompatible at Ocala. If the expectations of the farmers' opponents are realized, the latter may do some unwise things before adjourning and be responsible for declarations upon social and economic matters which cannot stand the ordeal of experience; but in that most vital of public matters, the refusal to relinquish to the supernumeraries of the Federal Administration the control of their right to vote, they prove themselves true Democrats and true Americans.

The Senators and Representatives in the next Congress will have many documents and papers to peruse during the session which will open so auspiciously for the hopes of the Democracy; but it is doubtful if they can derive greater instruction from any paper than that sent from Ocala, in which the iniquitous Force bill is repudiated in such pertinent phraseology.—N. Y. Sun.

Failures in Life.

People fail in many ways. In business, in morality, in religion, in happiness, and in health. A weak heart is often an unsuspected cause of failure in life. If the blood does not circulate properly in the lungs, there is shortness of breath, asthma, etc; in the brain, dizziness, headache, etc.; in the stomach, wind, pain, indigeston, faint spells, etc.; in the liver, torpidity, congeston, etc.; heart strain. For all these maladies Dr. Miles' New Cure for the heart and lungs is the best remedy. Sold garanteed and recommended by Baker & Hall Treatise free.

McKinley prices are coming and coming to stay. But where are the McKinley wages? Echo answers, "where?"

THE FORCE BILL.

The principal thing in President Harrison's message is a zealous recommendation that the Force bill should be taken up and pressed through Congress.

There is little need of any further argument upon this subject. This bill is simply a revolution. Its one purpose is to continue the dominant party in power; and to this end its promoters are willing to destroy local self-government; to overthrow the rights of citizens and of communities, and to change a republic of free elections into a concentrated party despotism.

This scheme should be resisted determinedly, unyieldingly, uncompromisingly, by every Democrat. If necessary, every means of delay and obstruction should be resorted to in Congress. The mischiefs that are sure to arise from such a political revolution are so great and so grave as to overshadow every eth question.

Whatever differences of opinion may exist among Democrats concerning other subjects, let there be unity and co-operation concerning this. Preserve the liberties of the people! Put down the Republican conspiracy to destroy them.—New York Sun.

The Wonderful Work of the Liver.

There are many kinds of biliousness. The liver is an organ on whose working much happiness or misery depends. In its many wonderful and dark recesses it carries on the manufacture of bile. It exerts an almost magical effect on every particle of our food, turns into blood what is available for that purpose and sends away for dismissal from the system such poisonous elements as are taken in with the food or formed from it by imperfect digestion. Brooks' Kidney and Liver Syrup cures every variety of biliousness restores the liver to proper working order, regulates the secretion of the bile, and puts the digestive organs in condition to do their best work. C. A. Wright & Co.

TO DISPEL COLDS.

Headaches and Fevers, to cleanse system effectually, yet gently, when costive or bilious, or when the blood is impure or sluggish, to permanently cure habitual constipation, to awaken the kidneys and liver to a healthy activity, without irritating or weakening them, use Syrup of Figs.

DOOD'S CATARRH CURE.

LOCAL AND INTERNAL TREATMENT.

In order to cure catarrh it is necessary to allay the inflammation of the irritated membranes with a soothing application, cleanse the head of the plugging mucous secretions, and heal the discharging ulcers. For cold in the head and nasal catarrh Dodd's local treatment does this without the aid of snuff, douches or fumes. If the disease has extended downwards affecting the bronchial tubes or lungs, dilute ion and blood, the internal treatment both removes from the system the scattered poison, and by its building-up properties assists nature in restoring the impaired parts. Does it hurt the Clothes?

We hear that some woman said of Pearline—"it's the greatest thing I ever saw for easy washing and cleaning, in fact it does so much I'm afraid of it." She recalls the old saying, "too good to be true."

How absurd to suppose that the universal popularity of Pearline is due to anything but wonderful merit.

How absurd to suppose that millions of women would use PEARLINE year after year if it hurt the hands or clothing.

How absurd to suppose that any sane man would risk a fortune in advertising an article which would not stand the most severe (and women are critical) tests.

That's just what PEARLINE will stand—test it for easy work—quality of work—for saving time and labor—wear and tear—economy—test it any way you will—but test it. You'll find PEARLINE irresistible.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers are offering imitations which they claim to be Pearline, or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—they are not, and besides are dangerous. 166 Manufactured only by JAMES PYLE, New York.

WELL BRED GIRLS who use SAPOLIO are SOON WED. QUICKLY MARRIED

SAPOLIO is one of the best known city luxuries and each time a cake is used an hour is saved. On floors, tables and painted work it acts like a charm. For scouring pots, pans and metals it has no equal. If your store-keeper does not keep it you should insist upon his doing so, as it always gives satisfaction and its immense sale all over the United States makes it an almost necessary article to any well supplied store. Everything shines after its use, and even the children delight in using it in their attempts to help around the house.

OUR OWN MEDICINE.

FRANCE IS MIXING A DOSE OF M'KINLEYISM FOR US.

A Commission at Work in Paris on a New Tariff—Higher Duties to Retaliate Against Us—The American Farmer Will Pay the Piper.

Tariff making is a game that two can play at. We have had our inning, with McKinley at the bat, and now the French are having their inning. We fancied that we could build a high tariff wall that would keep out the "cheap pauper made goods of Europe" and that the matter would end there. Not so, however. A commission is now at work in Paris revising the French tariff, and from all reports that come to us the French have learned the McKinley lesson that to "revise" means to revise upward.

The motives assigned by the French commission for increasing duties should be an interesting matter to those people who hold the protectionist notion that one nation can obstruct commercial intercourse with another without any further harm to itself than the loss of imports, for, as in this case, retaliatory legislation may follow which may result in a loss of exports. One of the reasons assigned by the French tariff commission for the higher duties now proposed is "the example given by different foreign nations." M. Paul Leroy-Beaulieu, one of the most distinguished of French economists, writes for l'Economiste Francais a series of articles on the tariff as proposed by the commission. This commission prefixed a report to its proposed tariff bill, in which the upward tendency of tariffs in various countries is described. Criticising that part of the report which refers to the United States, M. Leroy-Beaulieu says:

"The expose of motives, which serves as a preface to the new tariff bill proposed by the French government, next leaps the Atlantic at a bound. In America it finds a soil upon which it delights to expatiate. The United States have not ceased to increase their tariffs; that of July 14, 1862, adopted during the war of secession, and the duties of which were already very high, has been revised in an upward direction by a whole series of laws, codified in 1874, modified again in 1875 and in 1879, recast by the act of March 3, 1883, then by another still more vigorous of Oct. 6, 1890, and fortified by the rigorous formalities which Mr. McKinley has invented, the new regime of American tariffs makes the unhappy importer a slave of the custom house authorities, which can use these duties against him almost ad libitum."

In a later article the same writer protests against "copying the McKinley bill," and adds: "Aside from the fact that, judging from the recent elections, the Americans are not very well satisfied with their McKinley tariff law, there are some things that must be overlooked in a big overgrown child, somewhat coarse and brutal, vaunting itself (very falsely) as being sufficient unto itself. * * * All this talk about retaliation has a vexatious appearance of being provoked."

From this it may be judged that in their new tariff law the French are putting a rod in pickle for us; that not only are they copying many features of the McKinley bill, but that they will levy duties which are aimed especially at our products. An examination of the French project justifies this conclusion.

In the first place this bill imposes two duties on nearly every article. First is the so called minimum duty, or the one to be collected in ordinary cases. Above this and about 25 per cent. higher is the maximum duty reserved for those nations which do not grant France reciprocal favors in trade. But this is not in reality the maximum duty, for by a certain article of the bill the government is allowed in some cases even to increase the maximum duty—a provision made, doubtless, as a counter irritant for our McKinleyism.

To give free reins to the governing power in this way is in a line with political ideas prevalent in Europe, but it is not more objectionable than what our protectionist congress has just done in the humbug reciprocity feature ingrafted upon the McKinley law. This so called reciprocity allows our president to impose a tax upon our own people on their coffee, tea, sugar and hides, unless the nations producing these articles reduce their tariffs on our products. Very probably the French copied this feature of the McKinley law as a smart Yankee trick, well worthy of imitation in a country where government by the people is so little developed as in France.

At any rate, we may expect that the heavier duties of the proposed French tariff, whether the maximum or ultra-maximum, are intended mainly for our products, since it is precisely our two McKinley laws—the customs administrative law and the tariff law proper—which have had most to do with arousing the demand for higher tariff duties in France. It is against us that the present high tariff agitation in France has been directed.

This fact makes it of special interest to us to inquire what some of the proposed French duties are. They concern mainly our agricultural products. In 1889 we sold France 29,000,000 pounds of lard, and this year 44,000,000 pounds. Lard is at present admitted free into France, but it is to go on the dutiable list at the minimum duty of one cent per pound. What higher duties are to be imposed on our lard have not yet been published. We exported 2,478,000 pounds of tallow to France in 1889 and 4,568,000 pounds this year. Tallow is now on the free list, but the proposed law will make it dutiable, the rate as yet being uncertain. Our exports of corned beef to France in 1889 were 3,590,000 pounds, the duty being 40 cents per 100 pounds. The new minimum duty is to be $1.45 per 100 pounds, with perhaps a still higher duty for us. One of our largest exports to France is crude mineral oil, the figures being 58,000,000 gallons for 1889 and 68,000,000 for 1890. The existing duty is $1.55 per 100 pounds; the new minimum duty will be $1.81.

Wheat and corn, of which we exported 16,000,000 bushels to France in 1889, are not mentioned in the new tariff bill, as the duties on them were adjusted early in the summer. Corn, which had been on the free list, was made dutiable at about 15 cents a bushel. American wheat was made dutiable at 33 cents a bushel, other wheat at 15 cents. These discriminations were the first fruits of the retaliatory agitation called forth in France by our McKinleyism.

What further duties of a retaliatory nature the French are preparing for us will appear later on when their bill is completed and goes before the chamber of deputies next February.

Enough, however, is already known to show the aim of the French in their present legislation to be that of retaliation against us. If we build a McKinley wall against France we must not complain if she builds one against us.

Our trade with France is of no small advantage to us. We sold the French $45,000,000 worth of goods in 1889, and we bought from France goods to the value of $69,000,000. If we adopt the foolish McKinley notion that buying in France is harmful to us and seek to prevent it by McKinley duties, we must not wonder that France is equally foolish and tries to prevent her people from buying from us.

It must be noticed that in order to protect our manufacturers McKinley arouses a spirit of retaliation in France which will be directed against our farmers. This is but another case to show how, while the manufacturer dances to the music of protection, the farmer must pay the piper at the end of the frolic.

M'KINLEY'S WOOLEN TAX.

The Chicago Tribune Has Been Doing Some Figuring.

Some of the most unjust and most oppressive duties in the McKinley tariff are the duties under the woolen schedules. Warm woolen clothing is a necessity with our people if anything is such, and to lay the oppressive hand of taxation upon it after the McKinley fashion is to burden the people of this country to an extent almost criminal.

The Chicago Tribune, the greatest anti-McKinley Republican paper of the west, has been doing some figuring on these wool and woolen duties. The result is given in the following table:

	Old.	New.
Merino wools	49 20	54 10
Combing wools	43 14	61 52
Carpet wools	24 60	39 00
Woolen worsted yarns	71 61	103 93
Woolen cloths	71 45	90 88
Worsted cloths	67 71	103 82
Blankets, hats and flannels	66 97 / 69 70	93 62 / 110 84
Women's and children's dress g'ds. / Cotton warp	68 00 / 60 08	88 37
Ditto, all wool	85 25	110 83
	70 11	98 76
Ready made clothing	54 98	84 72
Cloaks, jackets, etc., for women	66 09	82 10
Webbings, dress trimmings, etc	64 55	89 11
Carpets	46 81	60 68
Total manufactures wool	67 15	91 63
Total wool schedule	58 98	78 41

The Tribune goes further with its figuring and makes a careful calculation of the entire cost of these McKinley duties to the country. It estimates this total cost at from $100,000,000 to $120,000,000 a year. This is, as it shows, nearly $2 per head for the entire population of the United States, or for each family nearly $10 a year. As, however, the bulk of woolen goods is consumed in the north, by reason of the colder climate, The Tribune justly concludes that the extra McKinley cost to each family in the north will average not less than $15.

Cutting Saw Teeth.

Mr. E. Dickinson, of Sheffield, England, was one of the English delegates to the recent meeting of the Iron and Steel Institute in New York. He has returned home, and has been talking about what he saw in America. He said he visited the saw and file manufactory of Disston & Sons at Tacony, Pa., and found there a machine for cutting and graduating saw teeth. A boy feeds the sheets into the machine, which cuts the teeth at the rate of 1,500 per minute. The success of this machine is so great that Mr. Dickinson says he observed in the factory packages of saws addressed to England.

And we are so foolish as to impose a McKinley tax on ourselves of 40 per cent. on hand saws in order to protect these successful manufacturers, who can sell their saws in England. Worse still, this duty is used to fortify a domestic combination or trust in the safe possession of the "home market."

The Price of Cutlery.

An ordinary carving knife, which sold before the McKinley law went into effect for seventy-five cents, is now sold for ninety-five cents. A better knife, which bore a pre-McKinley price of $1.50, is now sold at the McKinley price of $1.79. A fifty cent pocket knife has now become a sixty-five cent knife, but the finer knives have advanced less, by reason of a relatively lower duty on these. A $2 knife with a shell handle has advanced in price only twenty-five cents. About 10 per cent. has been added to the price of scissors.

A sample case under McKinley's cutlery duties will explain why knives have gone up. A dozen common knives costing sixty cents must pay an ad valorem duty of 50 per cent., which equals thirty cents, and a specific duty of fifty cents, total eighty cents, or an equivalent of 133 per cent. ad valorem.

Whistling to Keep Up Its Courage.

The Manufacturer, a high tariff organ of the Pennsylvania protected "mill bosses," is whistling since the election to keep its courage up. It makes a remarkable admission when it says: "On behalf of the manufacturers of the United States we make the assertion that they can stand free trade if the rest of the people can." They "can stand free trade," and yet they oppose the mere reduction of the tariff, and even clamor for higher protection!

Eupepsy.

W. D. Sult, Druggist, Bippus, Ind. testifies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of Rheumatism of 10 years' standing." Abraham Hare, druggist, Bellville, Ohio affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 20 years experience, is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys or Blood. Only a half dollar a bottle at.

FROM ST. JOSEPH HOSPITAL.

A young girl here had been suffering for 12 years with Blood Diseases until she had lost the use of her limbs, and was subject to many troubles incident to the disease. The physicians declared her case incurable and predicted that her life would come to a speedy end. After taking S.S.S. she recuperated so fast that it was plain that she had obtained a new lease on life, and she has continued to grow better until her permanent cure is assured. Many other patients in our hospital have obtained signal benefit from S.S.S., and it has become quite a favorite in our house.

CURED HERSELF and HER CHILD

S.S.S. has relieved me of a terrible Scrofula, from which I had suffered for years. It effected my nose first as catarrh, then carried off the bone, and continued to eat until it destroyed the soft bone in the right side of the nose, then went to my throat, and later on to my lungs, and it looked as if I was doomed. S.S.S. has cured me, and has also cured my little daughter of the same disease.

A DYSPEPTIC'S ARGUMENT

Is a growl, and that growl marks the limit of argument with him. The best way to get him to try a medicine would be to advise against it—but notice how different his tone after using Burdock Blood Bitters.

"I have suffered with Dyspepsia for the last two years. Not long ago I commenced taking B. B. B. I am now on the second bottle and feel like a new man. G. KNOX, 12 Sherwood Ave., Binghamton, N. Y."

REPEATED TESTS WITH UNIFORM SUCCESS prove the fact that Burdock Blood Bitters will cure The reason is plain, it tones the stomach to natural action and keeps the sluice ways of the system free from clogging impurities.

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia and heart disease for nine years, and found no relief until I tried Burdock Blood Bitters. Now I am well after taking two bottles. MRS. ETTIE FRAZIER, Bowne, Mich."

THE FIGURE "9."

The figure 9 in our dates will make a long stay. No man or woman now living will ever date a document without using the figure 9. It stands in the third place in 1890, where it will remain 10 years and then move up to second place in 1900 where it will rest for one hundred years.

There is another "9" which has also come to stay. It is unlike the figure 9 in our dates in the respect that it has already moved up to first place, where it will permanently remain. It is called the "No 9" High Arm Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine.

The "No. 9" was endorsed for first place by the experts of Europe at the Paris Exposition of 1889 where, after a severe contest with the leading machines of the world, it was awarded the only Grand Prize given to family sewing machines, all others on exhibit having received lower awards of gold medals, etc. The French Government also recognized its superiority by the decoration of Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, President of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor.

The "No. 9" is not an old machine improved upon, but is an entirely new machine, and the Grand Prize at Paris was awarded it as the grandest advance in sewing machine mechanism of the age. Those who buy it can rest assured, therefore, of having the very latest and best.

"Seeing is Believing."

And the best lamp ever made, like Aladdin's of old, a "wonderful lamp!" A lamp absolutely non-explosive and unbreakable, which gives a clear, soft, brilliant white light of 85 candle power! Purer and brighter than gas light, softer than electric light, more cheerful than either! That lamp is

"The Rochester."

And with it there is no smoke, no smell, no broken chimneys, no flickering, no sweating, no climbing up of the flame, no "tantrums" nor annoyance of any kind, and it never needs trimming. Its founts (oil reservoirs) being tough rolled seamless brass, with central draft, it is absolutely unbreakable, and as safe as a tallow candle.

Only five years old, and over two million of these lamps in use. It must be a GOOD lamp to make such a telling success. Indeed it is, for lamps may come and lamps may go, but the "Rochester" shines on forever! We make over 2,000 artistic varieties,—Hanging and Table Lamps, Banquet, Study, Vase and Piano Lamps,—every kind, in Bronze, Porcelain, Brass, Nickel and Black Wrought Iron.

Ask the lamp dealer for it. Look for the trade-mark stamp: "THE ROCHESTER." If he hasn't the genuine Rochester and the style you want, or if no lamp-store is near, send to us for free illustrated catalogue (and reduced price-list), and we will box and send you any lamp safely by express, right to your door.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

THE MILKMAIDS' CONVENTION.

In the matter of entertainments the young ladies of the Loyal Temperance Legion now stand at the head of the class. The Milkmaids' Convention, given by them on Thursday evening last, was something novel, but it was none the less interesting. About twenty-five young ladies in all took part, all of whom, except the officers of the convention and the reporters, were attired in an appropriate uniform. The program opened with a grand march by the milkmaids, each maid being armed with a pail. After this march they retired behind the scenes and then appeared a second time on the floor all armed with a three legged stool. They then marched back to the stage and seating themselves on their stools, the chairmaid opened the proceedings and the fun began. The design of the play is to burlesque a Woman's Rights Convention, and it was "utterly killing" from first to last. The odd and ludicrous situations and comical sayings followed each other so rapidly in the dialogue, that the interest of the spectators was not allowed to flag in the least. The characters all carried their parts very nicely, but the Chairmaid and Page, at the two extremes of the cast, did so exceptionally well, that they bore away the honors. To cap the climax at the finale, Mrs. O'Leary's cow appeared on the stage, as large as life and twice as handsome, and the convention closed in a kind of a general jubilee over the historical cow. The parts had been well rehearsed so that the program moved along very smoothly. We understand that the chief credit for preparing and arranging the affair is due to Mrs. H. L. Stewart. The inclement weather kept some people away, but there was a good audience present and those who attended certainly had cause to envy the foolish virgins who remained at home.

THE OVIDE MUSIN CONCERT.

Seldom does a Tecumseh audience have the privilege of listening to a finer musical entertainment than the concert by the Ovide Musin troupe last Saturday evening. Musin himself is a first class artist with the violin and his support was such that he presented a wonderful program. Eduard Scharf is a superior pianist and we never listened to a better baritone than Karl Storr. Annie Louise Tanner has a soprano voice of astonishing compass, which is very effective, and Inez Parmater posseses a rich mellow contralto voice. The members of the troupe have sang together several seasons and hence they sing in perfect harmony. There were eleven numbers on the program, nearly all of which were favored with an encore, and in each case the responses, which were given freely and promptly, captivated the audience. The Opera House was crowded to overflowing, every available seat being taken. The lecture committee as well as our citizens in general certainly have reason to congratulate themselves upon the grand success of the entertainment course thus far.

TWO PAPERS FOR THE PRICE OF ONE.

The original and enterprising departure of The St. Louis Republic in sending two papers of six pages every week to the subscribers of its weekly edition, in place of one 10 page paper, is an earnest of the good treatment promised from time to time in other ways. The plan of issuing twice a week has proved very satisfactory to all The Republic's readers, who find that they get the news earlier than is possible by any other weekly paper, while paying only $1 a year. Another original feature of The Republic is the publication of three special State editions, which contain all the State news of Missouri, Illinois and Texas; thus retaining the General Edition of the mass of merely local news which usually loads the columns of other weeklies, and making The Republic the best general weekly in the country. Now is the time to subscribe. Remember the price is only $1 per annum, and anyone sending in the subscriptions of four new subscribers, will receive one additional copy free. Sample copies and a Premium Catalogue of 48 pages will be sent free on application. Address all orders, "The Republic, St. Louis, Mo."

A SINGER'S ROYAL GUEST.

How Madame Albani Entertains Queen Victoria at an Informal Tea.

Once every summer Queen Victoria drives over from her Balmoral Castle to the Scottish Highlands home of Madame Albani-Gye, the famous prima donna, where the latter entertains her at an informal tea. For years the Queen has made a practice of this, a compliment which Her Majesty bestows upon no other woman in the kingdom. It is a return for Madame Albani's appearance each year at court to sing before the Queen, and to the prima-donna it affords an exceptional glimpse of England's royal sovereign.

"No outsiders are ever present," says Madame Albani, "and I see Victoria as a woman; never as a queen."

"How do you entertain your royal guest?" was asked of the prima-donna by a friend.

And for more than an hour the great singer held the uninterrupted interest of a private dinner-party with the story of how she served a tea for the Queen.

So full of interest was the narrative that Madame Albani was induced to write out the account, and it will shortly appear in The Ladies' Home Journal, of Philadelphia, under the title of 'Victoria at my Tea-Table.' Of its freshness of interest the caption of the article is the best indication.

A copy of the last portrait taken of Queen Victoria, and printed only for Her Majesty and the royal family, will accompany the article. "It will be my last portrait," wrote the Queen on this presentation copy, which is the only copy outside royal household.

The Columbia Cycle Calendar.

By far the most valuable business calendar for 1891, and entirely unique in design, is the Columbia Cycle Calendar and Stand, issued by the Pope Mfg. Co., of Boston, Mass. The Calendar is in the form of a pad containing 366 leaves, each 5½x2½ inches, each leaf containing blank for memoranda, and as the leaves are only fastened at the upper end, any leaf can be exposed, no stub being left when the leaves are torn off. The pad rests upon a stand, containing pen rack and pencil holder, and made of stained wood mounted with raised letters in brass, thus forming an ornamental paper weight. The day of the week and the day of the year, together with the number of the days to come, are given, and each slip bears a short paragraph pertaining to cycling and kindred subjects. These paragraphs have been carefully collated from the leading publications and prominent writers the larger number having been specially written for this purpose. Although this is the sixth issue of the Calendar, all the matter is fresh and new, comprising notable events in cycling, opinions of physicians and clergymen, hints about road making, and numerous other topics.

It has the endorsement of leading Democrats; it contains all the Washington and National news; its record of congressional proceedings will be full and complete, and it is in every way a worthy exponent of sound Democratic Doctrine. Subscribe now and secure this staunch organ of the party of the people.

The Tecumseh HERALD and NATIONAL DEMOCRAT for $2.25 per year in advance.

FILLS THE BILL.

The above is a caption of an announcement of THE WEEKLY DETROIT FREE PRESS, which will be found in another column. Nothing could be more true than that THE FREE PRESS "fills the bill" in all that appertains to the ideal family newspaper. It is the largest of Michigan papers and its twelve to sixteen pages constitute a veritable cyclopedia of news and current literature—a vast book of instructions and entertainment. Enterprising, yet conservative, THE FREE PRESS is always clean and reliable, hence its widespread influence and circulation. Michigan's representative paper should certainly find a place in every Michigan home.

The publishers offer a large number of attractive premiums with the paper. They will also give away nearly $2.000 worth of special prizes to fifty persons who send the largest lists of subscribers between December 22 and May 31, 1891.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

VILLAGE OF TECUMSEH,
Council Room, Dec. 1, 1890.

Regular Session. Present—President Heesen; Trustees Ames Elliott, Heck, James, Kennedy, and the recorder.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

REPORTS OF THE COMMITTEES.

Mr. Smith, of the cemetery committee, reported that he had consulted with a lawyer with reference to the legality of the council accepting a sum of money in trust, to be used for a specific purpose, and that from the precedents found, it appeared that the council could, legally accept such a trust. On motion the matter was referred back to the cemetery committee.

REPORTS OF OFFICERS

The sexton reported two interments for November and one lot sold, with treasurer's receipt for $15.00 interment fees and vault rent. Report accepted and ordered filed

The street commissioner reported the following street labor for November:—

Hand labor 5 days; street commissioner 15 days; corporation team 21 days; poll tax worked, 5 days. Report accepted and ordered filed.

The marshal submitted the following report:—

THE TRIBUNE'S NEW ENTERPRISE.

Whatever the late election proves with regard to the Tariff, it was not to be expected that The New York Tribune, the life-long and able champion of Protection for Agriculture and Industry, would yield one inch of ground. The Prospectus of The Tribune in another column indicates that that enterprising newspaper proposes to plant its battle flag in the camp of the Farmers especially in every part of the United States. Hon. Roswell G. Horr, of Michigan, has been engaged by The Tribune to devote himself in his breezy, entertaining and masterly manner to expounding the Tariff through the columns of The Tribune, and to attending meetings of Farmers' Institutes, Clubs, etc., and addressing them on this topic. The Tribune is exceedingly wide awake, and its enterprise in this matter will certainly command the respect of the whole country. Among the special contributors to The Tribune in 1891 are a number of the foremost minds in America. It is noticeable that our metropolitan neighbor finds enough brilliant writers in the United States to fill its pages with wise and witty reading, without going to Europe for any. A series of admirable articles to young men has been planned on How to Succeed in Life, and there are several others for Farmers and Families. Our readers will do well to examine a sample copy of The Tribune before making up their budget of reading matter for 1891.

It will be seen there are 14 straight Republicans and 14 straight Democrats, with four Patrons, whose leanings are towards Democracy, but as the Executive Board of Patrons, in session at Greenville, voted to instruct the men elected upon that ticket to fuse with nobody unless fusion was in the interest of their society and its views, it is hardly to be supposed that the Democrats will have a walk-away on all subjects.

AN EXPENSIVE FIDDLE.

"See that fiddle over there?" interrogated a gentleman to Landlord Farrel, at the Lake Shore hotel this morning, as he pointed to a rusty looking coffin-shaped box setting under the table in the office, in the midst of a chaos of other small baggage.

"Yes, what of it?"

"You didn't know there was a small fortune tied up in there, did you?"

"No. Is that so?"

"Right you are. There's $5,000 worth of fiddle right there, and it belongs to Ovide Musin. Yes, there he is, just starting off down town for a spin in the crisp, wintry air. The company came down on 12, didn't they? Yes. Well, they appear tonight in Tecumseh in the regular lecture course, and are here for a few hours between trains. I suppose that's the most valuable piece of wood and cat intestines there is in existence.

"Musin is pretty well satisfied that the instrument was in the hands of the Bourbon dynasty, in France, and it has the royal arms on the back. It is over two hundred years old. It is a Cremona violin, so called from the place where it was made, a province in northern Italy, which acquired great fame for its fiddles in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries."—Adrian Times.

A PRESENT TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

It is with pleasure that we announce to our many patrons that we have made arrangements with the wide-awake, illustrated farm magazine, the American Farmer, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., and read by nearly 200,000 farmers, by which that great publication will be mailed direct, FREE, to the address of any of our subscribers who will come in and pay up all arrearages on subscription and one year in advance from date, and to any new subscriber who will pay one year in advance. This is a grand opportunity to obtain a first class farm journal free. The American Farmer is a large 16-page journal, of national circulation, which ranks among the leading agricultural papers. It treats the question of economy in agriculture and the rights and privileges of that vast body of citizens—American Farmers—whose industry is the basis of all material and national prosperity. Its highest purpose is the elevation and ennobling of Agriculture through the higher and broader education of men and women engaged in its pursuits. The regular subscription price of the American Farmer is $1.00 per year. IT COSTS YOU NOTHING. From any one number ideas can be obtained that will be worth thrice the subscription price to you or members of your household, YET YOU GET IT FREE. Call and see sample copy.

HEESEN BROS' FOUNDRY.

The first heat at Heesen Bros' new foundry was taken last Tuesday forenoon, and thus another new manufacturing establishment has been started in Tecumseh. The inception of this enterprise is a good illustration of how large concerns sometimes grow from small beginnings.

John Heesen has long been recognized as one of the inventive geniuses of this town. He has a natural tact for invention and mechanics, and his talents in this direction have been put to good use. About twenty years ago he procured letters patent for the original Wolverine Hog Ringer and rings. In 1871 the firm of Heesen Bros & Co. was organized to manufacture them, the firm consisting of Geo. and John Heesen and Henry Nyland. The business at first was conducted on a modest scale, but it had a healthy growth each year, and in 1879, their present shop was built between Pearl street and the Lake Shore depot. Here the business continued to develop, until it has become one of the best paying manufacturing establishments in Tecumseh, and now, in the erection of the new foundry they take another stride forward, which promises to pan out handsomely.

Their ringers are made of gray iron castings. The rings are made in their own shop here, with special machinery invented by John Heesen. The ringer castings they have bought, and fitted the pieces together here at home. Last year they conceived the notion of manufacturing their own ringer castings and at once began to investigate the method and cost of manufacture. And this investigation led to the construction of the new shop. Ground was broken for the new building in July last, a lot having been purchased just north of the present shop lot, and the work has been rapidly pushed along since that time. The main building is 62 by 37 feet, one story high, with a cupola room adjoining, 30 by 16 feet and two stories high. The building is built with stone foundations, brick walls and an iron roof. At the west end of the lot, and about five rods distant from the old shop and the foundry, a brick store house has been erected, which will be used for storing manufactured goods, patterns, etc., thus lessening the risk of loss by fire. The cupola is a "Colliau" cupola, of the latest design and most improved construction.

The design of the firm is to gradually work into the manufacture of all kinds of ollow ware, such as pots, kettles, spiders, pan cake griddles etc. They will also make their own ringers, and such other light castings as they can find market for. They have already received orders from the Babcock Corn Planter Co. of Adrian for castings that are used on these corn planters.

Quite an audience assembled Tuesday forenoon to see the first heat taken off. Admission was free and no extra charge for reserved seats. The cupola was charged about nine o'clock and at ten the molten iron was filling the moulds. Several of the moulders from Brewer's foundry happened in to see the fun and volunteered their assistance. There was right lively work for about an hour and the cupola was thoroughly tested to furnish the molten iron fast enough to keep the boys busy. About 200 flasks were filled which contained hog ringers, steady pins and other small articles. Eighteen weights for snap flasks were also run, for use in the shop. These probably took more iron than all the small flasks. The floor of the moulding room was not over half filled. Leaving the necessary room for the sand pile and other traps, the floor will accommodate fully 400 snap flasks such as they will ordinarially use. Some of the kettles and griddles which they expect to make hereafter will require larger flasks. The foreman of the moulding room, Mr. Wes Baragar, is an experienced man at this special branch of work. Their force will be increased from time to time as the business expands. Mr. John Heesen will act as superintendent of the shop and Rudolph Heesen will act as business manager of the firm. The new concern starts out with flattering prospects for a large and lucrative trade.

Will the enterprise succeed, some people ask. We have no reason to believe otherwise. The firm started out on a much smaller scale, when they began the manufacture of hog ringers. They have the 'git thar' gait in whatever they undertake, they have a gilt-edged credit and plenty of pluck. We consider their success assured in advance.

THE HERALD FOR 1891.

The HERALD is still in the ring, fully prepared to fill its accustomed place during the year of grace 1891. The 15th day of November last completed a cycle of sixteen years under its present management, and Providence permitting, the "old reliable" is likely to sail right along under the same pilot for sixteen years to come.

It is needless to inform the public what to expect in our columns during the ensuing twelve months. The general policy of the paper is well known and its record has been made. First and foremost, it will aim to be a first-class local newspaper, to act as a faithful chronicler of all local happenings of importance within the territory of its circulation. In this respect it will continue to lead all competitors.

Recognizing the stringency of the times caused by excessive taxation, we shall endeavor to accommodate the necessities of our patrons by placing our rates at the lowest possibl point, and our terms for 1891 have been adjusted with that end in view.

OFFER NO. ONE.

We have made arrangements with that wide-awake illustrated farm magazine, The American Farmer, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., and read by nearly 200,000 farmers, by which that great publication will be mailed direct to the address of any of our subscribers who will pay up all arrearages and a year in advance. The subscription price of the American Farmer is $1.00 per year. It costs you nothing. The two papers at our full rate of $1.50 per year.

OFFER NO. TWO.

The Great Divide is the title of a new monthly magazine published at Denver, Colorado, which has already taken a position among the best periodicals of this country. Our Club offer with the Great Divide is the most liberal one ever extended to our patrons. The Magazine for one year, the HERALD for one year and the Gemstone Cabinet for a premium will be given for $2.00. A sample copy of the magazine and a specimen of the Gemstone Cabinet can be seen at this office.

OFFER NO. THREE.

We offer reduced rates for the HERALD alone when payment is made strictly in advance. We earnestly urge upon our patrons the benefits of this plan. Call at our office in January, pay for your paper one year in advance, and thus secure the lowest cash rates. By so doing you will help yourself and help us at the same time. We will furnish the HERALD alone'

THE AILING TRAMP.

He Had Consumption and Was in Search of a Milder Climate.

"THE otherday I was at my uncle's, near Niagara Falls, in Canada, and had hardly arrived when he said:

"Now, Nevvy, you'll be wandering around more or less, and I want to caution you about an old ram I took up as an estray the other week. He's down in the lot where the gravel pit is, and just as sure as you give him a show he'll be the death of you. I saw him knock a cow off her feet at one bang, and I wouldn't go into the lot for fifty dollars."

Next day I skirted the fences and found the old chap anxious for business. I didn't give him an opening, however, but somebody else did. I was standing in the barn with uncle, when he suddenly exclaimed:

"Great Joseph! but there's a tramp in the gravel pit lot. That ram will smash him to pulp in two minutes!"

He shouted, waved his hat, and shouted again, but the tramp was a quarter of a mile away, and walking with his head down. The ram was lying down in the pit, and the yelling brought him out. We saw him scramble up the bank, and my uncle gasped out:

"Git a hoss hitched up to go for the undertaker, for that tramp won't be alive two minutes later!"

He was, though. The ram came at him on an angle, and he caught sight of the animal when about ten rods off. He wheeled to the right, stood still, and the ram got within ten feet, and then sailed through the air on a straight line to strike him. Next instant the tramp had him by the horns, and with a twist and a jerk he broke his neck with a snap. He tarried to be sure that the ram was dead, and then came on, climbed the fence, and said to us:

"Gentlemen, you see before you a man who has been unfortunate. I have consumption and am hardly able to stand; I want to get to a milder climate as soon as possible."—N. Y. Sun.

Startled Him Badly.

Down below Natchez, while the boat was running in close to the left-hand bank and had stopped her wheels to avoid a big tree floating in an eddy, we saw a native sitting on a stump fishing. He sat bent over, hat over his eyes, and there was scarcely a movement to tell that he was alive. We had a smart Aleck with us on the promenade deck, and he had no sooner caught sight of the native than he called to one of the deckhands to toss him up a potato. A peck or more of the tubers were lying loose near a pile of sacks, and one was quickly tossed up.

"Now see me startle him," said Smart Aleck, as he swung his arm for a throw.

The distance was only about a hundred feet, and his aim was so true that the potato landed on the native's head with a dull thud. His motions were so quick that we couldn't agree as to how he did it, but in about three seconds he had dropped his fish-pole, pulled a revolver as long as his arm, and fired at Smart Aleck. The bullet bored a hole in his silk hat just above his hair, and the young man sank down in a heap and fainted dead away. When we restored him to his senses he carefully felt of the top of his head; looked back at the fisherman, and absently asked:

"Did she explode both boilers or only one?"—N. Y. Sun.

Archaeology from the Ark.

There is a town on the shore of Lake Ontario where dwells a widowed clergyman, who boards at the house of a middle-aged woman who always knows every thing and never fails to show it. One day at dinner the minister began to talk about a young boy whose acquaintance he had made—one who seemed to him more than ordinarily bright.

"Why," he said, "he was greatly interested in history, and even in archaeology he had made great progress. He's got a collection of archaeological specimens."

"Archaeology?" said the landlady. "Oh yes! all about the ark."—N. Y. Tribune.

THE UNDAUNTED BOOK FIEND.

The Daughter—How dare you fairly pound my door down?

The Book Fiend—I beg your pardon. Have I disturbed you?

"Disturbed! Fly, or I'll call the police! You have waked our baby."

"Oh! Well, just let me get him to sleep for you while you look over a copy of The Slings and Arrows of Outrageous Fortune—only one dollar."—Texas Siftings.

A Basis for Future Operations.

Mr. Billus—There's no use laying all the blame on me, Maria, whenever we have a fuss. It takes two to make a quarrel.

Mrs. Billus—I know it, but it takes only one to apologize, and I want you to understand I am tired of doing all the apologizing. After this, John Billus, it's going to take two to make up!—Chicago Tribune.

A Stayer.

Mother—I hope you liked Mr. Wearisome, who called last night; he is such a staid young man.

Ethel—Stayed! I should say he did. I never was so tired in my life.—West Shore.

A RAILROAD'S FEELINGS.

How a Traveler Gleaned Some Strictly Original Information.

"I should like to go out to Lansing on your road," said a man at the ticket office of the Third street depot the other day.

"Very well."

"What is the fare?"

"Two forty."

"That is too much. I must economize. I am always willing to be just and liberal, but there is a limit to my finances. I will give you two dollars."

"Can't do it."

"I will put the cash right down in your hand."

"No use."

"Then I can't go. I have to economize."

"I'll tell you how you can get out for $1.50," said the agent.

"How?"

"Walk."

"By George, old man, shake! I'll do it. I'm a thousand times obliged. I thought of it first, but I didn't want to hurt the railroad's feelings and so kept still. Put 'er thar, and if I can ever help you save a dollar I'll go a mile to do it."—Detroit Free Press.

Not Up in Nautical Terms.

Alonzo Gushington (to Miss Anastasia, Prim, his affianced)—See yon yacht, Anastasia, how it lingers near the shore, as if loth to leave it? I envy the yacht, with you the shore, Anastasia.

Miss Anastasia (stiffly)—Alonzo, you are not a nautical man, are you?

Young Gushington—No, Anastasia.

Miss Anastasia—Then I pardon you.

Young Gushington—Pardon me, Anastasia. Why pardon?

Miss Anastasia—Because you evidently are not aware that yon yacht is hugging the shore.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

A Pleasing Change.

Jack Wylie—Have you been playing any poker lately?

Mr. B. T. Flush—No: I've quit. My luck was too bad. But I've got a cinch on that new game, "Tiddledy Winks." Ever hear of it?

Jack Wylie—Oh, yes; they call it "Idiot's Delight." But why do you do better at that?

Mr. B. T. Flush—Because the man who puts in the most chips wins.—Judge.

Sweet Charity—A La Mode.

"Mr. Potts, we have come on behalf of the Charitable Cooking School. We wish to get all the things at cost or below. If you refuse this, Mr. Potts, we are in a position to make you regret it—But, dear Mr. Potts, we feel sure you will oblige us. It is such a beautiful charity."

Mr. Potts (aside, sadly)—They get the halo, and I pay the piper.—Life.

He Wasn't a Singer.

Two men were talking about the growth of Buffalo, and one of them was kicking himself because he hadn't made more money out of it. "Why," says he, "If I'd bought land out there"—naming a growing district—"ten years ago, I could have been worth a hundred thousand now. And it could have been bought then for a song." "Why didn't you buy it, then?" "I couldn't sing."—Buffalo Express.

A Mean Advantage.

Jack—I'll never smoke in the presence of a lady again.

Tom—Why not, if she doesn't object?

Jack—I was once smoking while with a lady and began blowing rings. She slipped her finger through one and considered herself engaged.—Munsey's Weekly.

A PLAIN QUESTION PLAINLY ANSWERED.

Customer—Oi wan tu see some fur gloves.

Dealer—Any special fur?

Customer—Sor?

Dealer—What fur?

Customer—Tu kape me hands warm, o'course.—Jury.

His Occupation.

"Have you no occupation, my poor man?" asked the good woman as she put a plate of beans before the turnpike tourist.

"Yes, mum," he answered, with his mouth full. "I'm a fancy stone-cutter."

"A lapidary?"

"Yes'm; a dilapidary."—Chicago Tribune.

The Youthful G. A. R. Idea.

New Minister—And, Johnnie, what are you going to be when you grow up?

Johnnie—Oh, I'm goin' to be a soldier for awhile.

N. M.—Indeed?

Johnnie—Yes, and then after that every body in the family'll get twelve dollars every month for nothing, just like we do now.—Life.

Little Tin Saints.

Mary—It has gone so far that no respectable people read the newspapers now.

Anne—That's a fact. Did you ever read anything like that divorce case in the Evening News?

Mary—No; I never did.—Judge.

Naturally.

"What is the most striking feature of your celebrated variety show?"

"The boxing match, of course."—Munsey's Weekly.

A CIRCUS REHEARSAL.

With a Shanghai Rooster and Billy Goat as Performers.

IT WAS a beautiful Saturday, late in October. Autumn, foremost of Nature's scenic artists, had painted the woods with a marvelous prodigality of color. A brooding hush was over all the landscape, which filled the bosom of Mickey Finn's Billy goat with sadness as he stood on the sunny slope of Stumpy Field and heard the rustle of the dried corn leaves and watched the pale green beauty fade from the mullein stalks and jimson weeds as they were smitten by the cold breath of annual decay.

The grass, too, the Billy noticed with signs of uneasiness, was getting dry and tasteless. He looked off toward the Finn cabbage patch. The large heads still stood unplucked on their stalks. Great tears ran down the goat's cheeks as he realized that the feast of cabbages was not for him. He was roused from his painful reverie by a belated bluebird, which lit on the fence and sang him a parting serenade ere the musical bunch of feathers flew southward to the orange groves in the land of tropical delights. A chipmunk whisked by him on the stone wall, nodded with tantalizing freedom to the goat, and disappeared. A loud scaring overhead deepened the bitterness in the heart of the goat as he realized that he only was tied with the clothes-line.

These reflections had reduced the four-footed captive to a condition of mute despair, when on the brooding hush above alluded to there broke a cheery whistle. The Billy turned tail on the saddening scenery, and was about to seek surcease of sorrow in sleep in his burrow, but when that familiar whistle smote upon his ear he stopped short, like "Grandfather's Clock," and listened. The whistle sounded nearer, and uncertainty changed to assurance in the goat's eloquent eyes as a small boy leaped over the fence and came toward him. Those who have been confined in a gloomy cell know what joy there is in hearing the key of deliverance grate in the lock. Such joy the goat felt. His deliverer had come. If the goat could have sung, his happiness would undoubtedly have found expression in the words:

"He's after me, after me;
I'm the individual he requires."

Little Mike loosened the galling clothes-line from the neck of the goat, and together they strolled leisurely up the Old Point road, the goat stopping now and then to pick up a stray piece of brown paper and an occasional bit of old corset whalebone. Little Mike loved the goat tenderly. Indeed, his affection rivaled that of Mary for her lamb. He would no doubt have taken the goat to school with him but for the fact that the teacher might have acted rudely to the animal. In that event the teacher would no doubt have tried to put the goat out of the school-house, when—but let us return to the boy and the goat.

Mickey whispered to the Billy as they went along that his mother had gone down to Ponckhockie to buy his father a new pair of overalls; that he had been left alone in the shanty, and that as he was lonesome he had come to get the Billy to cheer him up. The Billy wagged the short joy barometer at the southeast end of his body, and seemed to understand every word his companion said. And so, like two bosom friends as they were, they wandered up the road and into the shanty.

To relieve the harrowing suspense of the reader, it may as well be said that Mickey was going to open a circus in Doolan's barn. The idea had been in his mind for a long time, but during the past week it had assumed a tangible shape, and he had begun the collection of curiosities for the monagerie, which is always the inseparable adjunct of a circus. He had even progressed so far in the preparations as to have drafted out a rude programme on the smooth side of a shingle. This programme had caused Mickey a good deal of thought, but when completed it was a thing of beauty as well as expressive brevity. This is a sample copy slightly revised:

MICKEY FINN'S ANIMAL SHOW AND SIRKUS!
Next Monday Night in Doolan's Barn!
Come and See the Golden Crested Cuspidor from Arabia!
Come See Mrs. Maloney's Duck Lay an Egg!
A trained Billy Goat Wid Whiskers Will Ate Hay and Perform other Wonderful Thricks!

Five cints for Boys and Girls and Tin Cints for Mothers and Fathers!
☞ No Free Tickets only to the Boy as Feeds the Goat. ☜

But little Mike had not announced all of the wonders upon the bill. He had reserved what promised to be the most interesting part of the performance for a surprise to those who attended the show. In this surprise Mickey intended the goat to be the chief figure. In order to prepare the goat for the rehearsal which was about to take place, he fed the animal heartily on a big ruta baga turnip, patted his head, stroked his back, and by gentle caresses did what he could to subdue the naturally lively disposition of the animal. To these evidences of affection the Billy took gracefully, especially as regarded the ruta baga turnip. When Mickey had got the goat into a sufficiently tractable state he said:

"Now, Billy, you move yourself aisy in the kitchen here till I go out and get the Shanghai rooster. When I bring him in ye'll see what ye'll have to do."

Taking a handful of corn, little Mike went into the yard with a fish-line in his hand. Making a noose in the end of the line, he placed the loop upon the ground and then cried: "Kip, kip, kip!"

Three waddling ducks and a tall, bony Shanghai rooster on stilts came running down the yard. The rooster was the first to arrive. Mickey had tied one end of the fish-line to the end of a clothes-pole, and as the Shanghai stooped to gather in the corn he jerked the line upward and gathered in the bird by the neck. He had some difficulty in landing him, however, as the rooster flopped around at a lively rate, but at last he secured him, and, entering the shanty, dropped him upon the floor. The goat made one or two efforts to pluck the rooster's tail feathers, but was gently restrained by Mickey. Then the rehearsal began. Mickey went into the front room and came back with a large mirror which his mother had won at a raffle. He set this down upon the floor carefully with its face to the wall and then, for safety, tied the goat to the table.

"Now, you kape quiet and ye'll see some fun," said he to the goat, with an admonitory gesture of his forefinger as he took up the looking-glass and turned it so that its back was toward the wall. The rooster had been on a little foraging expedition, looking for crumbs under the table and around the stove. Each time a morsel was secured it seemed to Mickey that the rooster would turn a somersault, so tall was the bird and so eagerly did it swing its head between its legs. Gradually the rooster worked his way around to where the looking-glass stood. The boy had cunningly placed a trail of corn across the kitchen which ended just in front of the looking-glass.

The rooster was following this trail when its eye caught the reflection of a big bony Shanghai in the glass. The rooster stopped and gazed at his adversary. The feathers on his neck arose in hostility. The Shanghai elevated himself on his toes and crowed defiance. Then, with lowered head, he approached the mirror and looked into his own eyes, glaring defiance from the quicksilver. With lightning rapidity the right foot was lifted from the floor and shot across the face of the mirror. Then came a cross-counter with the left foot. The toe touched the face of the mirror without injuring it. By this time the anger of the rooster was fairly aroused. The bird was in the air half the time, and the strokes across the mirror face flew faster and faster, until after three minutes the rooster began to tire and apparently to become filled with a strange wonder that he had not been hit by the bird which so daringly confronted him. In his perplexity the Shanghai even stepped aside and looked behind the mirror to find his enemy. Not until the Shanghai was completely exhausted did little Mike release and turn him into the yard again. Then, as he untied the goat, he said:

"Now, Billy, this is what I want you to do. Jest to shtand on yer hind legs and make believe buck at yer pictur in the frame. But mind ye, don't break it, or I'll break yer head with the spade."

The goat listened gravely and walked toward the mirror. He saw a gray-bearded, ugly-looking Billy approaching him, and he quickened his pace. He backed up a few feet to get a good headway, and started for the mirror on a run. Little Mike realized what he had done and made a rush to grab the Billy around the neck. But it was too late. There was a rush of horns, hide and hoofs through the air, an awful crash of glass, and the goat's head was thrust through the back of the mirror, and he was tearing out of the kitchen with the frame around his neck. As he ran he uttered plaintive "M-a-a-a-s!" which broke on the brooding hush twice before alluded to like the moaning of a lost soul.

The rehearsal was over.—N. Y. Sun.

BEES IN THE GREEN-HOUSE.

A Plan That Every Florist Should Adopt.

A writer on raising plants under glass says that the plants must be jarred when in bloom to insure fertilization. Has he never heard of the natural fertilizers of flowers—bees?

The jarring of plants, any plants, does not assist their growth nor increase their productiveness. Fertilization by hand is unnatural and always unsatisfactory. There is a better and surer way. Let bees be the fertilizers of flowers if a full crop be desired. The bees will do this under glass as well as in the open air.

Since cultivation under glass became general and an increased demand for early cucumbers and tomatoes sprung up, there has been a demand for bees solely for the purpose of fertilization of flowers, and bee-keepers who sell bees have made a specialty in truck garden towns of supplying bees for the purpose.

In many cases the bees are placed within the greenhouse. At first they attempt to fly wide, and strike against the glass, as they have been accustomed to mount on leaving the hive in the open air, but they soon adjust themselves to the new conditions, and begin within a short time to visit the blossoms.

A better way, at least better for the bees, is to place the colony outside of the house, but near. The bees will work inside as well as if the hive were inside. Usually gardeners call for a new colony every season, and they sometimes blame the beekeeper who sold the bees for the short life of the colony. If the bees be in the house any one can see that they are subject to unnatural conditions, and that life must be short.

Every greenhouse is open at least once a day in early, cold spring for ventilation. The summer heat within and the sun outside lead the bees to try the open air. They are chilled and never return, and the colony dwindles rapidly. Therefore the colony should be outside. Then in early spring the bees will not leave the hive unless the temperature be right. At this time, when there is a sharp edge to the wind, when there are few, if any, flowers in the fields, the bees will enjoy the summer warmth of the green-house and go to it and spend all the time in it if there be a place to enter and the weather favorable. They frolic in the sunshine, and, perching on leaves, sip the water left by the sprinkler and attend to their regular duties, namely: Collecting pollen for the young bees, fed to them mixed with honey.

This gathering of pollen from the green-house flowers causes the fertilization. It is complete and thorough, for in early spring, when outside flowers are few, the green-house pasture is the only one, and hence no flower can escape; every flower is visited many times, probably. Even later in the season, when flowers are abundant, the bees will cling to the green-house, because generally the bee works near home when there is opportunity.—George A. Steckwell, in Country Gentleman.

SAVE YOUR BACK.

An Excellent Device for Lifting Stones and Stumps.

The lifting out of stones and stumps, and the after disposal of them, to say nothing of the drawing of logs, etc., demands a contrivance like the illustration. Puting a chain around or grapnel hooks into the object to be drawn, the long arm of the lever 1 is raised, the hook on the short end placed in a chain link, and the weight thrown upon the long arm. When this has been borne to the earth and attached to the part 2, dragging on the ground, the obstruction is raised, the the burden resting on the axle, 3. The team is then attached to the draft link 4, and can much more easily draw the load than when it rests on the ground or an old-fashioned stone-boat. The wheels and axle of a heavy ox cart are best for the purpose, and the crooked timber reaching from axle to earth can be hewed out by any farmer, and quickly ironed by the nearest blacksmith. The common stone-boat can be lifted at its front by the hook and suspended in the rear under a second pair of wheels. It should be rigidly connected with the axle of the hind wheels, and will make an implement of value for stone-picking, wall-building, the hauling of muck, barrels of cider, or any other weighty, unwieldy mass. The proper way to load is to loosen the hook and leave the bow of the boat on the ground, raising it much or little by the lever after the the load is placed. Lever and axle must be held together by a pin and link.

August and September are frequently the most wearing months in the year on some farms, owing to the heavy lifting required. Save your muscles by using brains instead.—Home and Farm.

Saving the Potatoes.

There is more or less rot in the potatoes this season. This is doubtless largely due to the absence of any precaution to destroy the rotten tubers of last year, and the use of infected seed. Much may be done in way of these precautions by sprinkling the potatoes, when stored, with dry air slaked lime; by sorting out all those that are spotted with the disease and turning them to use; the potatoes that are partly decayed may be boiled for the pigs. The rot does not injure them for this use when they are cooked, and if some meal is mixed with the cooked potatoes mashed in the water in which they have been boiled, most excellent fattening food may be made of them.—American Agriculturist.

MATRIMONIAL.

On Tuesday, Dec. 9th. Rev. J. O. Heck tied Miss Anna Munn were united in marriage at the home of the bride, in Flowerfield, Mich. A reception was rendered them at the home of the grooms parents in this village on Wednesday evening, and the couple went to Rome township the next day to reside, where the groom has been installed as pastor of the South Rome Baptist church.

The groom has lived in Tecumseh for several years and has gained a position as one of our most upright and prominent young men. The bride has made a wise choice in the selection of a companion. The groom begins his first pastorial charge under the brightest auspices. His Tecumseh friends will extend to him their hearty wishes for a long life of usefulness and happiness.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD

TECUMSEH, MICH., DEC. 18, 1890.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Go to the war concert to-morrow.

Only one week more to Chrismas.

We have some first-class club offers this season.

The Franklin Glee Club will assist at the war concert.

John W. Benedict is again confined to the house by illness.

Christmas will be generally observed in Tecumseh next Thursday.

Tecumseh's big four glee club will take a part in the war concert.

There will be third degree work at the Masonic Lodge to-morrow evening.

Jesse Exelby of Deerfield was shaking hands with his Tecumseh acquaintances last Monday.

Read our club list carefully and then call and hand in your subscription for the coming year.

The annual election of officers of Tecumseh Lodge, F. & A. M., will take place on Friday evening, Dec. 26th.

Read the supplement sheet this week without fail. It contains interesting reading and several new advertisements.

Charley Bennett, former partner of F. B. Park in the livery business here, is sojourning this week with friends in Tecumseh and Ridgeway.

We are indebted to F. H. Totten for a copy of the Belding Banner, which contains a fine account of the dedication of their new Odd Fellows' Hall.

The ladies of the Macon Temperance Union will give a Map social at the home of Isaac Pennington on Friday evening, Dec. 26th. Supper will be served for 25c. a couple. All are cordially invited.

To give the HERALD boys a chance to eat Christmas turkey, we shall go to press next week on Wednesday evening. Correspondents will please take notice and forward their letters in proper season.

The Baptist Sunday School have a concert and Christmas ship at the Church, Christmas eve. A fine program has been arranged. A cordial invitation is extended to everyone to be present. You will be well entertained.

El Hand commenced cutting ice on the North pond last Monday with a full force of men, and has his large house filled with ice about seven inches thick. He did not propose to run any chances on one of his houses at least.

The Hudson Gazette of last week was a sixteen-page holiday edition, printed on tinted book paper. It is a superb number, both in editorial ability and mechanical execution. Bro. Schermerhorn may well feel proud of his work.

Mr. B. I. Laing, of Lenawee Junction, recently sold 16 hogs which averaged 251 pounds, their age being 7 months and 20 days. This we believe to be ahead of anything recently reported in this line and we consider it a mark worthy the aim of every intelligent farmer.

Geo. W. Kosier, of West Unity, O., visited at Henry Sweet's from Saturday until Monday. He was a member of Battery B, Penn. Artillery, and they had not seen each other since Nov. 3, 1865. It is needless to say that they both enjoyed their brief visit very much.

Mr. De Blowitz, the famous correspondent of the London Times, will contribute another chapter of his memoirs to Harper's Magazine for January. In telling how he became a journalist he will relate many interesting reminiscences of the Franco-Prussian War and of the downfall of the Paris Commune in 1871.

The Forum for December is a very strong number. The leading article is on "The Government of American Cities," by Andrew D. White, wherein he shows that the weakest point of American government is in the management of municipal affairs. He points out in what specific ways we fall far short of all the European governments in this particular. Mr. White has endeavored to make a thorough analysis of the subject, and he indicates a remedy as well as the cause of the evil.

We are indebted to Mrs Daniel Hanford for a relic that is well worth preserving. It is a copy of "Greenleaf's New York, Connecticut and New Jersey Almanack, or Diary, with an Ephemeris for the year of our Lord, 1795" Her father, Robert Plank, had saved up his almanacs for many years and this was the oldest one in his collection. It is about half the size of our modern almanac. Two pages are devoted to each month. It contains a list of U. S. officers. Geo. Washington is President and John Adams, Vice President. Virginia has 19 members of the lower House of Congress, Massachusetts coming next with 14 members. The little book has witnessed the ravages of time and some of the pages are almost illegible.

Fritz & Company have a change of ad. this week.

Tony Leon's celebrated orchestra Christmas night.

Avery & Ellis have a change of ad. this week. Read it.

Mrs. L. P. Tribou spent last week with friends in Detroit.

Miss Elida James spent a couple of days in Toledo last week.

Don't forget the concert at the Opera House Christmas night.

Lots of music, lots of fun and lots of specialties at the war concert.

Something for everybody in Christmas goods at Anderson & Co's.

A. B. Cotton of Chicago, was in town a couple of days last week.

Mr. & Mrs. G. W. Jackson spent last Sunday with Ridgeway friends.

Spade, the Clothier, has some news in his advertising space this week.

Capt. Fred B. Wood was in town Tuesday on professional business.

Go to Anderson & Co. for your Presents—look over their Christmas list.

Mrs. A. D. Lawrence has gone to Ann Arbor to receive medical treatment.

Many of the show windows in town are beautifully decorated with holiday goods.

The public schools will close tomorrow for the holiday vacation of two weeks.

Sutton's Uncle Tom's Cabin at Opera House the 26th. The best on the road.

Anderson & Co. have enough handkerchiefs in stock to wipe all the noses in Lenawee County.

John Orr's show window is adorned with a beautiful crayon portrait of the late Dr. Stephenson.

The display of novelties and dry goods in Anderson & Co's show windows is unusually fine.

Preparations are making for a grand time at the Masquerade Dance on Christmas Eve. Armory Hall.

Ellsworth Cairns and Miss Ella Jackson are the extra clerks at Harris & Hiteshu's till after Christmas.

If the clerk of the weather will give us sleighing next week we will forgive him for many past delinquencies.

Mrs. Belle Deldine Hendershot and Aggie Stevens are clerking at Anderson & Co's during the holiday rush.

Have you invited your best girl to the Christmas Prrty? If not, you had better do so at once, or you may get left.

Black Crook at Opera House next Saturday night. Seventeen people. Tickets on sale at Adamson's, 25 and 35cts.

J. H. Darling of Duluth, Minn., is always on time. We received last week his subscription for the coming year. This is an excellent example for other subscribers to follow.

The first heat was taken off at Heesen Bros foundry Tuesday forenoon. Everything ran as smoothly as a bran new top.

We received a communication from Evans Lake, Tuesday, but as no name was affixed thereto, it went the way of all anonymous letters.

The Christmas Party next week Thursday evening, will be the social event of the season. Tony Leon's orchestra will furnish the music.

Alva J. Coddington has been promoted from the position of local express agent to that of train messenger between Monroeville and Steubenville, Ohio.

L. D. Dewey shipped a car load of poultry last Saturday, and a large shipment on Tuesday, also a large one Thursday. Mr. Dewey is getting his share of the poultry.

Reserved seats for the Christmas party will be placed on sale at Adamson's on Saturday morning, Dec. 20th. General admission to gallery 15cts. Reserved seats 25cts.

Lester Clemen's "Old Charley" went the way of all horse flesh last week. He was 23 years of age and a model family horse. Old Charley will be sadly missed in that family circle.

The Epworth League held their second meeting Monday evening. They decided to have for their first public entertainment a social the first week of January. Further notice next week.

Capt. Henry Romeyn, Fifth U. S Infantry, has been ordered from Texas to the Sioux country. He writes that he is going "on a business tour, not solely for health." His address will be Fort Meade, South Dakota.

The W. R. C. of Tecumseh have elected the following officers for the coming year:

Pres.—L. Loana Stacy.
Sr. Vice—Lucy Train.
Jr. Vice—Mrs Frances Haire.
Treas.—Mrs Ella Ingersoll.
Chap.—Mrs. Delia Stevens.
C. n —Mrs. Hattie Macham.
Guard—Mrs. Laura McNeil.

Right dress for the war concert.

W. C. Burridge went to Ann Arbor Tuesday.

Will H. Hayden went to Manchester Tuesday.

Chas. Dell of Battle Creek, is spending a few days in town.

Arthur Gould of Milan, is visiting friends in town this week.

Jud DePuy of Detroit, spent Sunday with Tecumseh friends.

Mrs. Samuel Shutt went to Toledo last Tuesday for a brief visit.

James Wescott of Weston, is visiting his father, H. H. Wescott, this week.

Sheriff Fessenden of Mt. Pleasant was in town a couple of days the first of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Munn of Toledo, came to Tecumseh last week to attend the Heck reception.

The M. E. Sunday School will hold a Christmas tree festival on Wednesday evening next, Christmas Eve.

We will close our store on the afternoon of Christmas and New Years.
ANDERSON & CO.

The Presbyterian Sunday School will have their Christmas tree on Tuesday evening next, Dec. 23d. It is placed on that evening so as not to conflict with other similar entertainments.

A portrait of Miss E. Cora DePuy and a story from her pen entitled, "Budd, the Newsboy" appears in the Christmas number of 'The Journalist.' Miss DePuy is the only Michigan writer thus honored, as well as benefitted, as the Journalist is not only read in every principal city of the United States but is sold on the newsstands of London and Paris.

On account of Christmas and New Year holidays, the C. J & M. R. R. will offer reduced rates of one and one-third fare for the round trip to all points on the C. J. & M. R. R., including Cincinnati. The Coming Week

Will Settle the Fate of the Lodge Bill.

LITTLE HOPE OF ITS PASSAGE AT THE PRESENT TIME.

An Effort Will Be Made to Lay It Aside Temporarily, in Which Case It Will Probably Be Allowed to Die—General Washington News.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—The course of the Senate during the coming week will be mapped out at the caucus of Republican senators to be held Monday night. At present the order of business agreed upon is for the Senate to meet at 10 o'clock each morning, to begin the consideration of the federal election bill at 11 o'clock and to remain in discussion of this measure until the hour of adjournment, which will be probably 5 or 6 o'clock. This will be the programme Monday, but the caucus to be held Monday night will perhaps alter this programme entirely.

There are two propositions before the caucus. One is to change the rules of the Senate in order to establish a method of closing debate so as to bring the election bill to a vote. The other is to lay aside the elections bill for the purpose of taking up financial measures with a view to reporting on the advisability of laying aside the elections bill temporarily during this week. It is not likely that this committee will be able to agree upon anything by the time the caucus meets, although it is possible that a proposition will be laid before the caucus, coming from the president, to pass immediately a bill to purchase the three million ounces surplus silver now on the market. This measure or some other financial measure is likely to displace the elections bill during the week. If the elections bill is laid aside temporarily, the general belief is that it will not come up again. There seems little hope of its passage at this time.

The apportionment question will probably be settled so far as the House is concerned, during the week Mr. Dunnell, the chairman of the census committee, has been assured by the committee on rules that he will be given time for the consideration of the Frank bill, and unless something unforseen should happen, he will call it up before Saturday. There is but little opposition among the Democratic members to make a fight against the measure and it will probably go through without much opposition except from members of the New York City delegation who will contend that New York is entitled to additional representation, basing their claim on the returns of the police census of New York City.

The composite subsidy bill adopted by the committee on merchant marine and fisheries is also on the programme for the week and an effort will be made by its supporters to have two days set apart for its consideration. The committee on rules however may grant one day only. Monday will be individual suspension day. The rest of the week will be consumed in discussing the army appropriation bill, the bill for the retirement of national bank circulation, aimed to relieve the financial situation, and probably the District of Columbia appropriation bill.

Correcting the Tariff Act.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—Representative Flower, of New York, has introduced in the House a joint resolution providing for a clerical error in the tariff act. The resolution amends paragraph 318 so as to read as follows: Insert a parenthesis after the word "confectionery," and strike out the word "chocolate" where it last appears in the paragraph so as to include in parenthesis only the words, "other than chocolate confectionery."

Reducing the Surplus.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—The treasury department under its circular of October 9, redeemed $90,900 four and a half per cent bonds making a total to date of $6,828,300. The heavy purchases of bonds during the week together with the purchases of silver have had the effect of reducing the surplus in the treasury which now is a little more than $12,000,000. At the beginning of the work it was $19,000,000.

A New Magazine.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—The initial number of the Analostan magazine will appear Monday. Mr. Willis B. Hawkins, editor, promises a high class literary monthly, without partisan bias, which will open its pages to a dignified discussion of questions related to the higher purposes of government. Senator Cullom and Representatives Mills and Cummings will contribute to the first number.

Another Presidential Message.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—A meeting of the cabinet considered the financial condition of the country and as a result the president, it is understood, will send a message to congress early this week suggesting as a measures of relief the enactment of legislation for the issue of additional currency based on increased purchases of silver.

Negroes Denounce the Force Bill.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—At a meeting of the executive committee of the colored Reform Tariff bureau here, resolutions denouncing the force bill as prejudicial to the happiness and peace of the colored men of the south, were adopted.

Indians Fought Each Other.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., Dec.—15.—The Journal's Rushville, Neb., special says that the fight was between two bands of Indians, growing out of a dispute as to whether they should go to the Pine Ridge Agency and give up their arms. Several are reported killed. The dispatch says nothing about a fight between the whites and the Indians.

No News in Washington.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—No news was received at the war department of the reported fight between United States troops and Indians near the Bad Land. The press reports are generally discredited at the department.

Michigan's New Governor Sick.

DETROIT, MICH., Dec. 15.—Democratic leaders here are greatly alarmed over a report from Hamburg that Edwin B. Winans, the first Democratic governor elected in Michigan since 1853, is dangerously ill with pneumonia.

A GRAVE QUESTION.

Is Governor-elect Boyd Eligible to His Office?

OMAHA, NEB., Dec. 15.—It has developed that there is a grave question concerning the eligibility of James E. Boyd, Democratic governor-elect of Nebraska. Boyd was born in Ireland in 1834. In 1848 his parents settled at Zanesville, O. In 1849 Joseph Boyd, his father, declared his intention of becoming a citizen of the United States, but did not take out his final papers until October 3, 1890. In the meantime James E. Boyd celebrated his arrival at majority in Zanesville and then came west. He has never declared his intention of becoming a citizen and therefore a subject of Queen Victoria. One lawyer consulted today claims that the act of the elder Boyd in 1890 will relate back to his former act in 1889 and thus gave his son the right of citizenship. Unless this be correct, the late election is null and void and a new one must be held. James E. Boyd held the office of mayor of Omaha several terms during the days of the city's growth and the present disclosure calls into question many important official acts. There is considerable excitement here in political circles. The affair was dug up by the Farmers Alliance which is contesting Boyd's election.

FARMERS ALLIANCE.

THEY PLAN TO SECURE THE BIG EAST STREET SHOPS

In Springfield, O., to Run an Agricultural Implement Factory in Competition With the American Harvester Co.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 15.—A special to the Times-Star from Springfield, Ohio, says: The Farmers' Alliance has appointed a committee to get the mammoth East street shops here to manufacture farm machinery and to oppose the American Harvester company, a combination of harvesting machinery manufacturers. They propose forming a stock company, no one to furnish over $1,000, and to furnish machinery at cost to Alliance members.

A Costly Slide.

CLEVELAND, O., Dec. 15.—The works of the Zero Ice Machine company and the Ohio Plaster company, located on the Lake Shore near Kirtland street, suddenly slid into the lake. The land on which the buildings were built is underlaid with quicksand, which is frequently carried out by springs. The premises thus destroyed covered half an acre, and the loss of land and buildings is about $40,000.

Horribly Mangled.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 15.—Patrick Fitzgerald, a brakeman on the Piqua division of the Panhandle, was fatally injured in the yards here last night. While making a coupling Fitzgerald slipped and fell between the wheels, and the whole cut of cars ran over his body. He was horribly mangled and only lived a few hours. Fitzgerald was single and came here about a week ago from Louisville. He has a sister in Baltimore, Md.

Fatal Collision.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 15.—On the Panhandle railroad an empty engine ran into the rear end of a freight train at the point bridge in this city. Conductor Flood's right arm and hand were badly lacerated; Weighmaster J. Kissel had his right leg broken, and Engineer Halpin and Fireman Chambers were painfully injured by jumping.

A Pension Swindler.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Dec. 15.—C. S. Stoughton, of New York, was arrested by a United States deputy marshal and taken to New York charged with swindling a Mrs. Zeiter out of $1,000 in a pension transaction.

A Murderous Robber.

NEW CASTLE, IND., Dec. 15.—An unknown robber attacked Asa Wallace and wife, an aged couple, residing near here and beat them fatally, and then takiug $1,000 escaped.

FOREIGN FLASHES.

Not the First One.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—Charles Coghlan, well known actor, has been declared bankrupt.

Anti-Semite Society.

BERLIN, Dec. 15.—Herr Gneist and Deputy Rickert have matured the organization of a society to oppose the operations of the anti-semites. They are acting with the sanction of the emperor.

The Butterfield Trial.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—In the trial brought against G. W. Butterfield by Harry Marks the latter was further examined. He declared that the Rae mine was an honest venture. He said the Butterfield pamphlet accusing him of stealing money and jewelry from Mrs. Koppel, originally appeared in New York, but he did not bring an action for damages there.

The Kilkenny Election.

KILKENNY, Dec. 15—Mr. Michael Davitt, in an interview said: "Our majority in the North Kilkenny election will certainly be fifteen hundred and possibly two thousand. I addressed three meetings, all of the most enthusiastic character. The miners are all with us almost to a man. I would not have taken part in this fight if Mr. Parnell had not touched United Ireland, which is as much mine as his."

League Checks to be Dishonored.

DUBLIN, Dec. 15.—Owing to a dispute as to the persons qualified to draw cheques, the national bank has ordered its branches to dishonor league cheques sent to the evicted tenants. The tenants, thus deprived of their weekly means of sustenance, will suffer terribly, or be obliged to have recourse to the poor houses. The laborers on the relief railroad in process of construction between Galway and Clifden have struck for an increase from two to ten shillings per day.

Parnellite Activity.

DUBLIN, Dec. 15.—Barry O'Brien, the first nominee of Parnellites for the vacant seat in the house of commons for Kilkenny, who was withdrawn by his party, is supporting Parnell in the parliamentary contest there. He declares that Parnell is the only possible leader of Irish Nationalists.

The Dublin Express, commenting on the parliamentary contest at Kilkenny, and the activity in the canvass by the Parnellites, asks: "Where is McCarthy?"

TRIPLE HANGING.

Elmer Sharkey, Isaac Smith and Henry Popp Go Thursday Night.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 15.

Unless Governor Campbell interferes there will be a triple hanging at the penitentiary nnnex next Thursday night. Elmer Sharkey, Henry Popp and Isaac Smith are slated to swing off into eternity at that time.

The opinion seems to be pretty general at both the state house and penitentiary that Sharkey and Smith will hang, but Popp's chances for a commutation of sentence to life imprisonment are very good. Popp's crime was the killing of a saloon keeper at Canton, Stark county. The deed was committed while Popp was drunk and the saloon keeper was attempting to eject him from his doggery. The circumstances of the crime were so mitigating that there is but little probability of Popp being hanged for it.

Sharkey, it will be remembered, killed his mother near Eaton, Stark county, beating her brains out with a maul because she would not consent to his contemplated marriage with a girl of that neighborhood. Attempts have been made to prove that he was insane when he committed the crime, but they have thus far been fruitless.

Smith would not hang were his fate dependant upon the testimony of Guy Fowler, the man to whom Smith is said to have confessed, as Fowler's testimony has been impeached to some extent. It is claimed by those opposed to him, however, that he was proved guilty without Fowler's testimony. Governor Campbell will return from the east Monday night and decide the three cases in question soon after his arrival.

SHIPPING SUBSIDIES.

Report of the House Committee on Merchant Marine.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—Mr. Farquhar of New York, chairman of the House committee on merchant marine and fisheries reported the subsidy bill to the House with a report recommending its passage.

The committee in its report calls particular attention to certain details of the bill. First, as to the distinction made in favor of vessels performing voyages of 1,000 miles or less. These will be mainly, it says, to ports in the West Indies, Mexico and Central America. Over 70 and under 500 miles the bounty will be ten cents regardless of the exact distance sailed. Also over 500 and under 1,000 miles it will be twenty cents without regard to precise measurement. This adjustment has been carefully framed, not only to equalize the advantages and facilities of northern and southern ports, but to make sure that the neighboring countries of our continent and its fertile Islands may have increased trade with the United States, and especially to secure the gateway of the gulf ports to the shipping that should hail from them.

KILLED BY INDIANS.

Two White Men Shot by Apaches in Arrizona Territory.

TOMBSTONE, T. T., Dec. 15.—Information was received here that two white men, Jack Bridges and Burk Robinson, were killed by Apaches in the Guadaloupe mountains Friday. Bridges discovered some freshly killed meat and went to Hall's ranch to notify the men there. Then in company with Robinson and another man they went to the place where the meat was found, to investigate the matter. They had just arrived at the spot when they were fired upon by the Indians. They returned the fire and attempted to escape but were surrounded and two of them soon fell. The other man escaped after being grazed by a bullet, which made a slight scalp wound, and reported the result.

A courier was then sent to this city for help. Sheriff Slaughter immediately telegraphed to Fort Huachua for government assistance and made immediate preparations for departure. The fight took place in the Guadaloupe mountains, east of the San Bernardino ranch, near the Mexican line. Five Indians were seen, but it was impossible to know how many were present, and the fact that the party was surrounded shows that there were more than five there.

BOYCOTTING CHICAGO BEEF.

Terra Haute Farmers Want Home Industries Protected.

TERRE HAUTE, IND., Dec. 15.—The mass meeting called by the county Farmers Alliance association was largely attended by the farmers. Several hundred merchants and professional men took part in the general discussion of the most practical means of driving Nelson Morris & Co's dressed meat out of this market. The final decision was to boycott it. The farmers held that since the Chicago dressed meat had come into the city the local beef market had been destroyed; that Nelson Morris & Co. were selling at a loss to accomplish their purpose and then, when they were secure in it, they would raise the price.

A Creditors' Meeting.

BOSTON, Dec. 15.—A first meeting of the creditors of Whitten, Burdett & Young was held at the rooms of the Boston Merchants' association. Charles H. Allen, as assignee, made a statement showing the liabilities to be $1,077,249, with contingent liabilities of $99,413. The assets are given at $1,091,788. A committee was appointed to confer with the firm and see what was the best offer to be had. An adjourned meeting will be held Friday December 19, when the committee will report.

$25,000 Blaze.

ROCHESTER, PA., Dec. 15.—Fire burned Miller & Sons planing mill, Kearcher Brothers' flouring mills, the Pennsylvania railroad freight depot, and several small offices. Miller & Sons loss is $25,000, insurance $6,000; Kearcher Brothers loss $15,000, insurance $10,000. No estimate can be made on the other buildings, but the total loss will reach $50,000. As the town is without fire apparatus great excitement prevailed before the fire was extinguished with water from a railroad tank.

Tennessee Editor Dying.

KNOXVILLE, TENN., Dec. 15.—The Hon. John M. Fleming, a well known editorial writer in Tennessee, with whom Congressman Phelan had the celebrated controversy which ended by him sending the editor a challenge to fight a duel, is lying very ill at his hotel in this city with poor chances of recovery.

Summer Residence Burned.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Dec. 15.—The handsome summer residence of Supreme Court Judge Putnam, a mile from this village, was totally destroyed by fire. Loss $25,000; insurance small.

Peculiar

Many peculiar points make Hood's Sarsaparilla superior to all other medicines. Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Peculiar in its strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's. Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is now more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly.

The Ohio Militia.

Its Strength in a Time of Need,

Summed Up By General Hawkins.

HE SUGGESTS A CALVARY BE ORGANIZED IN COLUMBUS.

Some Interesting Information About the State Militia With Important Suggestions as to What is Needed to Improve the Gallant Boys in Blue.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 15. ADJUTANT GENERAL HAWKINS, you have now been at the head of the "Ohio Army" almost a year, what is your impression of it?"

The above was asked of the General, last evening, with the view of getting some information of general interest.

"Well, sir," replied he, "the more intimate I become with the men and officers composing the National Guard of Ohio, the better opinion I have of them. While on duty with the different regiments and batteries in camp last summer, the opportunities were good for sizing up the efficiency, discipline, armament and general utility of the organizations, and I am free to confess, that taken as a whole, there is no state in the Union that can boast of a better military establishment. While the arm in general use among the infantry is not of the latest pattern, as a rule, it is an effective weapon and well handled. The artillery is in excellent condition also, although there are still too many big and cumbersome field guns in use, which should be replaced with the more effective Gatling. In the main, the equipment of the different batteries will compare favorably with any other in the national guards of the country. As to the third arm of the service, the cavalry, what little we have of it is superb. There is no finer body of men, or better drilled in the United States than the First City Troop of Cleveland. As the law contemplates another troop, I would be specially pleased to see a second one organized, and I have often wondered why either Cincinnati or Columbus did not take enough interest in military affairs to organize one. Certainly neither city lacks the element that would make a movement of this kind a success. Both cities rejoice in the possession of riding clubs, and I see no reason why one or the other should not form the nucleus of a troop that would be a credit to the state service. I know there is a certain prejudice on the part of those who could render an enterprise of this kind a success to entering the service, yet I know such prejudice is unfounded, and would ultimately disappear if the matter were placed in the proper light. Take the case of the Cleveland troop. They refused for years to identify themselves with the active military force of the state, but finally they came in, and are delighted with the new relation, and are the most enthusiastic soldiers we have. Regarding the outfit of the little less than 5,000 men rank and file that compose the National guard of the state, in addition to the arms and accoutrements, nearly all the companies of all these branches of the service have good, comfortable clothing, including a splendid make and style of overcoats, which are in the main new and bright. True, some of the boys are seen on duty with off-colored pantaloons and old style blouses, but as a rule the state has clothed her voluntary defenders becomingly, and the outfits that are too much worn and unserviceable are being called in and replaced by "brand-new" clothing as fast as possible. Every year an appropriation for clothing and blankets is made by the legislature, and while it is not sufficient to give every man a new uniform, even every three years, they manage to keep themselves presentable, and an illy fitted, slovenly or ragged guardsman is the exception and not the rule."

"By the way, General, how many companies are there in the guard?"

"There are 82 companies of infantry, eight batteries of light artillery and one troop of cavalry. This fills the quota allowed by law, with the exception of the cavalry. As I said before, there is room for one more troop, but as that sort of an organization is difficult to raise and somewhat expensive to its members to maintain, the only hope for recruiting a company in this branch of the service is to get one in some big city, but up to date there has been nothing attempted in that line. While on this head, let me say that the military spirit among the young men of Ohio was never more active than at present. Since I have been in office I have received not less than sixty applications from all parts of the state for permission to raise infantry companies, but as the law limits the number, and that number is in existence, I am compelled to decline them."

"Would you favor an amendment of the present law so as to give the service additional companies?"

"On one condition—that the appropriations be made correspondingly liberal in order to maintain the increased force. As it is now, when it is such a difficult matter to convince the legislature that it is its duty to deal justly and fairly with the men on whom the state relies for the suppression of lawlessness, and to keep in subjection that anarchistic sentiment so prevalent in all thickly populated communities. I would prefer that the present force should not be augmented, on the principle that 5,000 men, our present force within a fraction, is much more efficient by being tolerably well clothed, equipped and generally supported than a larger number would be indifferently looked after and fostered. Under present condition, I do not anticipate an increase of the force; in fact I do not desire it. Greater good can be done in another direction, I mean by this that if the legislature would see fit to be a little more generous with the guard on setting aside a larger sum to be used for annual encampments, where the real valuable work is done in familiarizing the men with out-door drill and the customs of the service, the efficiency, morale, esprit du corps and general standing of the guard would be materially advanced, and would have a tendency to render each officer and man better fitted for his duties. For instance, this year we had but 6 days in camp—a ridiculously short time in which to practice the many duties, forms and ceremonies requisite to a true understanding of the "acts of war." One of the six days was consumed in getting to camp, another in getting back home—leaving but four days for actual work. Eight days is short enough, in fact ten days is not too much for this business. But as the sum appropriated was sufficent for six days—what else could we do? However, there is a gratifying change noticeable regarding the estimation in which our citizen soldiers seldom are held by the community at large, and the time is not far distant when Ohio, like New York, Pennsylvania and other states will awake to her duty, and manifest a better appreciation of the National Guard service. It is getting better all the time, and we no longer encounter ill-natured sneers and cheap wit directed towards what was formerly known as the "corn-stock militia." That day has passed never to return, because that sort of militia has seen its day, and has been replaced by a well drilled, well armed and uniformed body of man who delight in, and are a credit to their chosen profession."

A DANCE OF DEATH.

FRIGHTFUL SCENE AT BUCHTEL COLLEGE, AKRON, O.

The Clothing of Female Students Catches Fire From a Pan of Pop Corn, and a Night's Revelry Ends in a Terrible Tragedy.

AKRON, O., Dec. 15.—Two young ladies were burned fatally, it is thought, and six others seriously at Buchtel college Saturday night. The girl inmates of Cary hall, where many of the lady students of Buchtel lodge, were spending a merry evening with some visiting friends in one of the large dormitories and were preparing a mammoth pan of popcorn. The pan had been placed in the center of the floor and eight girls, joining hands, danced about the smoking hot corn in their exhuberant glee. Suddenly the corn blazed up with a blinding flash, the flames leaping to the ceiling. The girls were all dressed in clothing of inflammable material, with paper caps and ornaments. The head dress of one of them caught fire from the burning corn, and in an instant her whole person was enveloped in flames. The tongues of flame leaped from one to another of the screaming and helpless girls until the clothing of all was on fire.

In the frenzy of desperation they rushed from the room and ran shrieking down the stairway. Occupants of the adjoining rooms quickly gained the hallway, and seeing the awful fate which threatened their companions, added their cries to the clamor, until the scene became one of perfect and awful pandemonium.

Nothing could be done for the screaming victims until the fire had burned itself out. It was then found that Miss Lula Strigmyer, of Attica, Ohio, and Miss May Steves, of Clifton Springs, N. Y., were burned so seriously that it is feared they cannot live. The others who were seriously but not fatally burned were: Misses Aurelia Wirick and Eva Dean, both of Storm Lake, Iowa; Miss Dean Haynes, Abeline, Kansas; Miss Buchtel, Kansas City; Miss Mary Van Duzen, New York city; Miss Bertha Coleman, Florida Beach, Pittsburg, Pennsylvania; Miss Birdie Brabacher, Iowa.

CITY IN ASHES.

Kirkville, Mo., Burned to the Ground—Loss $60,000.

OTTUMWA, IA., Dec. 15—The city of Kirkville, Mo., is in ashes. Fire originated in the Masonic temple, destroying it and eight business houses, besides a number of residences. The loss is $60,000. While the people were removing their goods the wall of the Masonic temple fell in, burying a number of persons in the ruins. William Sheeps, John Price and Fred Weeks were rescued in a badly burned condition. All have limbs fractured. Mrs. Bunker was taken out unconscious, and her injuries are believed to be fatal. Volney Hart was taken out dead. Men are still at work in the wreck, as it is believed another man is dead under the debris.

They Are "O. K."

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—Attorney General Miller has returned to the president the papers in the case of the Chicago World's Fair. He found that all the legal requirements of the case had been complied with. The president will now next inquire as to the sufficiency of the financial guarantee.

Robbed by Their Friend.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 15.—A special to the Star from Hiawatha, says: Robert Sweeney, of Reserve, an Alliance man, who sold grain for the farmers to keep the local grain men from robbing them, is short in his accounts over $1,000. Some of the farmers wanted him to give bond for $5,000 at the start, but when he could not do so they let the matter drop.

It Won't Pay.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—The report of Captain Symons on the ship channel between Port Townsend bay, Puget Sound and Oak Bay states that commerce is insufficient to warrant it at present.

The Newark No Good.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—Information was received at the navy department that the Newark on her trial trip again broke her radier gear. Another trial will be made next week.

Suicided at Sea.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—The steamship Trave has just arrived after a rough passage from Bremen. Among her second cabin passengers was a Mrs. Ida Oelering, 27 years old, whose husband lives either in Chicago or Green Bay, Wisconsin. On December 12 the woman was missed. It is supposed she committed suicide by jumping overboard.

Thread Mills Strike Ended.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 15.—The Clark thread mills of this city will resume operations today, when the 3,000 striking employes will go to work. Superintendent Walmsley will be retained, although it is expected his authority will be curtailed.

JESUS' PARTING WORDS.

LESSON XII, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, DEC. 21.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xxiv, 44, 53. Commit Verses 45, 48—Golden Text, John xiv, 3—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

44. And He said unto them, These are the words which I spake unto you while I was yet with you." He is no longer with them as when in His mortal body. He is the same Jesus as He has proved by walking, talking, eating with them, allowing them to handle Him; but while all this is grandly true, yet He has ceased to belong to the earth in its present state (I mean only as to abiding upon it), for the immortal and incorruptible does not yet dwell on earth.

"That all things must be fulfilled, which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the psalms concerning Me." Here is the only key to all Scripture, Jesus Himself. Moses wrote of Him, and to Him gave all the prophets witness, while David also in the psalms spake concerning Him (John v, 46; Acts x, 43; ii, 31).

45. "Then opened He their understanding, that they might understand the Scriptures." As He is the key to all Scripture, so He also by His Spirit is the only Teacher. Who teacheth like Him? The inspiration of the Almighty giveth understanding (Job xxxvi, 22; xxxii, 8). The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned. But he that is spiritual discerneth all things.

46. "And said unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day." Jesus in all His teaching appealed to the Scriptures, saying, "It is written," or "What is written, how readest thou?" And now he repeats what He had said to the two on the way to Emmaus, that, according to the Scriptures, the Christ must die and rise again the third day. The promise was that the Christ, or Messiah, should put away sin; but in order to do that He must become Himself a sacrifice, the sinners' substitute, as was typified in all the sacrifices and so plainly stated in Ps. xxii and Isa. liii.

47. "And that repentance, and remission of sins, should be preached in His name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem." This the apostles faithfully preached. "Him hath God exalted with His right hand to be a Prince and a Saviour, for to give repentance to Israel and forgiveness of sins" (Acts v, 31). Thus preached Peter to Jews only, before he received the vision which sent him to Gentiles also. "Through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins, and by Him all that believe are justified from all things" (Acts xiii, 38, 39). Thus preached Paul to both Jews and Gentiles at Antioch in Pisidia.

48. "And ye are witnesses of these things." Or, as it is written in Acts i, 8: "Ye shall be witnesses unto Me, both in Jerusalem and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth." Unto Israel God had said, "Ye are my witnesses, saith the Lord, that I am God" (Isa. xliii, 10, 12). It is considered an honorable and very desirable position to be a representative of a country or a government at a foreign court. God chose Israel from among all the nations of the earth to be His witness to all nations that He is the one only living and true God, but while a faithful remnant stood for Him, the majority of the people failed to honor God, but sadly dishonored him, and made His name a reproach. The apostles were chosen to go forth in the name of Jesus, and by living His life over again, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, to win to Christ such as might believe on Him through their word. The Acts of the Apostles tell how faithfully they did this.

49. "And behold I send the promise of my Father upon you; but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high." It is not possible for the natural man to please God (Rom. viii, 7, 8); he must be born again or from above (John iii, 3, 5, 7). It is just as impossible for the new man to be a faithful witness unto Christ except by the power of the Holy Spirit; and here is where all the failure in Christian life and service comes in.

50. "And He led them out as far as to Bethany, and He lifted up His hands and blessed them." During forty days He had showed Himself alive at various times to various individuals or companies of His followers on ten or twelve different occasions, and always speaking of the things pertaining to the Kingdom of God (Acts i, 3). But now the last time has come, and He is about to leave them to appear no more on the earth till His feet shall stand again on the same Mount of Olives when He comes in power and glory, bringing His saints with Him (Zech. xiv, 4. 5; I Thess. iii, 13).

51. "And it came to pass while He blessed them, He was parted from them, and carried up into Heaven." Gradually He ascended from their midst, until a cloud received Him out of their sight, and He was seen of them no more. As Stephen was dying he saw Heaven open, and the Son of Man standing on the right hand of God. As Saul of Tarsus journeyed to Damascus Jesus spoke to him from Heaven and appeared to him. And again to John on Patmos Jesus appeared in vision.

52. "And they worshiped Him, and returned to Jerusalem with great joy." When they were so sad at His death, because He had not redeemed Israel as they expected He would have done, how is it that they are now full of great joy when He has gone again and the Kingdom had not yet come? Some tell us that now they understood, as they did not before, that He had come, not to restore the Kingdom to Israel, but to set up a spiritual kingdom in the hearts of men. This is a mere fabrication of man, and it is not only without foundation in Scripture, but is contrary to all Scripture. The true reason of their joy is found in the message of the angels who stood by them after He ascended, and said, "This same Jesus which is taken up from you into Heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen Him go into Heaven" (Acts i, 11).

53. "And they were continually in the temple praising and blessing God. Amen." May such be the end of each chapter of our spiritual life; the end of each day and of each week till we see Him. May our days begin and end with praise to God for giving unto us His dear Son, His unspeakable gift, and the great redemption which is in Him. May we be filled with the Spirit, so as to be His faithful witnesses even unto death, and may we each day be found eagerly longing for and expecting His return. Let our hearts say, "I will bless the Lord at all times, His praise shall be continually in my mouth." "My meditation of Him shall be sweet; I will be glad in the Lord" (Ps. xxxiv, 1; civ, 34).

An Important Matter,

Druggists everywhere report that the sales of the Restoritive Nervine—a nerve heart and medicine— are astonishing exceeding anything they ever had, while it gives universal satisfaction in headache, nervousness, sleeplessness, sexual debility, backache, poor memory, fits, dizziness, etc. L. Clinton Column.

CLINTON, MICH., DEC. 18, 1890.

Albert Kishpaugh and E. R. Smith went to Detroit Monday.

Ed. Semark took a business trip to Toledo Monday.

Mrs. Geo. Freese's grandmother, Mrs. Green, of Paine's Hollow, N. Y., left for home Tuesday, after a visit of several weeks.

Mrs. Geo. Kies is visiting relatives and friends here.

Mrs. Louise Clark and daughter Laura are expected home Saturday from Ann Arbor.

Mrs. E. M. Conklin, of Manchester, spent Thursday and Friday here with friends.

H. M. Heal, our new druggist, will move soon into the brick store next door to the postoffice,

B. O. Randall has a trotter, a three-year old, that he purchased of Uriah Arnold. Look out for a brush on the road, boys.

Lewis Merkee is under $200 bail to appear before Justice Brown Monday, to answer to the charge of stealing a blanket and robe from Chas. Bostedor. Just here we may remark that goods of various kinds have been taken from the church sheds and streets. It is to be hoped the guilty one or ones will be brought to justice soon.

The Episcopal ladies have decided to postpone their entertainment.

We hear that the wooden building on the corner belonging to Wm. C. Rogers is to be torn down and a brick block erected on the site. The proprietor of the livery stable has received orders to move the barn, as it stands on ground leased from Mr. Rogers. This will be a great improvement indeed. Would not a hall in the second story be a paying investment?

This is a week of entertainments. Tuesday there was an oyster supper at the Baptist Church; Wednesday evening the Congregational social at Mrs. John Hause's; to-day the fair and supper of the Episcopal ladies, and to-morrow night the school entertainment at the town hall.

We are sorry to learn of the sickness of Mr. W. V. Fisk, in Newton, Iowa. He has the typhoid fever.

Election and work Saturday night of Lodge No. 175, F. and A. M.

Chapter meeting next Tuesday night for work and election of officers for the ensuing year.

Only a week until Christmas. May Santa Claus have an inexhaustable stock. We hope there are no hard times way up north where he trains his deer to move so fleetly. Are there any among you who have enough and to spare? Remember it is more blessed to give than to receive. The poor we have with us always. See that they are remembered.

MANCHESTER MATTERS.

There was a large party at Edward M. Pierce's, in Sharon township, last Friday evening.

The Alpha Sigma Society held a social in the Presbyterian church parlors, Monday night.

The Patrons of Industry gave a literary and musical entertainment at the Stone schoolhouse on Friday evening last.

The pupils of the Spafard district will give a Mother Goose concert at the schoolhouse, Tuesday evening, Dec. 53rd.

Wells R. Martin is at home for a short visit before entering the business college at Grand Rapids.

The literary program at the last F B. church social was very good, consisting of a declamation by Master Willie Payne; a selection by Wm. E. Pease and an extempore speech by John G. English.

The next F. B. social is to be at Robert Wellwood's, on Friday evening, January 2nd, 1891.

The young people of the M. E. church society, met last Thursday evening and organized an Epworth League. The list of officers is as follows;

President—H. Addis Lesson,
Vice Presidents—Misses Fuller, Kittie Weir, Mary Shafer, Edith Case.
Secretary—Fred Hall.
Treasurer—Dennis Torrey.

CAMBRIDGE CLIPPINGS.

Miss Nellie Dewey, of Raisin, who has been spending a few weeks with her sister, Mrs. Will. Neely, returned home last week.

Shippers of stock here complain about not getting enough cars.

A. F. Dewey cut up stalks, corn and all last week with his new $100,00 feed cutter, until it smashed to pieces.

Wm. Alderdyce has purchased the Charles Cole farm.

A new bell purchased by the Young People's society, now hangs in the Episcopal church.

Charles Cole died at his home, last Tuesday, at 7 a. m., Particulars next week.

A coffee and doughnut social will be given at the residence of Mrs. Wm. Raven, this week Friday evening, the proceeds to go towards purchasing presents for the Episcopal Sunday-school.

EAST RAISIN ECHOES.

The Holloway Literary Society discussed Longfellow and his works, last Tuesday evening.

Matthew Kerr and Miss Cora Watson, of Dover, are visiting at William Kerr's.

Philo Lossing shipped over 150 hogs from Holloway last Tuesday. Quite a number of them were raised near Tecumseh.

School Dist. No. 3 is to have a new furnace and a special school meeting is to be held this evening, to decide what kind to purchase.

Is Consumption Incurable?

Read the following: Mr. C. H. Morris, Newark, Ark., says: "Was down with Abscess of Lungs, and friends and physicians pronounced me an Incurable Consumptive Began taking Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, am now on my third bottle and able to oversee the work on my farm. It is the finest medicine ever made."

Jesse Middlewart, Decatur, Ohio, says: "Had it not been for Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption I would have died of Lung troubles. Was given up by doctors. Am now in best of health." Try it. Sample, bottles free.

C. A. Wright & CO.

It is dangerous to tamper with irritating liquids and exciting snuffs. Use Ely's Cream Balm, which is safe and pleasant, and is easily applied. It cures the worst cases of catarrh, cold in the head and hay fever, giving relief from the first application. Price 50 cents.

The harsh, drastic purgatives, once deemed so indispensable, have given place to milder and more skilfully prepared laxatives; hence the great and growing demand for Ayer's Pills. Physicians everywhere recommend them for costiveness, indigestion, and liver complaints.

The children's health must not be neglected. Colds in the head and snuffles bring on catarrh and lung affections. Ely's Cream Balm cures at once. It is perfectly safe and is easily applied into nostrils. It also cures catarrh, the worst cases yielding to it.

J. M. Loose Red Clover Co., Detroit:

Your Red Clover Extract and Red Clover Pills cured me of dyspepsia after all other remedies I could hear of had failed. I have taken half dozen bottles of the Extract and two boxes of Pills, and feel that I am cured. I know that my stomach and bowels have not been in so good and healthy condition for years. I am glad to be able to write you this, and you are at liberty to use it as you may see fit.

yours, CHAS. H. BENNETT.

Nearly all colds are slight, at first but their tendency is to so lower the system that the sufferer becomes a ready victim to any prevalent disease. The use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, in the beginning of a cold, would guard against this danger.

PENSION BUSINESS

The Doctor was a soldier and is a pensioner, and with his five years' experience as Examining Surgeon for Pensions, believes he can make it PAY YOU to come and see him.

He knows the RATE on every known disability

Knows what Diseases or Disabilities are the results of any other.

Knows (as every EXAMINING SURGEON will tell you) that many men do not draw what the law allows them, because their claims are not presented in proper shape.

Knows how to put your claim in such shape that you will get pay for ALL results of the disease or wound for which you are pensioned.

Knows all the recent decisions made by Commissioner and how to give you the advantage of them in dollars.

Knows that some recent rulings are of vital importance to many pensioners, if their claims are only properly presented.

Knows whether you are entitled to Rerating, and how to get it.

I charge just the legal fees because I earn them ALWAYS BRING YOUR CERTIFICATE WITH YOU.

If you want the benefit of a Pension while you live go and see Dr. Reynolds.

I can get you from $2 to $6 more per month under the new law than other agents.

To any person examined by the board, at Adrian, before Aug. 1, 1890, I have something of importance to tell you.

Come and let us examine you (no charge) and I will tell you all about it. About one-third of all the soldiers examined while I was on the board were rated for disabilities not claimed. You had better come and see me about it.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

BRITTON BUDGET.

George Hawks was on the sick list last week.

We hear Mr. Hoag has bought a span of Mustangs.

Thomas Smith bought a valuable horse the other day, report says for eighty cents.

There was a large attendance at the chicken pie social held at the Christian church last week.

The business on the Wabash is increasing so that twenty-five new breakmen are wanted.

One of our merchants found a queer bedfellow on retiring to rest last Friday night! What was it, Will?

The gentleman who ordered up the cigars at F. Brown & Son's is requested to pay up and thus save further cost.

It is said I. M. Tagget has a large turnip placed near his plate at every meal, he being very fond of that vegetable.

W. A. Thomas, our night operator, has cancelled his contract with the Hotel and will supply them with no more game this winter.

Cunningham & Gibson have bought over ten thousand pounds of poultry. Pretty good for so short a time; business at Britton is not dead yet.

Irve. Osborn lost a Mustang last Sunday week. The funeral services took place on the following Monday afternoon, Thomas Smith officiating.

In a few days the year eighteen hundred and ninety will have passed away never to return, we think it a suitable time to make a few remarks as to the progress and prosperity of our village.

Thomas Smith has had good success here as a Veterinary Surgeon, and persons having a sick horse cannot do better than consult him. Quite a number in the village can testify to his ability.

There is to be a dance here New Years. A masquerade ball, given by Brown and Larabee. Music by Hubbard & Macham's band. Joe Mellon, floor manager. Tickets 50 cents. Supper at the Exelby House, extra. A prize will be awarded to the best dressed lady and to the most comically dressed gent.

Lost—Friday afternoon Nov. 25th, between Britton and Ridgeway, a ladies white linen apron with drawn work border and black ribbon stringa. A suitable reward will be given for its recovery. Finder please communicate with Mrs. C. W. Clark, Ridgeway, or with Agent, Wabash R. R., Britton.

A great deal of merriment was caused the other day in one of our stores, through the merchant having a practical joke played upon him. A gentleman came into the store with a basket which he laid on the counter, and our storekeeper with an eye to business asked if the basket contained butter. On being answered in the affirmative he took the basket, and having weighed it, carried it down cellar with the intention of emptying the butter, but when he opened the cover instead of the butter expected, a small puppy dog jumped out and ran out of the cellar into the store. Our worthy merchant took the joke in good part and at once treated the house to cigars.

One of our farmers keeps the male portion of Briton happy and quiet in an evening, by telling stories of his past history. He makes one of the stores his headquarters and it is there the crowd collect to hear his eloquence. Some years ago he went north expecting to make his fortune, after a few weeks stay found himself pennyless and anxious to return home. Hearing that deaf and dumb people were allowed to ride on the cars free of charge, he resolved to try the experiment. He accordingly played off deaf and dumb with marked success and procured the coveted ride; however he was not so successful with the landlord of the Hotel where he tried to get his breakfast. The breakfast was eaten but our worthy farmer's valise and all his clothes were kept by the tavern keeper for security. Our friend was so busy telling his story, that he had not noticed where he was sitting, and found to his dismay on rising to go home, that he had been resting on a box of axle grease; the stove being warm and the box being opened, it left a grease spot. Modesty prevents us from entering into particulars.

The people of Britton may well be proud of their little burgh. A few years ago there was nothing here but a couple of houses. To-day stands a village with a population of four or five hundred people, with well filled stores, handsome houses and rising prosperity. Britton is a railroad point of no little importance as the number of trains stopping here every day can testify, and as a shipping point for stock it is unsurpassed. Everything is rosy in the future; business is constantly coming in giving new employment to our laboring men. Our Hotel would be a credit to a village of far larger size, and can boast of doing a business that some hotels in the cities would be proud of. The fire that destroyed our stores on the south side, has proved a blessing in giving us a fine brick block. As we look at Britton in her rising prosperity, let our thoughts go back to the one whose energy and capital helped to build that block. The year 1890 will be forgotten by some as other years have been forgotten, but by the people of Britton the year of 1890 should ever be remembered as sacred to the memory of Joseph Exelby, whose kindness of heart, generosity, energy and perseverance has gone far to make our village what she is to-day.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES

The weather for the past week has been more like April than December.

A. Curry is under the doctor's care with la grippe, at present.

John Garlinghouse, of northeast Tecumseh, was in the village Friday of last week.

Those who attended the Loyal Legion entertainment, given at the M. E. Church in Macon, report a very pleasant and enjoyable time.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Jones arrived from their visit with Mrs. Bush and family, of Brooklyn, Friday night.

I. T. Bush, of Brooklyn, is with his grandmother for the holiday week.

C. O. Hiscock, who is attending school at Albion College, is enjoying his vacation at home and with schoolmates.

Several of the young folks attended the Farmers' Union, held at Frank Davidson's, on Friday night, and report an enjoyable time.

The Ypsilanti students are home for the holidays.

Mrs. W. J. Clark, of Britton, called on relatives and friends Saturday.

Agent W. E. Allen and wife, of Moscow, are among the holiday visitors with parents and friends.

It is heartrending, those lost affections of the Lake Ridge damsel, as related in last week's Britton Budget.

Dave Coryell and Frances Wiggins visited Adrian Monday on business.

Sweet fragrance once more perfumes the twilight breeze of our little village. But the handwriting doesn't fully make clear who will be victorious in the drama to possess the prize.

Salome Clark visited Toledo Tuesday, in company with Mrs. W. J. Clark, of Britton.

A VALUABLE WORK.

N. W. Ayer & Son's American Newspaper Annual for 1890.

Contains a carefully prepared list of all newspapers and periodicals in the United States and Canada, arranged by States and Towns in alphabetical order. Under this head is given the name of the paper, the issue, general characteristics, year of establishment, size, subscription price and circulation also the names of Editors and Publishers, and the street address (when known) in all cities having a population of 50,000 and upward.

It contains a list of all Newspapers inserting Advertisements, arranged in States by Counties, with the distinctive features and circulation of each paper.

Also complete lists of all the Religious or Agricultural Periodicals, o Medical, Commercial, Scientific, Educational, or any other of the class publications, as well as of all Publications printed in foreign languages, and a vast amount of general and statistical information of practical value to almost every business man.

It gives a description of every place where a Newspaper is Published, compares location, distance from some prominent point, railroad, water, and stage communication, telegraph, express, and banking facilities, advantage of location, nature of the surrounding district, and its productions, agricultural, or otherwise, leading manufactures, educational, and other public institutions.

Also a carefully-prepared description of every County in the United States and Canada, setting forth its location, area, adjoining navigable streams, the character of its surface, the nature of its soil, whether an agricultural, manufacturing, or mining county, and if agricultural its leading crops, its County-seat and population. A much more elaborate descriptive heading, is appended to each State, Territory, and Canadian Province.

These headings are subject to constant and careful revision. The growth and development of the various sections is noted and embodied in them from year to year, thus forming a valuable compendium of the physica features and the agricultural and man ufacturing resources of the country.

It gives the population of every State, Territory, County and County-seat, of all the large Cities and Towns, and of almost every place in which a Newspaper is published, a very large proportion of the population is from the United States Census of 1890.

It also gives the number of votes polled in each State, Territory and County by the Republican, Democratic, Greenback and Prohibition parties at the Presidential Election of 1888.

It enumerates the various Press and Editorial Associations throughout the United States and Canada together with lists of their Officers.

Among its exhaustive and interesting tables are those showing the Cities, Towns, and Villages of the United States having 5000 population and over arranged in alphabetical order; with the population according to the Census of 1890, where known, with parallel columns giving the population in 1880, how many Counties there are in each State; in how many of those Newspapers are published; in how many Towns of each State papers exist, and how many of these towns are County-seats, and how many Newspapers there are altogether in the country at large, or in any of its great sections, or in any State, Territory, or Canadian Province, how many there are of each issue, with a comparative statement of the increase in 1890 over 1889.

"LIONEL." Thin fingers fluttered uneasily about a frayed button on an equally frayed and worn overcoat, and a woman's anxious eyes looked deprecatingly into the husband's face.

"What is it, Mary?" his tone was gentle, with an undercurrent of sadness and despondency in it. "Christmas comes to-morrow, Lionel." She did not look in his face now, but closely scrutinized the frayed button as if it were the absorbing object of her thoughts.

"I know it, Mary."

"Could—could—you let me have a little money, Lionel? For the children, you know, dear—we have never let the day go past without something for them."

"And we must not now," he said; "they will never be young but once, poor things." He took out a worn wallet from his pocket.

"I have looked over all the old things in search of bits to make over into garments or fancy things for them," she continued apologetically, "but every thing is worn so close, Lionel. I try to be frugal and saving." Her eyes were filled with tears now.

"And you are, Mary. Where would we have been had it not been for your careful management? Will two dollars be enough? It is all I have this morning. Heaven knows I wish I could make it twenty or a hundred—there is no limit to the deserts of the good wife you've been to me, Mary. Don't cry, dear, it takes all my courage and strength to see you unhappy."

The faded face was pressed against the frayed button now in a vain attempt to hide the hot tears which would come, and his worn glove, much too thin for the season, smoothed the thin gray hair tenderly.

"Then I must not cry," she answered, looking up with a forced smile. "Yes, it will be enough—more than I had expected, but I feel so wicked to ask you for money when I know you have so little to spare me."

Yes, debt was the skeleton which danced, not only in the closet but all over the house, in this humble home, and Mary went back to her work, her face drawn up thoughtfully as she calculated just how many pennies could be spared for this or that, and balanced the differences between the strictly useful and the more childlike but less material gifts. Two dollars after all was such a little drop in the bucket of necessities, to say nothing of the ornamental or the beautiful. It was not a debt of carelessness or of extravagance, she could scarcely have borne the self-reproach and the shame of it if it had been, but was the natural result of long years of sickness and reverse. Lionel Webb in his younger days had just escaped with his life from an attack of spinal meningitis which had resulted in a partial disability for life. He was very ambitious, and though obliged to accept work which had as little of manual labor in it as possible, still he did it often when stronger men would have been in bed with a physician in attendance, did it in such bodily torture that he hardly realized what he was doing.

Mary had her share of sickness, too; the anxiety and care attendant on Lionel's disability was enough to break a woman of iron, which she was not, and in addition to it all, three darling children had sickened and died.

Lionel had secured a new situation of late—he was growing better with years and could now take up a different class of work, and his present employer was a man of large wealth, employing many clerks in his great business.

All this Lionel worked in a maze of perplexity and regret. Mary's face, with the tears on it, was ever before him. To-night was Christmas eve, and all day long a procession of richly dressed mothers and fathers thronged the store buying, buying, from full purses, while Mary, his true, faithful wife, whose seventeen years of married life had been one long struggle with toil and care, had only a pitiful two dollars with which to do her Christmas shopping, and it grieved him to the very heart's core.

The rush was over now, and in a half hour more the great establishment would be closed, when an errand boy touched his arm. "Mr. Dale would like to see you in the private office, sir," he said respectfully.

Lionel's heart sank in his bosom like lead. Could it be that in addition to his other misfortunes he was going to lose his situation? This engagement had been provisionary, and his employer had made no sign as to whether his service was acceptable. He crawled rather than walked to the office in his nervous dread, for the past had been so persistently unkind to him that he was coming to dread the future.

"Sit down. Sit down, sir," said Mr. Dale, cheerfully.

Lionel took a seat near the prosperous business man, who noticed, as he did so, the look of care and dejection on his employe's thin face.

"It has been my custom, sir, for some years to make my employes a little present on Christmas eve," he proceeded genially, as he took a bill from his desk drawer and laid it in Lionel's hand. "I presume you can find a use for it; or if you can not, no doubt the good wife can, eh?"

Lionel looked at the bill in dumb astonishment; if an angel had come in and clapped him on the shoulder he would not have been more surprised, for it was a fifty-dollar bill.

"But, sir," he stammered, "I have been with you so short a time, I have not merited such consideration."

"That's all right, sir. You'll have ample opportunity to make it up in your future years of service, for I do not intend to part with so faithful an assistant."

There was more in the manner than in the kind deed itself, and Lionel's heart bounded up with gratitude. He thought of Mary and of the many, many uses the money could be put to, warm blankets, the winter cloak Mary had needed for years, and—but his face fell. There was a dunning letter in his pocket at that moment which he had concealed from Mary—from the holder of a note against him for fifty dollars and peremptorily demanding payment.

No, no, it would be wrong to appropriate one dollar of the gift for personal [illegible] faces, and Lionel's thin, anxious face had appealed to his sympathies strongly since he had entered the office, and he noted the change of expression.

"What is it, Webb?" he said, kindly. "You look depressed and troubled."

As Lionel heard the kind voice and looked into the kind face an impulse came to him to tell this man his troubles. It was so hard to bear it alone and to wear a smiling face over a heart so filled with anxious care, and hardly knowing what he said, he poured out his story of the past, of Mary and of her pitiful shopping to-day. "It hurts me so, Mr. Dale," he said, in conclusion, "that I can not use even a dollar of your generous gift for her."

"How much now would cover this entire indebtedness?" asked Mr. Dale. He was drumming thoughfully on his desk and looking keenly at Lionel, not in blame or in doubt of the truth of his story, but in making an effort to put himself in another's place.

"Fifteen hundred dollars would pay every dollar."

Mr. Dale reflected—in the light of his millions the sum seemed a very trifle; yet here was a man whose strength and happiness were being wasted for the lack of it. "What would you say, then, if I should loan you this money and let you work it out gradually as you can afford it?"

"Say, sir! I should work on wings, it would make my heart so light."

"Then put on your wings," returned Mr. Dale, smiling, "for we'll have the matter arranged at an early date. And now go home and spend this money for Mary and the children with a clear conscience."

Mary was filling the stockings when Lionel came home and, poor soul, she had evidently been shedding tears over the task.

A pretty ruche and ribbon for Jennie, and a pair of stockings and winter gloves for Amy, the merest necessities amid the ocean of lovely, tempting things she had seen that day; a pair of warm gloves for Lionel which he would not buy for himself lay in her bureau drawer, and there had been just enough left to buy a small chicken for the Christmas dinner, for a turkey was not to be thought of this year.

She had not heard him when he opened the outer door softly, and he stood watching her through the glass door which led from the hallway to the little parlor.

She had finished now, and with the stockings on her lap, leaned her head dejectedly upon her hand. It was so hard to give pennies where her warm heart would so gladly lavish pounds.

"Oh, Lionel, how you startled me," as he opened the door and went in. "Why—what has happened, dear?" He was loaded down with packages, and every pocket was bulging out in addition, and she knew that something unusual had occurred.

"The Lord hasn't forgotten us yet, Mary," he said, taking her worn face in his hands and kissing it tenderly. She listened to his recital of the conversation with Mr. Dale with eyes brimming over with happy tears, and when he had finished and she realized that the load of harrassing debt was to be lifted, her face took on a reverent shade of joyful thanksgiving, and taking Lionel's hand in hers, she said, gently; "Let us pray."

JOHNNY ROACH.

A Christmas Night in Turkey Creek Canyon.

RECRUITED him in '61. Twenty years of age, six feet one inch long, and the thinnest, loosest-jointed, big-boned specimen of humanity I ever did see.

In our zouave uniform he was truly a "holy show;" the gaudy dress had attracted him and, being hard and sound as a pine-knot, he mustered in.

Color-Sergeant John Roach twice shook "good-bye" with me in '65. He had hurried home to Maine, after muster-out, was hardly missed until he was back again, more quiet than ever—seemingly saddened.

He 'llowed he'd go West; and he went. Nearly thirty years later I learned more of Johnny Roach's life and fortunes.

I'll try to tell it story-wise.

It was Christmas eve, at Saw-Mill Gulch. Johnny lived near there. He had gone West to be a sheep-raiser, so he pre-empted a claim in Turkey creek canyon, built a cabin, and settled himself to "hold down" three hundred and twenty acres.

Here he lived with Tab as his only companion. Tab was a cat. He had taken her in one stormy night, a poor, starved creature; now she was fat and lazy.

It was Christmas eve, and Johnny was lonesome. Tab was asleep, so she was no company to speak of.

"Tab," said John, at last, "it takes a thunderin' lot of sleep to do you—but I don't know but as you're right."

Just then, above the roaring of the storm, arose a fearful cry, as of one calling for help. Once, twice, it rang out with awful clearness and then died away, as if in an agony of despair.

The cat waked, jumped toward her master and mewed as she looked up into his face.

John took down the old musket and fingered the lock, listening intently all the while.

Again that shrill, imperative yet imploring cry. It was a human voice.

The man swore as he thought how he had been deceived into thinking that call for help the shriek of a wild beast.

He drew on his fur cap and great coat, lighted his lantern and strode forth into the dreadful night. "You stay here, Tab, and keep house," he said, soothingly, to the cat, as he shut the door of his cabin.

Down the mountain he sprang, sure-footed as a chamois. The storm increased in intensity every moment, and it was very cold. He kept on doggedly—like himself—until he came to a narrow point in the canyon, where the wagon track was crowded into the creek and there was only room for a wagon to pass by closest driving.

He looked upon a strange scene.

A "buck-board" was there, turned over, the horse attached to it lay, harness-tangled, in the water, and a woman sat bolt upright on a bowlder near by, afraid to move for fear of plunging into the creek; and doing the only thing she could—using her lungs.

John put down his lantern, waded to the rock, lifted the woman in his strong arms and carried her back across the torrent to the narrow path.

"I reckon I can walk now," she then said, sharply.

"Don't be too sure about that," John answered, but he put her down, for she was tall and heavy, and besides it was very embarrassing to have a woman so near him.

"Don't fear me," she said. "If I slip I'll catch hold your coat. Go on!"

So John rescued the horse and, leading the animal, with the woman close behind him, went on until the light of his window streamed out upon them.

"La, me! that looks comfortable," she said.

He flung the door open and she entered and stood before the fire. She was a wholesome healthy, tall woman, with a round, rosy face, and sparkling, shrewd, yet kindly black eyes, and her dress, when outer wrappings were removed, was neat almost to primness.

John was speechless with admiration. He stood like a school-boy, blushing and awkward.

The woman turned and smiled.

"If I was you," she said, "I'd sit down."

Soon, after the horse was provided for, they had tea; it put more life into the woman, and she told John that she had come to Turkey creek canyon to take up a claim. She had not been afraid to travel alone, but the storm had caught her, and, thanks to him, she was safe. She said she was a New Englander, but not from Maine. She was rather reticent about herself.

When the clock struck twelve both started and blushed. It was "sparking time" in New England, and Christmas morning at that.

At first both looked grave. Then they laughed. "It's no use talking of bed-time," said she, "so we may as well prepare to sit here all night and talk.

DOWN THE MOUNTAIN HE SPRANG.

I'm sorry to rob you of your rest, but you look strong, and I guess it won't hurt you."

Christmas morning broke. The storm had passed. The sun laughed in the heavens and the sky was blue as if it were June. They stood on the door-step and viewed the splendid panorama.

Then they went into the house. John sat on the bed and whittled; the woman had insisted on getting breakfast. The exercise flushed her cheeks, and John stole furtive and admiring glances at her. She was vaguely like somebody he had seen before.

They sat down, one on each side of the table. She heaped his plate, and then she leaned her head on her hand, and her face paled and her voice trembled.

"John Roach," she said (he had not told her his name), "What are you doing here? Why are you not at home with your people?"

The man started as if shot. His face turned white, through all the brown upon it.

"Who are you?" he said hoarsely; "that you know me? Who are you, I say?"

The woman leaned forward, shading her eyes with her hand.

"John, don't you know me?"

"Dotty Waters!" he said. "Oh! my God!"

Then he crossed quickly to her and lifted her up in his arms, trembling the while as if palsy-stricken.

"Why, Dorothy! Dotty!" he said, "they told me you had died of a fever in the marshes—that was long ago—more than twenty years. Have you come back to life again, Dotty, like them folks in the Bible, and was it true that you said you'd never marry me?"

His eyes were misty; she freed herself from his embrace, drew her chair

IT WAS SPARKING TIME.

near his and took both his hands in hers. Her eyes were wet, too.

"No, John," she said, softly, "I did not die of fever, and I never loved any one but you, and I."

Then Dorothy Waters broke down, and was comforted like a child, and these two old lovers sobbed out their hearts' joy in that lonely cabin on Christmas morning.

It is needless to relate how John and Dotty had been lovers from childhood; how evil tongues had lied to him on his return from war, and his simple heart believed them. Why tell of the long anguish these two had suffered in that score of years. The world knows these stories too well.

It needed no explanation to make John understand that Dorothy had come on purpose to seek him. The story of the night before vanished into thin air, and was forgotten.

He took her as the best Christmas gift God ever gave to man, and when he raised her face and kissed her, he registered a vow in his heart which he will keep until the breath leaves him. It was his marriage vow. DUKE BAILIE.

McKINLEY PRICES STILL.

THE "DEMOCRATIC CONSPIRACY" NOT YET DECLARED OFF.

Prices Rising and Still Higher in Sight. Some Points About Wool and Carpets. Domestic Manufacturers Joining the "Conspiracy."

When the Democratic papers printed during the recent campaign the facts about the rise in prices of many articles, the protectionist papers denounced such publication of the news as a "Democratic conspiracy," and the national Republican committee spoke of "all this talk about rising prices" as a "Democratic falsehood."

But the rise in prices has gone on just the same since the election as during the campaign, and it is certain that, in some lines at least, high water mark has not yet been touched. The trade papers supply abundant evidence of this. The New York Commercial Bulletin printed on Tuesday, Nov. 25, the following in its review of the foreign dry goods trade in New York: "The week opens with prices firm and unchanged all along the line. New tariff standards have not been reached as yet, but importers believe that full prices will be firmly established so soon as the cold weather develops any important necessity for additional supplies. At present buyers have few imperative necessities, and as a matter of course are stoutly resisting the gradual advance of prices."

The Dry Goods Chronicle makes the same report. It says: "As to prices, there is a steady tendency toward full new tariff standards, and while all lines have not as yet reached the top figure the evening up process is gradually but surely going on, and will ere long reach a satisfactory basis to importers at least, if not to buyers."

Another authority to the same effect is The Dry Goods Economist, which says: "Spring prices will be much nearer to the new tariff standard than fall figures have been. Spring orders have been of satisfactory volume and fancies will be marketed at full new rates."

In regard to linen handkerchiefs The Economist says: "No article of such general use has been so greatly affected by the McKinley tariff as have linen pocket handkerchiefs of every description."

Another article which has been touched by "McKinley prices" is horse blankets. The Commercial Bulletin explains why: "Horse blankets are stiffening somewhat in price. East India wool, which enters largely into the manufacture of these goods, has advanced considerably as a combined result of enhanced rates of foreign exchange on silver and the new tariff."

The advance in the wool duties is having the effect of raising prices in many lines of goods. The Dry Goods Chronicle says:

"With the upward tendency of wool under limited supplies and restrictive tariff clauses, mill owners will find it no easy task to supply their consumptive wants unless at enhanced values, which as a matter of course must enter in some way into the cost of the manufactured article."

One of the lines of goods most affected by the McKinley wool duties is carpets. In order to meet the increased cost of carpet wool the manufacturers of carpets have been compelled to increase the price of carpets of all kinds. About the time the McKinley law was passed there was an advance of carpet prices by some dealers; but as the old stocks of wool were not exhausted some manufacturers could continue to supply carpets at the old prices.

A letter from one such establishment was printed in the protectionist journals, during the campaign to prove that there had been no advance in prices.

This was from S. Sanford & Sons, carpet manufacturers of Amsterdam, N. Y. One member of this firm, Hon. John Sanford, being at that time a Republican candidate for congress, was anxious to allay the excitement about McKinley prices, and thus "save his skin" on election day. Accordingly the firm sent out the following letter about the middle of October:

"DEAR SIRS—It is being industriously circulated that prices of carpets have gone up 25 per cent. since the passage of the McKinley bill. We desire to say that this statement is untrue. The consumer can purchase today the various kinds of carpetings manufactured by us at the prices prevailing previous to the passage of the McKinley bill."

Hon. John Sanford has been re-elected to congress, and now the firm of S. Sanford & Sons has joined the "Democratic conspiracy to raise prices." The following table will show what has been done. The first column of figures gives the price of carpets as printed in The Carpet and Upholstery Trade Review of Oct. 1. The second column gives the figures of S. Sanford & Sons as printed in The Dry Goods Chronicle of Nov. 22. The Chronicle prints the new lists as made up by the various manufacturers, among which it introduces Sanford's prices with these words: "S. Sanford & Sons have made the following quotations for their goods." Here is the table referred to:

	Before Election.	After Election.
Double extra velvets, Wilton finish	$1.30	$1.25
Velvets	80	85
Double extra ten wire tapestry Brussels	70	75
Extra tapestry Brussels	62½	65
"Comet" tapestry Brussels	55	57½
Red Star tapestry Brussels	52½	55

It is stated by a competent authority, The Boston Commercial Bulletin, that this firm makes tapestry carpets which contain comparatively little carpet wool, the cost of which has been directly and sharply raised by the McKinley bill. Brussels carpets require over twice as much wool as tapestry Brussels, and 40 per cent. more than even tapestry velvet. The tapestry makers now have the additional advantage of free jute, which is not used in Brussels carpets. All the same the congressman's firm comes in for a part of the tariff spoils. Perhaps he thinks he deserves it, as, by his own official statement, he spent $9,679 to secure his re-election to congress.

On this subject of the increase in carpet prices J. W. Dimmick, a carpet manufacturer of New York city, says that the increase in duty on carpet wools has brought about a corresponding rise in all kinds of carpets, and that the new price lists now being made out would show an increase averaging 10 per cent. on the cheapest ingrain carpets.

He said further: "Carpets have come to be a necessity, and when 8 per cent. is added to the cost of ingrains, which are sold at a low price, it simply means that the poor people, who use this grade of carpet, are the sufferers. The higher and better kinds of carpet are increased about the same in price, but when it comes to royal Wilton and Axminster the difference will not be felt so much. It is in the cheaper carpets which are used by poor people, and the Brussels carpets which are purchased by people in moderate circumstances, that the increased cost will be most felt. This state of things will exist for a time, but the Democratic party will be in power soon, and then the unnecessary and bad tariff will be wiped out. In passing the McKinley bill the Republican party killed itself beyond the possibility of resuscitation. I know of dozens of men in the carpet trade who declare that they will never vote the ticket again."

WATCHMEN ON THE WALL.

The Great Vigilance of Our Customs Officials on the Canadian Frontier.

A curious example of how firmly the tariff wall is built has recently been made public in a treasury decision from Washington. Some citizens of Trout River, N. Y., on the Canadian border, wanted to take their grain across to a Canadian mill, which was near them, and have it ground. They submitted the case to the customs authorities to know whether they would be allowed to bring back their flour without paying duty on it. The case was sent to the treasury department at Washington, and the decision rendered was that the returning flour must pay duty.

Canadian flour is, of course, pauper flour, and it would be unreasonable to expect American farmers to compete with it; and that American grown wheat produces pauper flour when ground in a Canadian mill is a truth that none but wicked "free traders" can dispute.

Our customs officers on the Canadian border deserve the highest praise for their untiring watchfulness in protecting the interests of the country from Canadian encroachments. It is doubtful whether the German and French guards who patrol the boundary line between France and Germany, and occasionally put a bullet through the incautious fellow who steps over the line, are more lynx eyed than these customs officers of ours who protect us from the hostile flood of cheap Canadian wheat, barley and eggs. These officers ought to be put on exhibition at the Chicago World's fair as our most vigilant defenders from cheap foreign goods.

Some of their achievements are worthy of record. A farmer who owned a farm partly in New York state and partly in Canada, but living just across on the Canada side, took it into his head to change the position of his house a little. Without design he got the house just on the line. The argus eyed customs officers soon discovered what a trespass the poor Canadian was committing against American liberty, and they straightway informed Uncle Sam and asked what was to be done. The decision came back promptly that every foot of lumber in the house must pay duty.

In northern Vermont a stream on which a Yankee has a sawmill flows across into Canada. A freshet came and washed away a quantity of the Yankee's lumber into Canada, where it was lodged. After the freshet the enterprising sawmill man went after his runaway lumber; but, alas, the custom house men were upon him, and he had to pay duty on the whole lot, just as if it had been Canadian pauper lumber.

Another Vermont man lived dangerously near the line which divides us from the people with whom we cannot compete. This man is a farmer and his wife keeps turkeys. Of course these turkeys did not know anything about a boundary line, beyond which it was unlawful to lay their eggs, and they did not even know that they were protected against the pauper turkeys of Canada. It is therefore not at all singular that one old turkey built her nest beyond the forbidden line. Her sin did not find her out until she had deposited a nestful of eggs, and was spending days and nights upon them with fond maternal hopes warming her breast. At last the farmer found his cosmopolitan turkey hen and determined to bring her back to the land of the free, so that her brood of little turkeys might see the light on sacred American soil. When he was carrying out this patriotic purpose the ubiquitous custom house officers stood suddenly in his path like so many angels with flaming swords, and the poor fellow was arrested for smuggling.

Truly the customs officers who protect us from Canada deserve a medal for vigilance. Let it bear the cold, stolid features of McKinley, a Chinese pig tail hanging gracefully from his head.

McKinley Prices for Parsons.

A Philadelphia tailor who makes a specialty of clothing for ministers warns them that prices are going to be higher. The circular sent out by him says: "We, who are considered good judges, estimate that the new tariff will raise the price of clothing at least 20 per cent. We advise all our clerical friends to increase their incomes to meet the emergency of the future or lay in now."

Corduroy trousers are very generally worn by working people in winter. The corduroy trousers which sold last winter for $2 a pair are now sold at $2.60, the cause of the increase being that while the old duty was equal to 35 per cent. the McKinley duty is about 75 per cent. There are said to be but three manufacturers of these goods in the United States.

EVERYTHING ELSE FAILED.

I am 28 years old, and from the time I was seven years of age until 1885, I suffered with a severe case of Scorfula. During this time I took every known remedy, but to no purpose. my father took me to North Carolina, where I was put under teh treatment of an eminent physician. The medicines given me had only a temporary effect, so shortly after my return the Scrofula broke out in a more malignant form, and I was worse off than ever before. In 1885 I discontinued taking all medicines and commenced taking Swift's Specific (S.S.S.) I took a numberof bottles and it cured me. I have been free from Scrofula from that time until now. T. A. SIZEMORE' Pidemont, S. C.

RESTORED HER HEALTH.

For 25 years I suffered from Boils, Erysipelas and other blood affections; taking during that time great quantities of different medicines without deriving any perceptible relief. Friends induced me to try Swift's Specific (S.S.S.) It improved me from the start, and after taking several bottles restored my health as far as I could hope for my age, which is now 75 years. A DYSPEPTIC'S ARGUMENT

Is a growl, and that growl marks the limit of argument with him. The best way to get him to try a medicine would be to advise against it—but notice how different his tone after using Burdock Blood Bitters.

"I have suffered with Dyspepsia for the last two years Not long ago I commenced taking B.B.B. I am now on the second bottle and feel like a new man. G. KNOX, 12 Sherwood Ave., Binghamton, N. Y."

REPEATED TRIPS WITH UNIFORM SUCCESS prove the fact that Burdock Blood Bitters will cure

The reason is plain, it tones the stomach to natural action and keeps the sluice ways of the system free from clogging impurities.

"I have been troubled with, dyspepsia and heart disease for nine years and found no relief until I tried Burdock Blood Bitters. Now I am well after taking two bottles. MRS. ETTIE FRAZIER, Bowne, Mich."

THE FIGURE "9."

The figure 9 in our dates will make a long stay No man or woman now living will ever date a document without using the figure 9. It stands in the third place in 1890, where it will remain ten years and then move up to second place in 1900 where it will rest for one hundred years.

There is another "9" which has also come to stay. It is unlike the figure 9 in our dates in the respect that it has already moved up to first place, where it will permanently remain. It is called the "No 9" High Arm Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine

The "No. 9" was endorsed for first place by the experts of Europe at the Paris Exposition of 1889, where, after a severe contest with the leading machines of the world, it was awarded the only Grand Prize given to family sewing machines, all others on exhibit having received lower awards of gold modals, etc. The French Government also recognized its superiority by the decoration of Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, President of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor.

The "No. 9" is not an old machine improved upon, but is an entirely new machine, and the Grand Prize at Paris was awarded it as the grandest advance in sewing machine mechanism of the age. Those who buy it can rest assured, therefore, of having the very latest and best.

"Seeing is Believing."

And the best lamp ever made, like Aladdin's of old, a "wonderful lamp!" A lamp absolutely non-explosive and unbreakable, which gives a clear, soft, brilliant white light of 85 candle power! Purer and brighter than gas light, softer than electric light, more cheerful than either! That lamp is

"The Rochester."

And with it there is no smoke, no smell, no broken chimneys, no flickering, no sweating, no climbing up of the flame, no "tantrums" nor annoyance of any kind, and it never needs trimming. Its founts (oil reservoirs) being tough rolled seamless brass, with central draft, it is absolutely unbreakable, and as safe as a tallow candle.

Only five years old, and over two million of these lamps in use. It must be a GOOD lamp to make such a telling success. Indeed it is, for lamps may come and lamps may go, but the "Rochester" shines on forever! We make over 2,000 artistic varieties,—Hanging and Table Lamps, Banquet, Study, Vase and Piano Lamps,—every kind, in Bronze, Porcelain, Brass, Nickel and Black Wrought Iron.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years,

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

THE FARMERS' SOCIAL CLUB.

Celebrate Their Tenth Anniversary with a Fine Meeting at the Home of George Griswold.

The Farmers' Social Club, which is the Pioneer Club of this section, was organized ten years ago this month at the home of George Griswold. Last Thursday evening the Club held its tenth anniversary meeting at the same house, and it proved to be a most enjoyable occasion.

Mr. Griswold's spacious rooms were filled to their utmost capacity and a fine program was presented. The evening was a beautiful one, bright moonlight, and the roads were in excellent condition; hence not only the members of the Club attended but many visitors also from other clubs. Mr. and Mrs. Griswold entertained the company in their usual hospitable manner, making it pleasant for all.

The meeting was called to order promptly at eight o'clock by the President, A. P. Coddington, the minutes of the last previous session were read and approved and some routine business was transacted.

A motion prevailed that a committee be appointed to meet with similar committees of other clubs to arrange for a Farmers' Institute. I. H. Schreder, O. B. Finch and R. B. Gillespie were named as such committee.

The program of the evening was then announced by the President, as follows:

Solo and chorus, entitled, "Gently Down the Stream of Time," by Mrs. Will Waldron and Hettie Waldron.

Then came an historical sketch of the Club, by Mrs. F. C. Rector, which appears in full below.

O. B. Finch gave a select reading entitled "Perseverance."

The School children then rendered a song in a very pleasing manner.

Edna Hendershot gave a recitation entitled "The Water Mill."

A short talk by Mr. Griswold followed.

"In Memorian," by Mrs. John Fisher, gave a brief sketch of the departed members, which brought tears to many eyes.

S. C. Stacy followed in a brief address, after which several of the old members and the officers of other clubs present made a few remarks. These brought up personal reminiscences which were decidedly interesting.

Thus closed a very entertaining program and the election of officers followed. There was some good-natured strife over the election and some of the favored ones declined, but the list finally chosen was as follows:

President—R. B. Gillespie.
Vice Pres.—Will Fisher.
Sec. and Treas.—Miss Eva Rector.

A motion prevailed that the next session be a sample meeting, which will be held in four weeks, at F. C. Rector's. Further particulars and program will appear in due season.

It was about eleven o'clock when the company broke up, and all voted it one of the red-letter sessions, excelled by none during the ten years' history of the Club. The History and In Memorian are given below, as they are of historical value and are worthy of preservation.

THE HISTORY.

Ten years ago a very pleasant party of friends and neighbors attended a reception given by Mr. and Mrs. Everhart, in honor of their son's marriage. During the evening Mrs. Griswold spoke to a few ladies in regard to the practicability of starting a Farmers' club, including both men and women as members.

Our husbands and brothers had, in the preceding two or three years, tried to maintain a farmers' club composed of men; but they had found it down-hill business from the first and they had reached the bottom—not the top—as all schemes will when women are not included as helpers and counselors.

The suggestion of Mrs. Griswold was favorably received and the result was an invitation from Mr. and Mrs. Griswold to their neighbors to meet at their home to discuss the matter more fully. This preliminary meeting was not large in numbers, but those present were in earnest and the subject was fully discussed and it was decided to form a club and officers were at once elected. F. C. Rector was the first president, Mrs. Geo. Griswold, vice president; Mrs. F. C. Rector, secretary and treasurer. That the different officers have been faithful and efficient is proved by the fact that they have been re-elected and few changes have been made from year to year. The election of officers has been annual and during the ten years that the club has been organized there have been only three presidents: F. C. Rector, I. H. Schreder and A. P. Coddington. The annual fee for members above sixteen years of age is ten cents. This small fee is to meet necessary expenses and pay our secretary a reasonable amount for services rendered.

In looking over the list of members that have joined the club during the ten years, I found a hundred different names.

There have been ten marriages and twenty-five births.

I wish I could only record these evidences of happiness and prosperity, but alas! sorrow is mingled with all earthly joy. We have been called upon to record the loss by death of seven of our members. These have included the aged, silver-haired grandparents, the middle-aged in the prime of life, and one just entering bright womanhood.

Several of our members have changed their residence and have gone elsewhere to discharge life's duties; but I am assured they will have an interest in the club, as they almost invariably take the Tecumseh HERALD, and write that they always look for the report of the Social Club.

The members have been very cheerful and prompt in responding to any work required of them in preparing programs. No one has shirked, from the oldest to the wee little ones. Men and women, who had not written papers or essays since their school-days, have brushed away the cobwebs caused by work, business, anxiety and care, and have given us intelligent, sound, bright and beautiful thoughts.

The name, "The Farmers' Social Club," given to the organization at the beginning, has proved a true one. The meetings have been held at the homes of the different members, and the social, friendly spirit is always apparent. It has brought neighbors closer together, until all take a greater interest in the welfare of the others. That this spirit has exerted such an influence I am confident of, from remarks I have heard, such as these:

"What a different man Mr.—— is since we have had the farmers' club. He used to be so distant, but now I really like him." "I never saw such a change as has been in Mrs.——. I did not know she could be so friendly."

If no other good had resulted, we might feel that our club was well worth the experiment; but this is not all. Our discussions have embraced questions of general interest, as well as those pertaining to the farm, and they have caused observation and thought, and the necessity of expressing our thoughts intelligently to others has taught us important language lessons, the benefit of which we can hardly estimate.

When we first held our meeting many would not speak at all, voluntarily, and only briefly when called upon, but now nearly all find they have ideas upon the subjects presented, and they can express them in a pleasing manner. The discussions are often animated and earnest, but if, as there often is, a difference of opinion, each one has a due regard for the rights of others, and all is harmonious.

That our influence has extended beyond the limits of our own neighborhood, we feel confident, for we have had members from several surrounding neighborhoods, and they, seeing the good we were receiving, determined to organize clubs in their own vicinities. The result has been satisfactory, and at present there are a number of adjoining organizations that we watch with interest, as they resemble children leaving the old home to create new ones for themselves, and we are interested in their prosperity and usefulness.

I would wish to speak of the great kindness and courtesy shown us by Mr. Scoye Stacy. His columns have always been open to our Club and feel that our prosperity has been advanced by the kindly interest he has always manifested; and I feel confident that I express the feeling of the Club when I say "we thank him."

May the Club continue to prosper and prove a pleasure and blessing in the future, as in the past.

OBITUARY RECORD.

A feeling of joy and sadness permeates this meeting to-night; joy and thankfulness when we remember the many blessings that have been our portion, sadness when we remember the loved and lost.

Since the formation of our Club, but but ten years ago, seven of our constituent members have been called away by death.

The first to go was Rufus R. Hall, born in Raisin township Sept. 8th, 1839, who received a portion of his education in Tecumseh. At the age of eighteen he began teaching in Macon. He settled on a farm in Tecumseh township in 1868, and died Sept. 3rd, 1884, at the age of forty-five.

The next summoned to the heavenly home was John F. Schreder, who died Nov. 28th, 1885, at the advanced age of ninety-four years and seven months.

John Rector, born in April, 1810, died in 1888, aged 78, was an interested and honorary member of our Club, from the time of its organization until his death. Though advanced in years, he was not old. His genial disposition made him a favorite with old and young, his presence was everywhere welcomed. No matter if the nights were dark, or the weather inclement, his place was seldom vacant until the infirmities of age kept him at home; even then we were urged to meet with him as often as possible.

The flowers had bloomed and faded but once on Grandpa Rector's grave, when the Club was called to part with his favorite grand-daughter, Minnie E. Rector, aged eighteen years. She had, but a few months previous, finished a successful course of study in the Tecumseh High School, graduating with honor. At the beginning of the year she had entered the State Normal, with the intention of preparing herself for a teacher, but ere many weeks had passed she was obliged to relinquish all these bright hopes of usefulness. That dread disease, typhoid fever, laid his relentless hand upon her. For six long weeks we received daily bulletins, sometimes favorable and sometimes not. All was done that skill and loving hands could do. It was all in vain. On the evening of Dec 7th Minnie's sunny spirit went to dwell with the angels. She was borne to the grave by the loving hands of her friends and class mates on the following Sabbath afternoon.

Mrs. Alanson Bangs, whose death occurred a little more than a year ago, was for some time an active and interested member of this Club.

Mrs. Cordelia Horton, a valued member, died at her home near Wexford, Mich., where the family had removed a few months previous. While sympathetic tears flow unbidden, we mourn not as those without hope, feeling that our loss is her gain

Scarcely had we recovered from the surprise occasioned by the sad news of Mrs. Horton's death, when we were called to follow to the grave the remains of Mrs. Austin Hall, who was for a number of years a member with us, but at the time of her death secretary of the Raisin Club.

With this report we close the obituary record of the first decade of our existence as a Farmers' Club. And as we assemble here to-night, and grasp the hand of friendship, and look into the beaming eye and note the pleasant voice, we are led to ask the question: How many of all this assembly will be permitted to commemorate our next anniversary?

MODERN PROGRESS.

We live in an era of progress. In every department of business, in the arts, sciences and mechanics, new things are constantly being discovered, new facts developed, old theories dispelled, old methods discarded. Inventive genius was never more active or so successful as to-day.

This progress in all things, has, of course, pervaded the professions of pharmacy and medicine. The result is that there has been a great change in the method of preparing, combining and administering curative agents. Many articles extensively used by our fathers and physicians of forty years ago, and supposed to contain great remedial value, have been discovered to be either absolutely inert, or, perhaps, actually injurious to the human system. For instance, mercury was a component part of many of the medicines taken by our fathers; now it is known to be an injurious drug, and its use is avoided as much as possible.

What folly it is then, to talk of the value of "old time remedies," or to claim superior virtue in the "medicines of our fathers." Those ancient formulæ have had their day and must be allowed to rest with the dead past, where they belong.

What today needs is a medicine of today and for today. This is exactly what Hood's Sarsaparilla is. It is emphatically a modern medicine—a combination of vegetable remedies, all of which long experiment and study have proven to be of positive value. Hood's Sarsaparilla is also prepared by men of today, experts whose education, experience, brain work, and time, with the light of modern developments, have made them as much more competent than their fathers to prepare a reliable medicine as can be imagined.

Farther than this, not content to follow in old ruts, and take for granted whatever was told them, these men have by long and patient study developed a combination, proportion and preparation in producing Hood's Sarsaparilla which gives to this medicine curative power peculiar to itself.

What is the evidence of this peculiar curative power? It is seen and heard of every day in the wonderful cures which Hood's Sarsaparilla is effecting, often where other remedies have failed to have any effect.

The supreme importance of purifying the blood, and the peculiar efficacy which Hood's Sarsaparilla has in this direction, make it the most valuable medicine of modern times.

We hope everyone needing a good medicine, who reads this article, will take Hood's Sarsaparilla. We are confident it will give perfect satisfaction.

MAGAZINE OF AMERICAN HISTORY.

The December number of the Magazine of American History presents a rich and varied table of contents. The opening paper is a graphic historical sketch of the rise and fall and characteristics of "The Ancient Town of Fort Benton, in Montana," with picturesque accounts handsomely illustrated of early navigation of the upper Missouri River. The second contribution "David Hartley and the American colonies," by Joseph W. Hartley, New York, touches upon a theme of intense interest and consequence to all Americans. The material condensed in this scholarly article is much of it new to the general reader, and an admirable portrait of David Hartley, England's Signer of the Definite Treaty of Peace with America, forms the frontispiece to the Magazine. Following these attractive illustrated articles, we have "The Institution of Thanksgiving Day 1623," by Jacob Harris Patton, A.M., "LaSalle's Homestead at Lachine," by John Fraser, of Montreal; "A Typical Old time Minister, the Reverend Benjamin Tappan," a delightful sketch by Rev. D. F. Lamson; "Glimpses of Early Michigan Life In and about Kalamazoo," by Mary V. Gibbs; "Our Old Webster's Spelling-Book," by Rev. A. M. Colton; "Some literary Statesmen," which brings into view striking facts in relation to eminent writers in the councils of the nation, by Milton T. Adkins; and of shorter articles, "President Garfield's Silent Journey," Mrs. Elizabeth B. Custer Surrounded by Buffaloes, or Camp Life in Kansas Twenty years Ago; A Cluster of Christmas poems for the Household; and some exceptionally valuable hitherto unpublished letters. This superb number completes the twenty-fourth volume of this periodical, which is the only one of its kind in the country, and grows more and more popular and useful every year. We do not see how any college or school in America can spare this Magazine from its reference library for teachers and pupils. Its influence in every branch of literature and study is remarkable. The several departments of which no mention is here made for want of space are worth in themselves the entire subscription price, $5 a year. Published at 743 Broadway.

GOOD IN EVERY FAMILY.

For, plain, practical, common sense, useful information, and much of it at small cost, we commend to every Family in Country, Village and City, the Orange Judd Farmer. It is under the Editorial Care (with a corps of good Helpers,) of the Veteran Orange Judd, who still vigorously uses his pen, drawing on the accumulated knowledge and observation of nearly half a century, and is ever on the alert for good new things. He is ably assisted by SONS associated with him. This Journal omits most political and other controversial subjects, and devotes its beautiful and ample pages chiefly to practical questions affecting the work of every day life, out-door and in-door. Its "Common Sense Health Talks" are invaluable to every Man, Woman and Child everywhere.—Published Weekly at $1 00 a year by Orange Judd Farmer Co., Chicago, Ill.

THE WAR CONCERT.

The entertainment given last Friday evening under the auspices of the W. R. C., and for their benefit, was a very unique as well as enjoyable concert. Our citizens have been favored with many excellent home entertainments this season, but it is no disparagement to others to say that this affair eclipsed all previous ones this winter.

The chorus consisted of about forty voices, comprising our very best male and female vocalists, led by Mr. J. S. Strong. Miss Jennie Root presided at the piano with her usual ability. As we printed the program in detail last week we will not repeat it here. Although styled a concert there were many special features about it of a dramatic and literary character that added much to the interest. The choruses, it is needless to say, were all splendidly rendered. The Tecumseh Glee Club added new laurels to their growing reputation and the Tipton Glee Club never did better. "Tenting To-night" was a representation of a tent scene at night and the octet by the boys in blue was nicely sang. The recitations of Mrs. Josie Kemp displayed her superior dramatic ability to the best advantage, and the whistling solos by Miss Lizzie Smith captivated the audience. She was warmly encored after each solo. The vocal solos by W. M. Crittenden, Elmer Wilson and M. D. Alexander were very finely rendered. One of the most pleasing features of the program was the military drill by twenty young girls dressed in uniform. Their evolutions were elegantly given, some of which were very difficult, and Dick made a tip-top Yankee Doodle. The credit of perfecting the girls drill, belongs to Will Hayden. The silent manual by ten members of Co. C. showed the marks of a superior drill master. "Grafted into the Army" a solo and quartet by Messrs Strong and Conkling, Mrs. Mills and Mrs. Morley, was among the gems of the evening. Mrs. Mill's rendering of her part displayed her talents to the best advantage. "Just after the Battle" by the young lady octet, was superbly rendered. The duet, "Reuben and Rachel," by Amy Alexander and W. M. Crittenden took down the house and richly deserved the applause it received. The cap sheaf came with "Marching through Georgia." The music consisted of a solo and chorus and during the interludes between the verses, a batch of army bummers, loaded down with poultry, pigs and plunder, filed across the stage, two of the sojers dragging along a live calf. This brought forth round after round of applause. The program closed with "America," sung by the full chorus.

The entire affair showed careful preparation and thorough training. To Mrs. Corey and Mrs. Shull should be awarded the credit of arranging the program, which must have taken an immense amount of labor on their part. They are not only indebted to the musicians of Tecumseh, but also to their Franklin friends for valuable assistance. The W. R. C. are indebted to the public for their generous patronage. The House was crowded, and the net receipts added a goodly sum to the corps treasury.

TWO PAPERS FOR THE PRICE OF ONE.

The original and enterprising departure of The St. Louis Republic in sending two papers of six pages every week to the subscribers of its weekly edition, in place of one 10-page paper, is an earnest of the good treatment promised from time to time in other ways. The plan of issuing twice a week has proved very satisfactory to all The Republic's readers, who find that they get the news earlier than is possible by any other weekly paper, while paying only $1 a year. Another original feature of The Republic is the publication of three special State editions, which contain all the State news of Missouri, Illinois and Texas; thus relieving the General Edition of the mass of merely local news which usually loads the columns of other weeklies, and making The Republic the best general weekly in the country. Now is the time to subscribe. Remember the price is only $1 per annum, and anyone sending in the subscriptions of four new subscribers, will receive one additional copy free. Sample copies and a Premium Catalogue of 48 pages will be sent free on application. Address all orders, "The Republic, St. Louis, Mo."

It is Good Work to Give Health.

The only remedy for blood disorders is one that will expel the germs of disease, and make the blood pure and rich. That is best effected by Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y., a medicine of great value in the treatment of all blood disorders and diseases of the Kidneys. It tones the system and helps to do good work.

Science Works Wonders.

I had sciatic rheumatism so that I was all drawn over to one side. My hip sank in so that you could lay your hand in the cavity, and I did no work for a year. Nothing did me any good until I tried Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup. Four bottles cured me.

THE NATIONAL DEMOCRAT.

Every Democrat Should Read It. Every Seeker After Political Truth Should Read It.

We will send the National Democrat and Tecumseh HERALD to any address within the United States for $2.25 a year. All paid up subscribers are entitled to the benefits of this offer.

The regular subscription price of the National Democrat is $1.50 per year and it is well worth it. It is published weekly in the city of Washington, and each issue contains eight seven-column pages of reading matter. Send to this office for sample copies.

It has the endorsement of leading Democrats; it contains all the Washington and National news; its record of congressional proceedings will be full and complete, and it is in every way a worthy exponent of sound Democratic Doctrine. Subscribe now and secure this staunch organ of the party of the people.

The Tecumseh HERALD and NATIONAL DEMOCRAT for $2.25 per year in advance.

A PRESENT TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

It is with pleasure that we announce to our many patrons that we have made arrangements with the wide-awake, illustrated farm magazine, the American Farmer, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., and read by nearly 200,000 farmers, by which that great publication will be mailed direct, FREE, to the address of any of our subscribers who will come in and pay up all arrearages on subscription and one year in advance from date, and to any new subscriber who will pay one year in advance. This is a grand opportunity to obtain a first class farm journal free. The American Farmer is a large 16-page journal, of national circulation, which ranks among the leading agricultural papers. It treats the question of economy in agriculture and the rights and privileges of that vast body of citizens—American Farmers—whose industry is the basis of all material and national prosperity. Its highest purpose is the elevation and ennobling of Agriculture through the higher and broader education of men and women engaged in its pursuits. The regular subscription price of the American Farmer is $1.00 per year. IT COSTS YOU NOTHING. From any one number ideas can be obtained that will be worth thrice the subscription price to you or members of your household, YET YOU GET IT FREE. Call and see sample copy.

FILLS THE BILL.

The above is a caption of an announcement of THE WEEKLY DETROIT FREE PRESS, which will be found in another column. Nothing could be more true than that THE FREE PRESS "fills the bill" in all that appertains to the ideal family newspaper. It is the largest of Michigan pars and its twelve to sixteen pages constitute a veritable cyclopedia of news and current literature st book of instructions and entertainment. Enterprising, yet conservative, THE 1. SS is always clean and reliable, hence its widespread influence and circulation. Michigan's representative paper should certainly have a place in every Michigan home

The publishers offer a large number of attractive premiums with the paper. They will also give away nearly $2.000 worth of special prizes to fifty persons who send the largest lists of subscribers between December 22 and May 31, 1891.

A LUCKY LADY.

MILAN, Tenn, Sept. 23rd. Mrs. G. W. Combs, Humbolt, Tenn. a former resident of this place, has recently fallen heir to half a million dollars left by her Scotch grandfather. She has forwarded proof of her relationship to the lawyers and will receive her inheritance to day.—Evening Mail and Express, New York Sept. 23rd, 1890.

We are Mrs. Comb's lawyers and by her seeing our advertisement became the agents of her good fortune. W have a number of similar claims in our hands and expect to gain them If your ancestors came from the old country write us and inclose 25 cents for reply. There are more than half a billion dollars in Great Brittan alone, unclaimed, which rightly belong to people in the United States.

EUROPEAN CLAIMS AGENCY.

THE HERALD FOR 1891.

The HERALD is still in the ring, fully prepared to fill its accustomed place during the year of grace 1891. The 15th day of November last completed a cycle of sixteen years under its present management, and Providence permitting, the "old reliable" is likely to sail right along under the same pilot for sixteen years to come.

It is needless to inform the public what to expect in our columns during the ensuing twelve months. The general policy of the paper is well known and its record has been made. First and foremost, it will aim to be a first-class local newspaper, to act as a faithful chronicler of all local happenings of importance within the territory of its circulation. In this respect it will continue to lead all competitors.

Recognizing the stringency of the times caused by excessive taxation, we shall endeavor to accommodate the necessities of our patrons by placing our rates at the lowest possibl point, and our terms for 1891 have been adjusted with that end in view.

OFFER NO. ONE.

We have made arrangements with that wide-awake illustrated farm magazine, The American Farmer, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., and read by nearly 200,000 farmers, by which that great publication will be mailed direct to the address of any of our subscribers who will pay up all arrearages and a year in advance. The subscription price of the American Farmer is $1 00 per year. It costs you nothing. The two papers at our full rate of $1.50 per year.

OFFER NO. TWO.

The Great Divide is the title of a new monthly magazine published at Denver, Colorado, which has already taken a position among the best periodicals of this country. Our Club offer with the Great Divide is the most liberal one ever extended to our patrons. The Magazine for one year, the HERALD for one year and the Gemstone Cabinet for a premium will be given for $2.00. A sample copy of the magazine and a specimen of the Gemstone Cabinet can be seen at this office.

OFFER NO. THREE.

We offer reduced rates for the HERALD alone when payment is made strictly in advance. We earnestly urge upon our patrons the benefits of this plan. Call at our office in January, pay for your paper one year in advance, and thus secure the lowest cash rates. By so doing you will help yourself and help us at the same time. We will furnish the HERALD alone

CUNNING CHUCK.

A Christmas Story of Plantation Days.

N old negro, the owner of a well cultivated farm, sat with a number of his grandchildren in front of a blazing fire of hickory logs. Christmas time was drawing near and on the children's faces happy fancy had drawn pictures of bright eagerness. The old man had just put some sweet potatoes in the fire to roast when a boy said: "Gran'dady, tell us erbout er Chris'mas er long time ago, 'fo' de wah, w'en you wus er slave."

"Huh! we had Chris'musses sho nuff in dem days, but I reckon da peered happier ones I wus young at de time. I berlonged ter er ole man named John Peter Thomas. He wa'n't er bad pusson, but he had er mighty heep o' ouis ways erbout him. I rick'lecks one Chris'muss in de specially. Ole marster he get inter trouble wid de church. He had been er mighty man in de congergation—furnished all de wood fur ter keep de house wa'm, an' ole mistiss she mighty nigh allus baked de sackerment bread.

"One day de preacher—an' I neber did like de man, he wus so stuck up—borrid marster's hoss ter ride ter town, an' I reckon he muster got drunk ur suthin', fur w'en he got back de hoss wus putty nigh lead, he had been runned so hard. Marster didn't like it er tall, an' he gunter talk ter de preacher er bout it, an' de preacher he talk sorter short, an' den marster whupped him, whupped him awful, too. Well, de church tuck it up, an' marster got inter er quarrel wid de head men an' bless yo' hearts, da turned marster out. It tickled de niggers, but you better blebe da soon gunter laugh on de yuder side da mouths. Ole marster he lowed dat he wus done wid 'ligion—dat he wan't eben gwine ter keep Chris'muss. Dis made us look powerful blue, I tell you. We had been in de habit o' resin' an' 'joyin' ourse'fs fur er whole week. All we'd hatter do wus ter git up er staff wood ter last er week, an' den we'd be ez free ez birds. We'd ream ebes de country an' ketch rabbits, an' hunt possoms at night an' hab dances wid de gals, an' jes' hab er high time all roun'. But all dis wus gwine be stopped. De ole man wus gwine make us work all through de Chris'muss.

"Dar wus er sort o' Guinea nigger libed in the cabin next ter mine. He wus er mighty funny pusson, an' da called him Chuck. Well, atter we foun' out de thing had dun been settled an' dat we wan't gwine ter git no Chris'muss, I went inter Chuck's cabin one night ter greave wid him as I had dun greaved wid all de yuders. Chuck he wuz er settin' by de fire makin' ar cross bow.

"'Whut you gwine do wid dat?' says I.

"'Shoot rabbits wid it durin' de Chris'muss,' says he.

"'W'y, doan you know dat ole marster ain't gwine gin us no Chris'muss?'

"'No, I doan know dat.'

"'Wall, it's time you wuz er findin' out.'

"'Oh, no 'tain't. Ole mars thinks he ain't gwine gin us no Chris'muss, but he is.'

"'How you know?'

"'Neber mine—suthin' dun been er whisperin' ter me.'

"'Yas, an' will whisper er long time 'fo' you shoot no rabbits wid dat ar cross bow durin' dis here comin' Chris'muss.'

"'All right, ef you thinks so, hab it yo' own way, but I tell you dat dis is goin' ter be one de mos' 'joyable Chris'musses you eber seed.'

"'I doan know how it gwine come,' says I.

"'Oh, mebby not, but you ain't er very smart pusson, no how.'

"I thought de Guinea nigger had dun los' his mine, an' I got up an' went ter my cabin an' lay down, mighty sorrerful.

"De next day marster tole me dat he want me ter go up ter town wid him ter stan' berhine his cheer an' wait on him at de hotel table, er habit dat de white folks hab in dem days, an' I thought dat atter we got out on de road I would hab er chance ter talk him outen dat 'cision dat he dun cum ter in de regards ter Chris'muss. But somehow I didn't hab de nerve ter mention it ter him ez we was gwine, an' den I 'lowed ter merse'f dat I wait till we come back.

"It wus putty late in de night ez we rode toward home. Dar had been er little skift o' snow, an' de yeth looked like er sheet dun been spread out on it. Every thing wus so ghost-like dat I didn't see how he could git mad at me fur talkin' ter him, so I says, says I: 'Marster, Christ'muss will soon be yere, won't it?'

"'Hush yo' mouf,' says he; 'dar ain't no sicher thing ez Chris'muss. Dar uster be, but dar ain't now.'

"'I thought it wus gwine keep on jes like it allus did,' says I.

"'Deem make no diffence what you thought, an' mo'n dat, ef you say ermuther word on dat subjeck I'll make you git offen dis hoss (I wus ridin' behin' him) an' walk home.'

"You better blebe I hushed up. It was monstus skeery right er long dar, an' I woulder tuck er duck fit of he hader made me git down.

"Wall, we turned off inter a skirt o' woods, an' rid er long whar de trees hung low ober de road. Putty soon I think my blood gwine ter freeze. Er voice frum it seemed like way up yander call out:

"'John Peter Thomas, John Peter Thomas.'

"'Whoa,' says ole marse. 'Who dat call me?'

"'John Peter Thomas, John Peter Thomas.'

"'Mussyful Lawd, who dat callin' me?' aklamed de old man, an' he socked de spurs in de hoss, an' erway he went down de road. Dar wus er big bend in de road, an' marster kep' ridin' wid his head tucked down, an' not sayin' a word till we got roun' dat bend, an' den, jes ez he gunter talk ter me in er skeered sort o' way, yere coome de voice ergin. Dis time it say: 'John Peter Thomas, John Peter Thomas, you kain't run erway frum me. Stop.'

"You better blebe he stopped right dar in de road, er shakin' all ober.

"'John Peter Thomas, John Peter Thomas, wharfe you gwine treat dem po' culled folks so? I'se got my eye on you, John Peter Thomas, an' you bette r

"I'SE GOT MY EYE ON YOU."

look out. Doan furgit 'em on de day o' de Chris'muss, John Peter Thomas.'

"Den de voice hushed an' ole marster groaned. After while we rid on, an bimeby the ole pussen said: 'Jake, doan you say er word o' whut has took place ter night. I wus jest er foolin' bout you folks not habin' no Chris'muss.'

"I wan't gwine say nuthin' fur I wus mighty nigh skeered outen my raw hide shoes, I tell you; an' w'en I got ter my cabin' I wuz so 'cited dat I bumped bof sides o' de do' ez I went in. De next day marster call us all up an' say: 'I'se mighty sorry dat you thought I wan't gwine gin you no hollerday. W'y de Lawd know I lub you, an' 'stead o' habin' er week, w'y bless yo' souls, you may hab two.' He looked at me w'en he say dis, but he neeter, fur I wan't gwine ter say er word, de Lawd know'd, fur I wan't done bein' skeered at dat minit.

"Dar wuz er mighty heep o' happiness in de quarter dat night, an' while I wuz settin' by de fire, mos' ready ter go ter bed, who should come in but old Chuck.

"'Whut I tell you?' says he.

"'You tole me de truf an' nuthin' shorter, but I 'clar I thought you dun los' yo' mine. Say, ef you swar you neber mention it I will tell you suthin'. Will you swar?

"'Yas,' say he, 'I will swar.'

Den I tole him whut had happened, an' den he say: "Ef you swar not ter say nuthin' I'll tell you suthin'.' I swore, an' den he laughed like he gwine take er fit an' atter he got able which peered ter be er monstus long time, he wuz so tickled, he say, he did: 'Man up er bendin' tree, er haw, haw. White man an' er nigger come ridin' er long. Man up de tree called de name o' de white man. White man gits skeered an' gallops his hoss. Man drapped down outen de tree—outs through de woods, gits inter er nuder tree ahead o' de white man, an' gins him some—haw, er haw—some advice. White man, de next day, call up de niggers—ter he, he—you know de rest.'

"Wall, chillun," the old man continued, "I sot dar er lookin' at Chuck, an' er thinkin' dat he wuz sartinly de smartest pusson I eber seed in my life, an' I sometimes wonderr ''ut he would er been ef he had er liben. Po' ole man. One Chris'muss we laid him down under de big red oak tree. Take yere, lemme git dese sweet taters outen de fire."

CHRISTMAS NOVELTIES.

A toy-dealer guarantees to deliver presents at the house without the small boy seeing them.

It is said that a stocking has been invented that will hold a drum and a bobsled.

A collapsable Christmas tree will be considered one of the most useful inventions by fathers who have a houseful of small boys.

One of the most ingenious novelties of the year is a contrivance to keep the youngsters' eyes closed when Santa Claus is making his visit.

A lover's thermometer fills a long-felt want. A young man has only to test the warmth of his girl's affection to learn whether she expects a watch and chain or only a box of bon-bons.

Optical illusion has at last been adapted to a practical purpose. A Frenchman has invented a device which makes a pretty girl fail to see that she is standing under the mistletoe until it is too late.

Santa Claus says that the modern chimneys are a nuisance, as they land him away down in the cellar in a red-hot furnace, and then half the time the cellar door is locked.—Dansville Breeze.

A new skate will be put on the market this year. The inventor claims it can be put on in half the time that other styles take. Those who have watched a young man put on his best girl's skates will not feel disposed to dispute this claim.—Judge.

"GOOD morning," said the affable stranger, entering the office. "I represent the Squeehawken Mutual Life Insurance Company—capital, $6,000,000. I've called to see if you would not take out a policy, and—"

"Sit right down," said the busy merchant, "and we'll talk it over. Excuse me; but will you hand me that bottle labelled 'Cure for Consumption?' It's my time to take it. Thanks! Go on."

"The rates are exceedingly low, continued the agent, "and—for Heaven's sake, sir! Shall I call a doctor?"

"Oh, no, thanks!" feebly moaned the merchant, picking himself up from the floor; for he had fallen out of his chair as if in a faint. "It's only a slight attack of heart disease or paralysis—I don't know just which. I'm quite frequently affected. Now, please go on."

The agent was not quite so enthusiastic, but he went on.

"As I said, the rates are scarcely any thing; and, in your case, we would be pleased to make a discount, so you see —"

"Yes," interrupted the merchant. "Please excuse me again; but won't you hand me that box marked 'Yellow Fever Preventer?' I've just come from where it was prevalent. Thanks! Please resume."

The agent was moving uneasily in his chair, and appeared to hesitate about pressing the matter further. But he made a last rally and said: "I have here, sir, a few statistics, which show the financial standing of our company. It is the firmest and most reli—"

He paused; and a frightened look was on his face, for the merchant was on the floor, writhing and twisting as though in an awful fit. "D-don't stop, sir," he managed to gasp to the terrified agent, who was collecting his papers and making for the door. "I'm just having a little epileptic fit. Qu-quite subject to —to them, you—you know, I'll be all r-right in a min-minute!"

But the agent had fled, leaving a long, blue vacuum in the atmosphere, so fast had he gone.

"Well," chuckled the busy merchant, arising and brushing the dirt off his clothes, "it is hard work, and it soils one's clothes; but, by Jove, I knew the scheme would do the business. I shan't be bothered with any more of those agents for some time now. I'll be as cool as a cucumber in a minute, after I've had a drink of that good old—'Consumption Cure.' Ha, ha! 'Consumption Cure!' Wonder what the Kentuckian who distilled this prime old rye would say, if he heard it called that! Well, here's a go!"—Paul C. West, in Light.

HE KNEW THE BUSINESS.

Druggist—So you want to be a druggist, eh? Have you had any experience?

Young Bilson (cautiously)—Some.

Druggist—Do you know the difference between Epsom salts and oxalic acid?

Young Bilson (promptly)—Oh, yes, sir. One kills you and the other doesn't. —Golden Days.

A Patient Man.

"No, Mr. Trotter," she said firmly, "I repeat it a thousand times—no!"

"Well, keep on," he remarked, pleasantly; "that's only twice, and by the time you reach the sixth hundredth you'll be glad to vary it with a 'yes.' Will you kindly begin?" — Munsey's Weekly.

The Honeymoon's Last Quarter.

Young Wife (saying an affectionate good-bye to her husband)—Now, darling, you can't enjoy a moment while you are gone, can you, dearest?

George (off for a few days' yachting) —Well, m'dear, I can't tell a lie.

Young Wife—Oh, darling, please do! — Harper's Bazar.

The Dear Departed.

Little Girl—Your papa has only got one leg, hasn't he?

Veteran's Little Girl—Yes.

Little Girl—Where's his other one?

Veteran's Little Girl—Hush, dear; it's in Heaven.—Babyhood.

AT THE WINDOW.

The Clerk in the Village Post-Office Has a Life Full of Experience.

The life of a post-office clerk in a town of 2,000 or 3,000 inhabitants is full of pleasantness and all his paths are peace. He has nothing under the sun to ruffle the placid serenity of his amiable temper, and consequently his disposition soon becomes as sweet and mild as the perfume of a magnolia grove wafted on the gentle breath of summer. All he has to do is to engage in exhilarating conversation like this:

"Is there any thing here for Sarah Bilkins?"

"Nothing, madam."

"Are you sure?"

"Quite sure, madam."

"But you didn't look. How do you know without looking?"

"I have looked over the letters in the 'B' box 700 times to-day, and I remember that there were no letters in it addressed to you."

"Well, now, that's strange. I should have had a letter yesterday, and I thought it would come to-day sure. Do you suppose it could have been lost?"

"It's possible."

"Do many letters get lost?"

"About 16,000,000 annually."

"Oh, my! What is the reason?"

"By reason of incorrect or illegible address, insufficient postage and other causes."

"Goodness! And I suppose lots of them had money in?"

"Yes. Twenty-eight thousand of the letters sent to the dead-letter office last year contained money, amounting in all to $48,642; 4,000 had inclosures of postal notes aggregating $5,300, and 27,000 were found to contain drafts, checks, notes, commercial paper, etc., in the sum of $1,471,871."

"My land! And who gets this money?"

"If the letter contains the address of the sender it is sent back to him; but in over 3,000,000 cases out of 6,000,000 no address whatever is given by the writer."

"Then perhaps my letter has gone to the dead-letter office, or is held for postage or something like that?"

"Perhaps."

"Well, don't you think—"

"Madam, will you please stand aside a moment until I wait on the people who are crowding around the window?"

And as madam departs she mutters spitefully that she "never saw such an insolent, overbearing, unaccommodating fellow as that post-office clerk. He can't even answer a civil question, and I am going to have him reported to the department this very day."—Punxsatawney Spirit.

AN EXCUSABLE MISTAKE.

Mr. Whitehead (who had just slapped stranger on the back)—O, I beg yo' pawdon, sah; thought it was my fr'en' Smithers. Yo' hab on de berry same clo's he gen'r'ly wars.

Stranger—Yes, Smithers attinded de same pokah pawty I did last ebening. He am at present confined to his room. —Life.

Consistency Not a Jewel.

Actress (queen in extravanganza)—It seems ridiculous that I should wear diamonds about an inch in diameter.

Manager—You will have real diamonds to-night; I will also provide real poison in the grand spectacular queen-poisoning scene.—Jewelers' Circular.

Reciprocity.

Cadley—How do you manage to give your friends such low rates on coal?

Dealer—It is this way. I knock off 60 cents a ton because they are friends of mine, and then I knock off 200 pounds on each ton because I'm a friend of theirs.—Jury.

Art Criticism.

"There's a Verestchagin," remarked one visitor to another in the Portland exposition art gallery.

"So it is," was the reply; "very shocking indeed. It's a shame the hanging committee passed such pictures."—West Shore.

A Trade Secret.

Customer (at orange stand)—How does it happen you have no blood oranges?

Proprietor—Run out of aniline dye. I'll have plenty of blood oranges as soon as the boy gets back from the drug store.—Chicago Tribune.

Like Cures Like.

Mrs. Staggers—George, Mrs. Jaysmith says her husband says that you use a good deal of corn juice. What do you do that for?

Staggers—O-er-for my corns, of course. You know how they trouble me.—West Shore.

Woman's Love for Woman.

Louise—Her face is her fortune.

Isabel—Well, it is one of those rare cases where it speaks well for one to have inherited one's fortune, and not to have made it one's self.—Harper's Bazar.

An Effect of the McKinley Bill.

Binks—Why do you wear your glasses so high on your nose, Jinks?

Jinks (who reads the papers)—The Slasher says that the tariff has made eyeglasses go up.—Jewelers' Circular.

Misleading.

Freddy Fangle—Papa, couldn't the old patriarchs afford to buy their clothes?

Fangle—Certainly. Why?

Freddy Fangle—Because the Bible says, They rent their garments.—Judge.

ACTUALLY WORTH IT.

The specialties introduced in Suttons Uncle Tom's Cabin Company are worth more than the admission charged for the entire double show. Little Baby White, the child magnet, as Eva; the Sutton children, Little Maude and Master Eddie, in sketches, jigs, clogs and reel dancing; Robert Tasker, the wonderful basso; Miss Hattie Perry, the great lady banjo soloist; the wonderful Sandurient Bros., the premier gymnasts; Charles Crickwood, the comique banjoist; Alex W. White, in his eccentric impersonations, and a host of jubilee shouters, dogs, donkeys, ponies and a full dramatic company. Next Saturday evening.

THE SHADOW SOCIAL.

The Kid band and their friends turned out in force last Monday evening, at the home of J. F. N. Bowen and the shadow social was voted a success by all attending. The shadow of a lady being cast upon a screen was sold at auction, to the highest bidder, the purchaser escorting his shadow to supper. The gentlemen, by the way, did not do all the eating, as the shadows become very material about the time doughnuts and coffee were passed. Don Bowen was host and also filled the post of auctioneer like an old veteran. There were about fifty young people in attendance and the band cleared over $12.00.

TECUMSEH, MICH., DEC. 25, 1890.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Merry Christmas to all.

Last Saturday was an old fashioned rusher in Tecumseh.

C. O. Hiscock is home from Albion College for the Holiday vacation.

Some heavy iron lathes were received last Saturday for the Tiffany Iron Works.

Mrs. Dr. Kimball of Adrian was the guest of Mrs. Judge Stacy a couple of days last week.

Scove Walker and Ernest Gamble are home from Ann Arbor to spend the holiday vacation.

Mrs. Wm. Tilton has covered her sky light over and will not take any more likenesses this winter.

As we went to press early this week the numerous "doings" of last evening are deferred till next week.

We understand that Miss Mary Anderson has secured the Boston Mendelssohn Quintette Club for Jan. 10, 1891.

Miss Grace Lister returned to her home on Grosse Isle, Monday, after a few weeks visit with Misses Mabel and Delia Wood of Raisin.

Our political page is devoted to Christmas reading this week. Christmas comes but once a year and everybody ought to celebrate it.

H. Brewer & Co. have placed on the market a new brick machine called Brewer's No. 8, which they claim is the best yet made in their foundry.

Mrs. J. B. Colvin of Raisin, who has been in feeble health for several months is gradually failing, and her friends have about given up hope of her recovery.

The Masonic fraternity are rushing business this week. The Chapter held their annual election last evening, the Eastern Star have their's this evening and the Blue Lodge will hold theirs to-morrow evening.

T. M. Brown's Black Crook Co. played at the Opera House, Saturday eve. The company is a good one and their costumes are elegant. They played to a good audiences, considering the many attractions at this season.

We stated last week that Mrs. H. L. Stewart was entitled to the chief credit for getting up the milkmaid's convention. That was true. But we learn since that Misses Nannie Kyle and Ella Jackson rendered valuable assistance and are justly entitled to a share of the honors.

"A Tale of the World's Fair" published by F. T. Neeley, book and map publisher, Chicago, is a revelation in the field of imaginative literature. It is a masterpiece. Its various subjects, and their ornate and poetic treatment are excellencies that adorn literature as rare gems adorn a crown.

Dr. Bennett will be at the Lilley House, on Wednesday, Dec. 31st. "Is Life worth Living?" Hardly, if you must have grim Dyspepsia to sit at your table with you every day, or writhe under the familiar grip of Chronic Rheumatism or Neuralgia Here comes to your door a physician who knows how to deliver you by restoring THE POWER that runs this body. Consultation free in German and English.

The Annual Holiday issue. of The Christian Herald, Detroit, Mich., is a superb, twelve-page, illustrated number and must have cost the publisher a snug sum. It will, without doubt, be highly appreciated by the readers and patrons of that excellent paper. By the by, this week's issue will close the twenty-first volume of the Herald under its present and only management, a fact, which makes Editor Trowbridge, more veteran than he seems.

Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher's "Reminiscences" of her late husband, which she is now writing, has been purchased by The Ladies Home Journal, of Philadelphia, and the articles will shortly begin in that periodical. The series will have for its title "Mr. Beecher as I Knew Him," and will cover the entire period of his fifty-seven years of married life, from young Beecher's first acquaintance with his wife, his college life, their courtship and marriage, his first speech, the first year of married life with an income of $300, and so all through the great preacher's life until his later triumphs, his last sickness and days, and his death.

The Farmers' Union will meet at the home of Minor Davidson, Friday evening, Jan. 2d., where the following program will be presented:

Uncle Tom and Topsy next Saturday evening.

Shippers of stock are bothered by a scarcity of cars.

Frank H. Hall is home from Pontiac, where he is teaching.

Rob. Hicks is taking a rest from his duties in the freight office at Ypsilanti.

D. H. Silvers of Chicago, was visiting his old friends about Clinton last week.

The world renowned Mendelssohn Quintette Club of Boston will visit Tecumseh, on Saturday, Jan. 10, '91.

You can finish Christmas week most acceptably by going to see Uncle Tom's Cabin next Saturday evening.

Uncle Tom's Cabin will never grow old. Sutton's troupe will appear at the Opera House next Saturday evening.

Mrs. E. M. Doke, George and Ella, of Chicago, are spending Christmas at the old home with Mrs. Frank Doke.

The Hudson Board of Health has tabooed public gatherings during the holidays, on account of the scarlet fever scare.

The Clinton Local wants the woolen mill, up there, to put in a dyamo large enough to furnish electricity for street lighting.

Fred Tiffany is enjoying his rest from military duty at Tecumseh. Cadet Palmer of Chicago, was his guest for a few days.

An Almanac printed in 1795 is a curiosity in the HERALD office at Tecumseh. The Times has one printed in 1752.—Adrian Times.

The annual meeting for making pledges and chosing pews at the Baptist church, is called for Friday, Jan. 2, 1891, at 2 o'clock, sharp.

Pat Keyser informs us that he sold his entire crop of celery, 25 acres, to one man in N. Y. City. The same man has contracted for the entire crop of '91.

The Clinton Local published the first number of its seventh volume last week. Here's good luck to Bro. Blanchard. May he continue to thrive and prosper.

Harry Hanford of Cincinnati, is spending the holiday season with friends in Tecumseh and Franklin. He is doing finely in his present location and is growing richer and better looking every day.

Harper's Bazar published December 26th will contain a story by Mrs. Harriet Prescott Spofford entitled "At the Symphony." The pictorial attractions of the number, it is said, will be unusually fine.

The inmates of the Industrial Home will again have cause to rise up and call Gen. Alger blessed. Mrs. T. S. Applegate is in receipt of his check for $100 to be expended in the purchase of Christmas gifts for the inmates.

The Wabash Calendar for 1891 is the neatest thing yet. It contains thirteen pages, a title page and one for each month. Each page has a calendar for one month, the state seal in colors of some state through which the great Wabash road passes, comprising twelve states in, all from Massachusetts to Utah.

The Northern Lenawee Farmers' club will meet at W. B. Keyser's, on Friday evening, Jan. 2d. 1891. The following is the program to be carried out:

Sent.—Wm. C. Jordan.
Past Dict.—H. W. Stevens.
Med. Ex.—Dr. L. G. North.

In the January number of The Forum, Dr. Austin Flint, of New York, will publish an article on "The Revolution in Medicine." Dr. Flint explains the method not only of Dr. Koch's treatment for consumption, but the probable early extension of a similar system of treatment to most of the other diseases that are caused by bacilli, such as diptheria, typhoid fever and measles. This is perhaps the first comprehensive and philosophical explanation that has been made for lay readers of the practical applications of the results of bacteriology.

Uncle Tom Saturday evening.

Claud Van Tine is enjoying a vacation at home.

Dr. L. G. North has returned from his eastern trip.

Outlook in the Work of Parliament.

INDECENCIES IN THE CAMPAIGN IN KILKENNY.

The Police Become Censors and They Tear Down the More Objectionable Posters.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—Kilkenny is fairly covered with flaming political placards, full of wit, of terse argument, and it must be added, in many cases of indecency. The coarse allusions which have characterized the campaign on the part of the anti-Parnellites find frequent repetition in red and black on the dead walls, and crowds of boys and men gathered to read and laugh at them. Occasionally an officer of police pushes his way through a crowd and after scanning a particularly offensive poster, turns to a subordinate and orders it torn down. Sometimes a crowd of angry Parnellites resolves itself into a committee of censorship, and without waiting for the judgment of the official, pounces upon the offending placard and strews its fragments in the gutter. This is done with the more impunity from the fact that in the town the populace is made up of Parnell's adherents in great majority, whatever the complexion of the rural part of the district may prove to be. The excitement on the eve of the important decision of Monday is intense. The place is in an uproar with parades and meetings, torches, bands, fireworks and every variety of political demonstration. The two men who received the greatest amount of abuse from the Parnellites are Hennessee and Healy. The latter will be lucky if he gets out of the district with a whole skin. The government is taking great precautions against a general riot today or Monday. Hundreds of small rows are expected as a matter of course and the police will not trouble themselves to prevent a few score heads being broken. What is feared and guarded against is some disturbance on so large a scale as to bring the constabulary into a parliamentary inquiry. Several companies of soldiery are an hand, subject to be called in to aid the constabularly force. Davitt and Tanner have organized what they call a "flying brigade." With a few good speakers and good fighters they propose to follow Parnell wherever he goes Sunday and Monday and organize opposition meetings whenever he speaks. It can easily be judged whether or not this method of campaigning is likely to promote peace and good-will among the excited constituenti.

The action of the Freeman's Journal in suppressing Archbishop Walsh's letter denying the report that the Dublin chapter had resolved on neutrality of the priests in the campaign has widened the breach between the factions. It is regarded as an insult to a respected and beloved prelate both in his personal and official capacity, besides being a bold attempt to conceal an important truth. The feature of the situation that is the gravest for thinking Irishmen is that the English, while they display a hungry interest in the blows and whacks that the contestants are giving one another, have ceased almost wholly to regard the political aspect of the struggle. They seem, newspaper and people, to have dismissed home rule from their thoughts as now outside of living political issues. This attitude is common to Liberals and Conservatives alike, and many of the former assume an injured air, as if they had narrowly escaped being the victims of a confidence game on the part of their leaders. Lord Salisbury caustically remarks, in answer to a correspondent, that "as he is not a member of Mr. Parnell's party, it does not appear to him that this (the position of Mr. Parnell) is a question upon which he is called upon to express an opinion." Colonel Saunderson, M. P., the noted North of Ireland Loyalist, is more outspoken: "If Mr. Parnell succeeded in leading the Irish party again, and unquestionably he would, as he was the only man they had got to do it; and if Mr. Gladstone again consented to give him home rule, they knew it must include two vital points: control of the police and the appointment of judges. If these conditions were granted the position would be absolutely untenable. He did not think the patriotism and justice of the English people would ever consent to hand over the lives, liberty and property of loyal men into the hands of the basest miscreants that ever defiled a public platform." Lord Randolph Churchill, instead of remaining in Egypt until January, is on his way back to Great Britain. He thinks the situation requires his presence. It is understood that Mr. Parnell and his followers will substantially support the passage of the land purchase bill. The anti-Parnellites are divided on the subject. It is now practically certain that there will be no meeting of the Conservative party until after the House re-assembles and some progress can be made with the committee stage of the land purchase bill.

The recent turn of Irish affairs has greatly smoothed the course for the measure and the concessions made by Mr. Balfour have left little to which the Ulster members can object in detail. The bill is still anything but popular with the Tories, but it is conceded to be too late now to object to it on principle. A meeting will be held, however, to test the strength of the opposition to the principle of assisted education. There will certainly be a motion for the rejection of this measure on the second reading. However, aside from Unionist pressure, the prime minister has to consider the effect of the proposal in the constituency, and the reports from the country render it certain that assisted education would be a popular move even with the country clergy. Probably by this time the Government would have been able to measure pretty accurately the strength of the opposition they will have to meet. Last session the representations of the particular members who are moving in the present instance led to the summary abandonment of the bill. But the fact that the government are now resolved to produce it shows either that the Unionist pressure in favor of the bill must have been overwhelming or that the Whips have satisfied themselves that the "Cave" on this question is not likely in the long run to assume serious dimensions.

Looking for John.

VIENNA, Dec. 22.—An Austrian warship will sail from Trieste next week in search of the missing Archduke John, otherwise known as Captain John Orth, whose vessel has not been heard from since sailing from a South American port several months ago.

Another Mine Horror.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—A terrible accident occurred yesterday in a mine at Sasnoirce. A number of miners were leaving work, when the rope attached to the lift broke, precipitating the men to the bottom of the shaft, a distance of 400 feet. Twenty men were killed outright, and several several others sustained serious injuries.

Will Not Interfere.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—Late last evening it was announced that Home Secretary Matthews had decided not to grant a reprieve in the case of Mrs. Pearcey, who is under sentence to be hanged on the 23rd for the murder of Mrs. Hogg.

Balfour as an Entertainer.

DUBLIN, Dec. 23.—Mr. Balfour, chief secretary, and his sister have arrived in this city from England. Balfour has entirely dispensed with personal guards. He is going to give a series of entertainments at the secretary's lodge.

Suffering in London.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—The number of unemployed people in London is said to be greater than exer known before. Public officials are overwhelmed with appeals for work or assistance.

Harrington at Home.

QUEENSTOWN, Dec. 22.—Harrington, one of the Irish delegates to America, has arrived on the Aurania. He came ashore and was warmly welcomed by the crowd on the dock.

SUCCI'S SUCCESS.

HIS LONG FAST OF FORTY-FIVE DAYS ENDS.

He Is Attacked by Gastric Fever But Rallies—He Resembles a Skeleton Automaton—400 People See Him Break His Fast.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Giovanni Succi's fast of 45 days terminated Saturday evening at 8:15 o'clock, in the presence of an audience of about four hundred persons. The worst attack of gastric trouble that he had during his fast occurred at 5 o'clock today, during which his pain was so acute that it was feared he would collapse, but his indomitable will power carried him successfully through. From 5 p. m. until he took his first cup of cocoa at 8:15 his pain continued to be more or less acute. It was evident in many ways, by the distortions of his face, which was terribly shrunken, by his frequent change of position on the lounge upon which he was reclining, by the nervous twitchings of his wasted hands, by the restless glare of his deep sunken eyes, and in various other ways. When the cocoa was prepared shortly after 8 o'clock, Succi got off the lounge and staggered to the table where the nourishing diet was placed. The spectacle he presented was truly pitiable. He looked like a skeleton automaton, and when he smiled it was simply ghastly—much the same kind of smile that a condemned prisoner might be expected to make before going to execution. When he sipped the cocoa there was a burst of applause from the spectators.

It was at first doubtful whether he would be able to retain the nourishment, but the uncertainty soon passed away and Succi gradually resumed his former buoyancy. Then he appeared for the first time to be able to realize that his fast was over and that his triumph was complete.

At this point Citizen George Francis Train was struck with a spasm of eloquence, and exalted Succi and the press to the skies. Succi then, in a few words of broken English, thanked everybody and retired to bed. Many physicians were among those in attendance and seemed much interested.

Succi's weight was not taken since 8:10 today, when he weighed 104¾ pounds. His weight when he began the fast was 147¼ pounds. He drank during his fast twenty-one quarts of alkaline water and nine and one-half quarts of croton water. Sunday afternoon at four o'clock Succi will take his first dinner, after which he will leave for Boston. Succi's fast has undoubtedly been an honest one, and that fact is the more creditable to him because as a financial success his venture has only been moderately profitable.

WILL PHOTOGRAPH STARS.

An Expedition From Harvard to South America.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS., Dec. 22.—An important expedition was sent of by Professor E. C. Pickering from Harvard astronomical observatory Saturday. The party will go to Peru to observe and photograph the stars and determine their relative brightness. A new station will be founded near Arequipa, the second city in size in Peru, about 8,000 feet above the sea level. A former party was stationed near Lima, as will be remembered. The present expedition will arrive at Arequipa about the last of January and will continue plans for the study of the southern stars under favorable conditions. The chief of the party is Professor W. H. Pickering, who is accompanied by his family. Two buildings, a dwelling house and observatory, will be conveyed in pieces to Arequipa. The party will remain to observe the total eclipse of the sun in South America April 15 and 16, 1891. As the plan is now arranged, Professor Pickering will go down the coast, where the eclipse is total.

Congress.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—The Senate, after passing a number of private pension bills in the morning hour, took up the federal elections bill and Mr. Spooner made a long speech in support of the measure.

In the House a number of conference reports on public buildings were agreed to. The urgency deficiency bill, with Senate amendments, was then discussed, and was finally returned to the Senate with all but one amendment, that relating to pay of Senate employes, agreed to.

Wants a Railroad Receiver.

GALVESTON, TEX., Dec. 22.—John W. Smith, of Burlington, Iowa, has petitioned the United States court to appoint a receiver for the Texas Western Narrow Guage railroad running between Houston and LaGrange. The reason assigned for the application is that the road is not paying expenses and now owes the employes more than $20,000. The hearing in the case will be held in New Orleans January 5.

Strangled to Death

Horrible Fate of Elmer Sharkey.

AN AGONIZING SCENE AT HIS EXECUTION.

Further Details of the Double Hanging at the Ohio Penitentiary—Sharkey's Awful Struggles After the Drop Fell—Popp Dies From a Broken Neck.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 20.—It was just midnight when the spectators were admitted to the annex of the penitentiary, where they were to witness the hanging of Elmer Sharkey and Henry Popp.

ELMER E. SHARKEY

a minute later stood upon the death drop ready to pay the penalty of the murder of his mother. The young matricide held up better than was anticipated and it was not necessary to call the wooden jacket into use. He was very pale, however, when led from the death cell onto the scaffold and weakened rapidly as his hands and feet were being pinioned. So near did his strength come to forsaking him at the last minute that his body swayed as if he was about to fall prostrate on the scaffold. During the buckling of the straps around his arms and legs, Sharkey's lips were tightly closed and he stared vacantly over the heads of the large crowd of spectators below. After Sharkey had kissed the crucifix put to his lips by Father Logan, and just before the black cap was pulled down over the face, Deputy Porter inquired of the doomed man if he desired to say anything. He seemed to be deaf to the words of the official as if his thoughts had preceeded his soul into eternity, for the question was several times repeated before an answer was received. Sharkey finally said in a very faint voice: "I ask God to pardon my sins and I forgive all." These were the only words that he spoke.

The noose being adjusted Warden Dyer pulled the lever, the trap doors parted, the form of the matricide shot through the opening and there followed one of the most horrifying scenes that was ever witnessed in the penitentiary annex. Instead of the knot being under the ear it in some way got around under the chin. The head was forced back onto the shoulders but the neck was not broken. The efforts of the respiratory organs to continue the performance of their office produced a sound that was terrorizing to the spectators. No words are adequate to express the horror of that ghastly scene and it will doubtless haunt the dreams of those who witnessed it for many moons to come. The consternation stricken spectators made a rush for the doors in hopes of getting far enough away not to hear the dying struggles of the unfortunate man. The heaving of the victim's convulsive chest caused the body to move upward and downward, making the sight more hideous to behold.

Considering the circumstances the time required for death to relieve the terrible sufferer was something remarkable, and showed that Sharkey's tenacity to life was not the most vigorous. The drop fell at 12:07½, and Sharkey was pronounced dead by Dr. Goreslene at 12:32½. Sharkey was hung with the same rope that snapped the necks of Brocky Smith, Otto Leuth and Ellis Miller, and was given a seven foot drop. The noose was drawn so tight that it was necessary to cut the rope, and Popp was executed with the new rope that was bought for Isaac Smith, the man of a charmed life.

POPP MEETS HIS FATE.

The convicts, forming the stretcher corps, had scarcely borne the sheeted corpse of Elmer Sharkey from the death room, ere the officials were anxiously scanning the fastenings of the new rope, which heretofore had hung, festooned from the ceiling above like a snake ready to strangle its victim. The new line was a three-quarter inch hemp thoroughly tested, as it must bear a terrible strain. All was ready and with steady step, Popp passed from the death cell on to the scaffold, accompanied by Father Logan and Chaplain Sutton. He was dressed in a neat suit of black cashmere, cutaway coat, white shirt, black tie and standing collar. His face was neither pale nor flushed, but was of that unearthly hue which denotes deadly fear. His restless eyes dropped until they scanned the crowd; then sought the ceiling above; now roved to the right and then dropped to the floor. He walked without assistance to the trap; placed his feet upon the trap, and stood erect. His arms and limbs were pinioned, and just before the black cap was adjust, Father Logan in a voice filled with emotion asked the doomed man if he had anything to say.

"No, father; I believe nothing," was the reply.

The crucifix was presented to his lips; he kissed it devoutly, and the cap was pulled over his face.

Once again Father Logan asked him if he had any word to leave.

Again the murder said, in a tone so low and muffled that it seemed to come from the tomb:

"Nothing, father."

"God bless you, my son."

Deputy Porter pulled the noose tight about Popp's neck, the knot resting under his left ear. Warden Dyer jerked the lever, and the next instant the soul of the unfortunate man had flown to its maker.

So perfect was this execution that the body never moved as it hung from the rafter above. The physicians stepped quickly to the spot and while one listened for the faint flutterings of the heart, the other gazed intently at his watch as the second hand described its narrow circle.

The drop fell at exactly 12:30 and at 12:46 Popp was pronounced dead, his neck being broken. At 12:36 his pulse was 130, and gradually dropped until the great pump that forced the arterial blood through Popp's body was stilled forever. It was cut down and taken to the dead house.

The Morphine Route.

DENVER, COL., Dec. 20.—Nellie Webb, a courtesan, living at 1427 Twenty-first street, took a dose of morphine and is not expected to survive. She came to this city about eight months ago from Omaha and was accompanied by her six-year-old daughter. The woman had a quarrel with her lover a few days ago, and this is assigned as the cause for attempting to take her own life She has no friends in Denver so far as known.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels, are some of the more common symptoms. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently. It tones the stomach and other organs, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the sympathetic effects of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind.

Distress After Eating

Sick Headache

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness, or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla—took three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." Wonders

Are wrought by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor in restoring gray hair to its original color, promoting a new growth, preventing the hair from falling, keeping it soft, silky, and abundant, and the scalp cool, healthy, and free from dandruff or humors. The universal testimony is that this preparation has no equal as a dressing, and is, therefore, indispensable to every well-furnished toilet.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for some time and it has worked wonders for me. I was troubled with dandruff and was rapidly becoming bald; but since using the Vigor my head is perfectly clear of dandruff, the hair has ceased coming out, and I now have a good growth, of the same color as when I was a young woman. I can heartily recommend any one suffering from dandruff or loss of hair to use Ayer's Hair Vigor as a dressing."—Mrs. Lydia O. Moody, East Pittston, Me.

"Some time ago my wife's hair began to come out quite freely.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

not only prevented my wife from becoming bald, but it also caused an entirely new growth of hair. I am ready to certify to this statement before a justice of the peace."—H. Hulsebus, Lewisburgh, Iowa.

"Some years ago, after a severe attack of brain fever, my hair all came out. I used such preparations for restoring it as my physicians ordered, but failed to produce a growth of hair. I then tried, successively, several articles recommended by druggists, and all alike fell short of accomplishing the desired result. The last remedy I applied was Ayer's Hair Vigor, which brought a growth of hair in a few weeks. I think I used eight bottles in two years; more than was necessary as a restorative, but I liked it as a dressing, and have continued to use it for that purpose. I believe Ayer's Hair Vigor possesses virtues far above those of any similar preparation now on the market."—Vincent Jones, Richmond, Ind.

Business Is Large

But Less Confidence Is Shown.

SOME MONEY STRINGENCY STILL PREVAILS.

Exports of Products Show a Gain of 8 Per Cent. Over Last December—Imports Heavy—Dun's Review of Trade Tells the Business Story.

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Business continues large for the season, but there is perceptible less feeling of confidence. The causes appear to be: 1. Presence of important monetary legislation, the effects of which are not clearly foreseen. 2. Frequent failures and difficulties in making collections. 3. Less satisfactory conditions in some large branches of industry. Though the rate for money on call is lower than a week, and money is easier at Boston and Philadelphia there is still stringency at most points throughout the country. Complaints of slow collections have rarely been more general.

Foreign influences are not now disturbing. Exports of products for two weeks of December from New York show a gain of 8 per cent. over last year and the total last December was hardly ever surpassed. Though imports continue heavy, they are greatly exceeded by exports at present. Exports of cotton thus far this month exceed last year's and also provisions, but there is a heavy decrease in grain caused by speculative prices here.

Trade at the south is fair at most points reporting; considered healthy at New Orleans with larger cotton receipts, dull at Memphis, but more confident at Little Rock, slightly improved at Montgomery and good at Nashville, less confident at Jacksonville and at Atlanta accummulations of cotton are large.

Money is very close at all points. St. Louis has colder weather, favoring all lines of trade, but at Kansas City, holiday trade is below average, at Denver trade is only fair, at Salt Lake improving some, at Omaha fair, at Minneapolis steady for lumber and improving in prices for flour, and at St. Paul confidence is returning. Collections in this region are at most points fair. At Chicago money is firm but regular business supplied, and there is confidence on the immediate future. At Milwaukee and Detroit trade is good, at Cleveland fair, and at Cincinnati very quiet in wholesale lines. Pittsburg reports more confidence, trade in manufactured iron and in glass slower and bessemer lower.

Eastern cities feel the effects of expected legislation and recent failures, but also present monetary relief. Confidence improves at Boston, wool sells more largely and also leather. Though money is easier at Philadelphia the noteworthy feature is the general difficulty of collections. Iron shows no improvement at Philadelphia or here. The dry goods trade feels the influence of recent failures, and of stringency in commercial loans. Trade in cotton goods is not so large as usual, and though print clothes are down to 3 cents, the first time for several years, stocks on hand are 860,000 pieces. Trade in woolen dress goods has been encouraging.

GIACCOMA PALLATTO,

An Italian, Ordered Released From the Penitentiary.

DELAWARE, O., Dec. 20.—Much surprise and indignation exists in court circles here caused by the decision of the circuit court in session yesterday, whereby Giaccoma Pallatto, an Italian, who was recently sentenced to the penitentiary by Judge McElroy, for the shooting with malicious intent of Martin Fleonan at the Hocking Valley depot last August, is ordered discharged from the penitentiary. Pallatto's lawyers freed him upon a few technicalities of the evidence given. The decision is regarded as an outrage, as the Italian is known to be a vicious and dangerous man, and it is feared that his victim, Fleonan, will die also.

The Sugar Bounties.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—General Appraiser Williams, of New York, had a conference with Internal Revenue Commissioner Mason, in regard to the preparation of regulations for the collection of the sugar bounty under the McKinley bill. The subject was discussed in all its practical phases, and Mr. Williamson, who is a large sugar planter in Louisiana, gave Commissioner Mason the benefit of his experience in sugar raising, and made suggestions as how best to collect the bounty.

Tariff Amendment.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—Mr. Spinola, of New York, introduced in the House a bill amending the tariff act for the schedule for sundries the following: Furs, not otherwise provided for in this act, dressed or dyed on skin but not made up into articles or cut into strips, pieces or waste, or furs not on the skin, prepared for hatters' use, 25 per cent. ad valorem; for seals, dressed or died on the skin, 50 per cent ad valorem; when made up into articles or cut into strips pieces or waste, 60 per cent. ad valorem.

Lawrence Barrett's Daughter Married.

BOSTON, Dec. 20.—Miss Edith Barrett, youngest daughter of Lawrence Barrett, the tragedian, was married at the Emanual church to Marshall Williams, of Roxbury, Mass. The wedding was a brilliant one, and over a thousand guests attended the reception. Edwin Booth was unable to leave Providence to attend.

To Pension Non-Combattants.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—Mr. Cullom introduced in the Senate a bill to provide for the payment of laborers, cooks, nurses and all who worked in the commissary department during the late war, and also to place them on the pension rools.

No Signal Corps Money.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—A lack of funds will probably delay the reorganization of the signal corps, the plans for which are perfected and are now in the hands of Secretary Proctor.

Furniture Factory Burning.

OSHKOSH, WIS., Dec. 20.—Banderob & Chase's large furniture factory caught fire about 9 o'clock p. m. and at this hour midnight is still burning. The plant is worth between $100,000 and $150,000.

LEAPED THE TRESTLE.

Fatal Accident on the Wheeling and Lake Erie Road.

MASSILLON, O., Dec. 20.—The south bound passenger train on the Wheeling and Lake Erie road leaped from a trestle near Bolivar station, not far south of here last night, and three passengers were killed. The head truck of the last car left the track just as the engine started across a long trestle. Before the fact that anything was wrong could be known, the locomotive was dashing across the bridge, the rear car pounding along on the ties; when fairly on the bridge it swung over the side and down to the ground, turning bottom-side upward in its descent. The car at once took fire and the scene is described as frightful by those who saw it. The car plunged into the river, 35 feet below, and every occupant save two was killed or injured. The killed are: Unknown woman, crushed beyond recognition; Miss Ada Hall, Sherrodsville, badly mangled; Henry Hill and sister, Carrie, of Shelby, Ill., burned to a crisp by burning car. The injured are: W. G. Graham, of Norwalk, crushed and back broken, will die; Charles Conrad, Massilion, O., internally injured, probably fatally; Conductor Fred Landis, seriously; Leonard Whitman, of Marietta, leg broken; Mrs. Louisa Piper, of Stark county, O., internally; Ira Cowan, of Norwalk, badly bruised; W. M. Gorlinger, of Ada, O.; William Hall, of Sherrodsville, back injured.

FARM AND GARDEN.

RESULTS OF SCIENTIFIC EXPERIMENT IN AGRICULTURE

As Made at the Ohio State and Other Agricultural Experiment Stations—Official Report of the Same.

[Prepared Exclusively for the Central Press Association, of Columbus, O., by the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station.]

Professor Eugene Davenport, agriculturist of the Michigan Experiment Station, reports in bulletin No. 69, of that station, an experiment in which steers of the Galloway, Holstein, Hereford, Short Horn and Devon breeds were kept under observation for a year or more, the experiment closing September 15, 1890, immediately after the Detroit exposition.

Two steers of each breed were originally selected, but accidents removed one of the Short Horns and one of the Devons. Professor Davenport recognizes the danger of drawing conclusions as to breed from tests of so limited a number; but so far as the experiment went, he believes that it justifies the following conclusions:

1. The amount of food consumed is no index of the amount of gain it will produce, that is as to its profitable use and conversion into meat.

2. Neither is the total gain secured, nor the rate of gain a sure guide to the economical use of food by the animal.

3. Large gains are not necessarily economical ones, nor medium ones necessarily costly.

4. Age is the all controlling circumstance that decides the rate of gain. The ratio necessary to sustain the gain increases with age in about the same proportion as the weight of the animal, but the gain remains absolutely about the same.

5. That "baby beef" is not inconsistent with high quality.

6. That nervousness is not necessarily a sign of a bad feeder.

7. That great development in size is not a necessary condition to profitable feeding nor to quality.

8. That the "type" of an animal has much to do with his ability to use food to good advantage in the production of meat. In this sense there is a distinction and a difference between the breeds for beef purposes.

9. Those nearest the "dairy type" made less gain to the food consumed, and it consisted more largely of fat on or about the internal organs. This type was also characterized by coarser extremities, a longer, flatter rib, more shrinkage of meat in cooling, and a higher percentage of cheap parts.

10. As between the beef breeds, I think no one can here suggest marked differences that cannot be sufficiently explained on other grounds. As in all experiments of this kind, greater differences are noticed within the breeds than between them. The two Herefords are in this experiment nearly at extremes in everything but type, and in that respect as far apart as is allowable among herefords. Aside from the Holsteins, no two animals of the lot differed more than did the two Herefords. Very close upon them came the two Galloways with marked difference in build.

11. Knowing these animals as I did, I think I may safely say that as they, irrespective of breed, approached a certain stocky, blocky form that we designate as the "meat type" in the same degree they proved good feeders and economical consumers of food, within a reasonable age. On the other hand as they approached the coarser or more loosely built organization, betraying a circulation more largely internal and less diffused, in about the same proportion were they less profitable consumers of food for meat purposes and turned out a less desirable carcass for the block. If this be true, as I believe it is, it is a question of type rather than of breed and that breed that affords the largest proportion in members of this type is, all things considered, the best, if any one thinks he knows which breed or breeds that may be.

In saying this I believe I only follow the teachings of this and all other experiments. Nor does it work any injustice to other types selected for and excelling in other special lines. All will make some beef. Only a few will make the best or the cheapest. The strong teaching in this is that moderate gains are not inconsistent with profit, nor lack of age inconsistent with quality.

General Terry's Funeral.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—In reference to the wishes of the family, the funeral of General Terry, who died in New Haven, Conn., on Tuesday last, will not partake of a military character, and no orders will therefore be issued from the war department concerning it.

Handy to the Falls, Too.

NIAGARA FALLS, Dec. 20.—Harry Lundy, a 17-year-old boy employed on a farm near this place, committed suicide yesterday by taking a quantity of paris green. No cause for the act can be learned.

Settled for Sixty Cents.

BOSTON, MASS., Dec. 20.—The creditors of Witten, Burdett & Young have accepted sixty cents on the dollar, payable every three months for a year, with 6 per cent interest from January 1. next.

REVIEW OF THE QUARTER

LESSON XIII, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, DEC. 28.

The Texts Extend from Luke xx, 9-19, to Luke xxiv, 44-53, Including Closing Scenes in Christ's Earthly Mission. Sketches of Participants in the Tragedy.

The quarter now closing began with the parable in which Christ announced to His disciples the method of God's dealing with a sinful race. The world is typified as a vineyard and the prophets as messengers, the proceeding closing with the murder of the Son and a prophecy of God's judgments on the murderers. Then follow the closing scenes—the arrest, trial and crucifixion, the glorious resurrection, final instructions and ascension. As this is an epoch concerning which some historical questions are raised, it seems well at this point to turn aside from the texts and mention some facts in the lives of the principal persons—facts which show the reason of their words and actions as there recorded.

It is no small proof of the authenticity of the four gospels that the writers everywhere assume full knowledge on the part of their readers of the nature of the Roman government, and those who wrote chiefly for the Jews do not pause to tell who Annas and Caiaphas, Herod and Pilate were; they speak of them precisely as an American writing today for American readers would speak of President Harrison, Secretary Blaine and Governor Hill. If he were writing of events occurring in England a century ago he would be careful to add words explaining who the principal men were and why they took certain action under the law; nor is it possible for the most able writers to produce a work in one century exactly in the style of the preceding century. This one fact is a powerful argument against a recent assumption of infidelity that the gospels were produced a century later than their assumed dates.

Of the persons mentioned the most prominent is Pontius Pilate, and we know his history almost as well as that of any man of equal rank in the last century. The Jews had been conquered by the Romans, and governors set over them by the Roman emperors. Pilate was procurator of Judea, just as Governor Bent was governor of New Mexico soon after the Americans had conquered that country; and as there were quarrels and riots in New Mexico on account of race and religion, so there were in Judea. Similarly, as the United States government refused to take notice of the religious differences, but punished only those who rebelled against the nation, so Pilate's duty was to disregard the complaints of the Jews on merely religious grounds. He therefore refused to execute the judgment of Annas, Caiaphas and the council, as it was merely for blasphemy; so they brought a new charge, that of sedition, to make a case under Roman law.

Pilate then assumed jurisdiction, and questioned the prisoner, but as it was evident that Christ's words and acts were not aimed at the government Pilate pronounced him faultless—three times, John says. But Pilate "feared the people." Why? Because he had already caused serious riots by violating their religious feelings, and knew that he was in danger of reprimand from Rome. The cruel and suspicious Tiberius was then emperor, and was changing local rulers in every part of the empire. Pilate was the sixth procurator of Judea, and his first acts there had caused trouble. He entered Jerusalem with the Roman standards advanced, and planted them in places considered sacred by the people. The latter looked upon the figures on the standards as idolatrous, and there was a bloody riot, so Pilate removed the standards. In his dilemma, anxious to placate the people and unwilling to slay the innocent, he gladly heard that Christ was a Galilean, and therefore sent him to Herod, who ruled Galilee, but was at that time in Jerusalem.

This was Herod Antipas, son of Herod the Great and uncle of that Herod mentioned in Acts xii, a man with all the vigor and executive ability of his family, and with more than their average taste for social philosophy and research. To him Christ was no more than a curiosity; he wanted the Saviour to talk, "to give his views," as a modern politician would say, and had some hopes of seeing him work a miracle. Christ, therefore, received all his speeches with a dignified silence; it was no part of his earthly mission to satisfy the idly curious. Herod, therefore, returned the prisoner to Pilate, who made one more feeble effort against the popular clamor, then weakly yielded and gave over the innocent one to a cruel death.

The subsequent history of the two rulers is in the highest degree instructive, and by a series of events which seem providential the facts are clearly proved by the testimony of Jews and Romans who, if they had any feeling on the subject, were hostile to Christianity. The very evil which Pilate had consented to the crucifixion to avoid soon came upon him; he attempted by cruelty to suppress outbreaks, and the cruelty provoked greater insurrection. At length he perpetrated a massacre of the Samaritans, so atrocious that the home government interfered. Pilate was recalled, tried and condemned to banishment to Vienne, in Gaul (France). There authentic history leaves him. There was a tradition that he lived in a cave in the mountain now called by his name, and drowned himself in a small lake near its summit, but this is not proved.

Herod Antipas indulged his passion for art and luxury as long as Tiberius remained emperor. The latter, however, was succeeded by Caligula, equally cruel and suspicious, and partly insane. To him went Herod with a request that he might have the title of king and the powers of his father, but it was his misfortune to reach Rome at the time when Caligula was enraged by the discovery of a plot. Herod was arrested and narrowly escaped death. He, too, was banished, and finally died in Spain. He had married a daughter of Aretas, king of Arabia Petræa, and repudiated her to marry his half brother Philip's wife. This caused a war with Aretas and much misery. During these troubles Herod Agrippa, grandson of Herod the Great and nephew of Antipas, was living in Rome, and so gained the favor of Caligula that he was given the rule over Judea and much adjacent territory. He yielded to the prejudices of the Jews, slew the Apostle James and imprisoned Peter, and after seven years of pride and luxury died a miserable death (Acts xii, 23).

When the Jews clamored for the crucifixion of Christ and Pilate protested they cried out, "His blood be upon us and our children!" And verily it was. From that day forth troubles multiplied upon them, and the last few years of their national history is one continuous era of woe and horrors. The Gentile world, even the hard hearted Roman soldiers, stood aghast at the frightful punishment the Jews brought upon themselves, and Josephus presents details which even now can scarcely be read without tears. Verily "the wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God."

THE WORLD'S FAIR.

aused by this great event is scarcely equaled by that produced by the great discovery of Dr. Miles—The Restorative Nervine. It Speedily cures nervous prosperation, change of life, pain, dullness and confusion in head, fits, sleeplessness, the blues, and neuralgia, palpitation, monthly pains, etc. C. W. Snow & Co., of Syracuse, N. Y.; Talbott and Moss, of Greensburg, Ind. and A. W. Blackburn, of Wooster, O., says that "The Nervine sells better than anything we ever sold, and gives universal satisfaction." DEMOREST FOR JANUARY.

"Go snowshoeing?" Yes, my dear madame, why not?—provided the heavens be propitious and furnish the snow, and there is every prospect of plenty this winter. Snowshoeing is easy as sliding down hill,—after you know how, and you certainly will know how, and how to form a club, and what to wear, and all about it, after reading the breezy article on "Snowshoeing" in Demorest's Family Magazine for January; and if you don't become enthusiastic about the subject, we are mistaken. Or if your tastes are artistic, you will be delighted with the excellent paper on "Modeling for Sculpture," with its numerous and beautiful illustrations, including a superb full-page portrait of the eminent American sculptor Hartley; and if you have never modeled in clay, the suggestions for amateurs and beginners will be of great assistance. "Sage Maidens of Cornell University" is another handsomely illustrated article, written by one of them, telling of some of the trials and many of the pleasures of the life of a "co-ed" at that noted seat of learning; the illustrated Chinese story is particularly interesting; the other stories are all good; the "Sanitarian" has seasonable articles about the "Effects of Cold" and how to take sitz, foot, and other baths, for remedial purposes; "Chat" and "The World's Progress" are especially attractive; and all other departments are brimful of good things. Indeed, for beauty, variety, and completeness, Demorest's Family Magazine must be awarded the palm of superiority as the Family Magazine, and should be in every household. Published by W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th Street, New York.

A faded and discolored beard is untidy and a misfortune. It may be prevented by using Buckingham's Dye for the Whiskers, a never failing remedy.

May Thank Her Stars.

The narrow escape of Mrs. B. M. Searles, of Elkhart, Ind., from a premature death is wonderful. She states that "for twenty years my heart troubled me greatly. I became worse. Had smothering spells, short breath, fluttering; could not sleep on my left side, had much Pain in Breast, shoulder and stomach. Ankles swelled. Had much headache and dizziness. Treatment did me no good, until I tried Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure and Restorative Nervine. The first bottle helped me, and I was soon virtually cured. For sale at Baker & Hall's drug store. A fine book on the Heart and Nerves free.

It is dangerous to tamper with irritating liquids and exciting snuffs. Use Ely's Cream Balm, which is safe and pleasant, and is easily applied. It cures the worst cases of catarrh, cold in the head and hay fever, giving relief from the first application. Price 50 cents.

The children's health must not be neglected. Colds in the head and snuffles bring on catarrh and lung affections. Ely's Cream Balm cures at once. It is perfectly safe and is easily applied into nostrils. It also cures catarrh, the worst cases yielding to it.

ESTATE OF JANE WIGGINS.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the city of Adrian, on Tuesday, the 23d day of December, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety.

Present Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Jane Wiggins, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Daniel Wiggins, Administrator upon the estate of said deceased, alleging that the funeral expenses and debts of said deceased and the expenses of administration thus far incurred have been fully paid, and that he is now ready to close said estate and to render his final administration account, and praying that said account may be allowed, and that the residue of said estate may be assigned and distributed according to the statute in such case made and provided, and that he may be discharged and his bond canceled, and for such other order and decree as to this Court shall seem proper.

It is ordered, that Monday, the 19th day of January, 1890, at 9 o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

50TH YEAR OF PUBLICATION

THE QUEEN OF THE LADIES' MONTHLIES ENLARGED AND GREATLY IMPROVED, MAKING IT MORE DESIRABLE THAN EVER, AND KEEPING IT IN THE LEAD OF THE LADIES' MAGAZINES.

Its fiction is strong and clean. Some of the best-known American writers contribute to its pages, namely, Mrs. Edna Fawcett, Frank Lee Benedict, Howard Seeley, Mrs. Lucy H. Hooper, Rebecca Harding Davis, Miss M. G. McClelland, Alice Bowman, and Minna Irving.

Historical and Biographical Sketches, with numerous and appropriate illustrations, printed on fine paper, will be given monthly.

In the Fashion department, we aim to combine beauty and utility. The newest and prettiest styles of costume are given with full descriptions, like a monthly dress-pattern sheet. As a fashion magazine, "Peterson" is universally pronounced as far in the lead of all others.

Numerous designs for needlework, embroidery, knitting, patterns, &c., with diagrams printed in colors. Articles on the management of the sick, by a trained nurse, household and garden hints, recipes for cooking, and interesting articles on various topics, are given monthly.

The aim of the publishers is to give such variety of contents as will both interest and instruct its readers, and make it a helpful companion to every woman.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES

The ice harvest has begun.

Excellent wheeling and fine weather for work.

Henry Conklin, of Tecumseh, visited the Library Friday evening.

M. P. Brown, of Tecumseh, was in the village Tuesday morning.

Ella Hall was on the sick list last week, but is up again at present.

Mrs. F. G. Florence, of Holloway, called on friends Friday of last week.

Editor Waring, of the Messenger, went to Grand Rapids Tuesday on business.

Ellsworth Wilson, of Lima, Ohio, visited his uncle Ed. Harrison and family last week.

Mrs. E. W. Rappleye and daughter Mattie visited relatives at Dundee several days this week.

Geo. Lawton, of Tonawanda, N. Y., visited his nieces, Jennie and Martha Lawton, a few days last week.

We are informed that Samuel Arner has been sent to Petoskey as operator, and has no office work to do.

The little Wiggins sisters were the recipients of a beautiful six-octave organ as a Christmas gift from Santa.

Mrs. Jacob Arner returned Monday evening from a week's stay with her daughters, Ida and Hottie, of Detroit.

The annual Christmas family reunion of Wm. Barrett, jr., was spent very pleasantly at his home Thursday last.

The Library Association received a life-size pastile portait of Mr. E. T. Bush, a Christmas present from Mrs. Bush.

Prof. Kellogg, of Tecumseh, rode his wheel down to our village in forty minutes, Friday, and he is only an amateur on the wheel, too.

The Kid Band will hold a box social at the home of Frank Davidson, on Wednesday evening of next week, and extend a cordial invitation to their Ridgeway friends.

Mrs. Libbie Pilbeam-Hatton, of Ypsilanti, after a visit with relatives in and about the village for a week, returned to her work as teacher of shorthand in Cleary's College, the last of the week.

Those who entertained relatives and friends on Christmas were H. Palmer, Mrs. Sue Clark, Daniel Allen, James Pocklington, Mrs. M. A. Barrett, Wm. Riggs and L. Bannister. It wasn't much of a day for dyspepsia.

E. W. Rappleye, T. H. Temple, H. J. Williams and T. Allison left Tuesday morning for a few days' fishing through the ice at Wampler's Lake. W. P. Cadmus, Francis Wiggins and Dr. Nelson expect to join the party Thursday.

Those of the village who enjoyed a Christmas dinner with relatives out in the country, were H. J. Williams and wife, Rhoba Arner, S. P. Smith and family, Dr. and Mrs. Loree, Agent Sutton, wife and daughter, and Wm. Beevers and family.

Mrs. Winder, who met with the misfortune of losing her money purse, containing upwards of $10, last week, wishes to thank the friends who contributed towards raising the amount of her loss, especially Mr. Williams, for his kind and friendly interest in raising the amount.

The L. C. S. will be held at the home of Mrs. W. R. Wilson, instead of Mrs. E. W. Rappleye, as announced last week, on Friday evening of the present week. A grab bag will be the central attraction for the evening. All are respectfully asked to contribute an article of some kind and help to make it an enjoyable time for all. 10c a grab pays the bill to try your luck.

Dr. and Mrs. Loree entertained the following relatives and friends at their home Friday evening: Prof. Martin Palmer and wife, of Wyandotte; Prof. and Mrs. Kellogg and Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Jackson, daughter Ella and son Clarence, of Tecumseh; Mr. Palmer, of Ypsilanti; Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Williams, Mrs. R. S. Houseman and Ed. Palmer, of the village.

Prof. H. C. Wilson, of Constantine; Secretary E. A. Wilson, of Tecumseh; C. L. Waring, of Holland; Dispatcher Frank Allen, wife and son, of Toledo; Lowell and Carl Waring, of Paw Paw, Misses May McElroy and Mattie Consaul, of Adrian, Ida Pocklington, of Blissfield; Lavern Barrett, of Chicago; Mrs. Libbie Hatton, of Ypsilanti; Lyman Sowle and wife, of North Farmington, are among those visiting relatives and friends here this week.

The members of the Bible class, of which G. P. Waring is teacher in the Sabbath School, were very pleasantly entertained at his home on Tuesday evening of last week. Refreshments were served and a pleasant and profitable time was spent by all. To show that they appreciate his efforts as teacher they presented him with a teacher's flexible-covered Oxford Bible. The class was organized into a Bible class alumni, to meet annually at the home of some member of the class. Such gatherings help to Christianize a community and cultivate a desire for something higher, and leads to the advancement of God's cause and the growth of the Church and Sunday School.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Happy New Year.

Being holidays, news is scarce this week.

Fred Rupp is suffering from a crushed finger.

Irv. Osborn went to Detroit on business last Saturday.

Bert Tripp's wife has been quite sick, but we are glad to say she is now better.

Mr. I. Bone, from Bryant, Ind., is visiting Charles Holtz and family.

Mr. Lee, of Tipton, was married to Miss Sophie Ballou, of Macon, Christmas eve. The ceremony was performed by Elder Borden, of Britton. We extend them hearty congratulations and wish they may live long and happily.

Last week Tuesday afternoon an alarm of fire was given by Thomas Smith, who ran into the drug store white as a sheet and trembling in every limb. After he had calmed down a little, he explained that he had seen fire and smoke issuing from the roof of the brick stores and was certain that the whole building was in a blaze. It was now our worthy drug man's turn to tremble with excitement. He gave one hasty glance around at the contents of his store and rushed out to rouse the village and hunt for a ladder. One being procured, an investigation followed, which resulted in finding no fire or smoke beyond what issued from the chimneys in a natural manner. Quiet again reigned at Britton and Thomas Smith was seen no more that day.

The Kniffin family gathering was a success in every particular, on account of the good roads, good health and a dominant will to get there, as was evinced by the gathering at the residence of Mrs. Eliza Kniffin, one and one-half miles east of Britton, on Christmas day, of friends, an only sister, Mrs. Amy Berger, children, grand-children and great-grand-children, to the number of 66 souls, to enjoy a sumptuous chicken-pie dinner, and the pleasing exercises which followed, such as singing by the children, Bible reading by "mother," Mrs. Eliza Kniffin, prayer by Mr. Charles Kniffin, a quartette song by the four sons of I. L. Kniffin (deceased), and songs, recitations, etc. by grand-children and great-grand-children. When, at 4 p. m., after entering into a permanent organization, called the "Kniffin Family Christmas Reunion," and the election of officers and the various committees, adjourned, hoping to meet one and all at the same place on Christmas day of 1891.

TECUMSEH AND FRANKLIN FARMERS' CLUB.

The Club will meet at the home of Mr. Chas. Matthews on the evening of Jan. 7th, when the following program will be carried out:

CAMBRIDGE CLIPPINGS.

Mr. Nick Keeney of Petoskey, is visiting relatives here.

The Sunday School in the Episcopal church closed last Sunday, to open again the last Sunday in March.

The exercises at the Christmas tree Christmas eve were hard to excel.

A. M. Keeney and family, of Tecumseh, are spending their holidays here.

Some of our people are filling their ice houses. They no doubt have been thinking of last winter and the winter before.

Messrs. Health Commisioners, we're coming to your relief. You look out for small pox and diphtheria and we will guarantee to cure all kidney and liver diseases with Dr. Craig's Kidney and Liver Cure.

Whooping cough, croup, sore throat, sudden colds, and the lung troubles peculiar to children, are easily controlled by promptly administering Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. This remedy is safe to take, certain in its action, and adapted to all constitutions.

TOWNSHIP INSTITUTE.

There will be a series of township institutes in Lenawee Co. during the year, under the general direction of the County Secretary, the object being to awaken a general interest in our district schools. The time has come when we must advance in matters pertaining to grading, to a uniformity of text books, to professional work, etc., etc. Hence it is expected that every live teacher will attend these meetings. Urge your school officers to come with you. A conductor will be appointed by the Co. Sec'y and each exercise will be presented by the person to whom it has been previously assigned by the Co. Sec'y or by the conductor. At Tecumseh High School on Saturday, Jan. 10, 1890, at 10 a. m.

FRANKLIN UNION LITERARY AND LYCEUM

The Franklin Union Literary and Lyceum met at E. J. Whelan's Dec. 26th, 1890.

At an early hour the house was well filled.

The question, "Resolved, That the Senate of the U. S. should be abolished" was changed for "Resolved, That the U. S. Government should own and control all the land and property within its borders." It was decided in favor of the negative.

The following was the program:

Song—Choir.
Recitation—Nina Allen.
Music—Ruth Taylor.
Paper—Eva Wheeler.
Music—Rena and Leon Allen, Clarence and Carl Wisner.
Chip Basket—Cecil Billington.
Speech—Hollis Taylor.
Recitation—Mrs. Ed. Spalding.
Declamation—J. S. Allen.

Adjourned to meet at the residence of Mr. Lee Billington, Jan. 9, 1891, when the following question will be discussed: "Resolved, That no foreign born citizen should hold office in the United States."

GEN. ALGER'S BENEFACTIONS.

There are some men in Michigan who are as well able to give abundantly of their riches as Gen. Alger, but this State has never known a man who gave so largely, so constantly, and whose gifts seemed to get right down to the people, to go at once to do good, without circumlocution and without stint, as do the beneficences of Gen. Alger.

This year he sent checks varying from $75 to $125 each to the Soldiers' Home, Grand Rapids; Institute for the Deaf and Dumb, Flint; Michigan School for the Blind, Lansing; Industrial School for Girls, Adrian; Reform School for Boys, Lansing, and State Public School, Coldwater. The amounts were expended in the purchase of Christmas gifts for the inmates. He will as usual supply the Detroit newsboys with suits for the New Year.

Long may fortune smile on Michigan's favorite son, and long may God continue to turn his heart to such deeds of genuine charity.—Adrian Times.

TWO PAPERS FOR THE PRICE OF ONE.

Since the first of November, subscribers to THE ST. LOUIS REPUBLIC, weekly, have been getting two papers of six pages every week in place of one of ten pages. This gives them the news half a week sooner all the time than any weekly could bring it. THE REPUBLIC also prints three special State Editions, for Missouri, Illinois and Texas, so that the local news of those States need not be put in the paper sent to other States; thus making more room for general news. THE REPUBLIC also offers to send one copy for a year free to anyone sending four new subscriptions. The regular subscription price is $1 a year. Sample copies and a Premium Catalogue of 48 pages will be sent free on application. Address, THE REPUBLIC, St. Louis, Mo.

Our mothers, young and old, all praise Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup; for it is the best thing for babies while teething. Price 25 cents a bottle.

TIPTON TOPICS.

Harvey and Webb Pearce, of Clinton, visited Tipton friends last week.

Wedding bells are ringing on the happy, glad New Year.

Charles Fawcett, who has been a great sufferer for a long time, passed away Saturday afternoon. The funeral services were held at the house, Monday at 1 o'clock.

Mr. James Hunter is once more seen on our streets.

Miss Carrie Taylor, of Macon, called on friends last Monday.

Wilber Gibbs returned to Byron last Saturday. Friday evening his friends came in upon him by surprise and all enjoyed a pleasant evening.

Many beautiful gifts were given from the Christmas tree on Christmas Eve; the church was well decorated and a very pleasant evening enjoyed by all.

Mr. and Mrs. Nurt, of Jackson, spent Christmas at their daughter's, Mrs. G. N. Luce.

FAMOUS YET UNKNOWN.

The wife of a famous man will oftentimes be completely hidden by the dazzle of her husband's fame, and it is astonishing how little is known of those women whose husband's names are household words throughout the country. While the newspapers teem with the name of Thomas A. Edison, nothing is comparatively known or heard of Mrs. Edison. Every newspaper reader knows the name of Chauncey M. Depew, but of Mrs. Depew only the most casual reference is made. Even in England, no one ever hears of Lady Tennyson, or of Mrs. Gladstone. And the same is true of the wives of such men as P. T. Barnum, Will Carleton, John Wanamaker, Spurgeon, W. D. Howells, Dr. Talmage, "Mark Twain," and James G. Blaine. Often these very wives have been the makers of their husbands' careers. Their portraits are even less known than their lives. In a splendid series to be called "Unknown wives of Well-known Men," The Ladies' Home Journal, of Philadelphia, will, during next year, sketch all these women and others, presenting their portraits, in many cases, for the first time to the public.

WHAT IT IS.

1. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a concentrated extract, prepared from Sarsaparilla, Yellow Dock, Pipsissewa, Juniper Berries, Mandrake, Dandelion and other valuable vegetable remedies.

2. It is prepared under the supervision of thoroughly competent pharmacists, who combine in Hood's Sarsaparilla all the knowledge of modern times concerning curative agents, and the experience of years in studying and preparing medicines.

3. Hood's Sarsaparilla is prepared by a combination, proportion and process peculiar to itself, and known to no other medicine, and by which the full curative power of all the remedial agents used is retained.

4. Every ingredient employed in producing Hood's Sarsaparilla is strictly pure, and is the best of its kind it is possible to buy. All the roots and herbs are carefully selected, personally examined, and only the best retained. All are ground in our own drug mill, so that from the time of purchase until the medicine is prepared, everything is carefully watched with a view to attaining the best result.

5. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most economical medicine to buy, because it is the only preparation of which can truly be said "100 Doses One Dollar." Give it a trial.

What It Does.

1. Hood's Sarsaparilla is especially designed to act upon the blood, and through that upon all the organs and tissues of the body. Its powerful action in cleansing the blood is clearly shown by the many really wonderful cures of Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Blood Poisoning, and other similar troubles it has accomplished.

2. Hood's Sarsaparilla tones and regulates the digestive organs, creates an appetite, cures Indigestion, Sick Headache, Billiousness, Dyspepsia, regulates the Liver and Kidneys, and cures all difficulties with these important organs.

3. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures Catarrh by expelling the scrofulous taint from which the disease arises, neutralizes acidity of the blood and cures Rheumatism, expels poisonous germs and cures Malaria and Malaria Fever.

4. Hood's Sarsaparilla as a general tonic for a Spring Medicine, or for any time when one feels all run down, is unequalled. It overcomes "That Tired Feeling" and gives a feeling of serene strength which is comforting and satisfying. It also tones and strengthens the nerves. After diphtheria, pneumonia, scarlet fever or other prostrating diseases, it is an excellent promotive of strength and general health.

Read the following pages for further information and statements of cures.

Life is not very pleasant for the Czar of Russia; but sufferers from nasal catarrh can now enjoy life and its blessings, because of the curative power of Old Saul's Catarrh Cure. Price 25 cents a box. For sale everywhere.

The McKinley bill has given the people high priced goods and low wages. It protects everything, or essays to do so, except labor. How do the wage workers like it?

An Indiana editor, who has made an extensive investigation of the subject, claims that Major McKinley is the author of the poem "Beautiful Snow."

The Reform club celebration and banquet at New York on Dec. 23d, was a grand affair, and Grover Cleveland was the hero of the hour and the occasion.

Uncle Jerry Rusk is not to be sneered at. He says: "Tariff revision would have been all right this year if the tariff had been revised the right way, but it should have been revised downward and not upward." True as preaching. Grover Cleveland himself could not have stated the case more concisely

The Republican platform of 1888 contained these words: "The Republican party is in favor of the use of both gold and silver as money and condemns the policy of the Administration in its efforts to demonetise silver." Yet the whole power of the present administration is thrown against the enactment of an honest free silver coinage law.

President L. L. Polk, of the National Alliance, closed his address at Ocala with this beautiful sentiment:

"Let the dead past bury its dead, and let us, as an organization, with new hope, new aspirations, new zeal, new energy and new life, turn our faces toward the rising sun of an auspicious and inviting future, and reconsecrate ourselves to the holy purpose of transmitting to our posterity, a government "of the people, by the people and for the people," and which shall be unto all generations the citadel of refuge, for civil and religious liberty.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR.

A Happy New Year to all the boys and girls.

A Happy New Year to every subscriber to the HERALD. May they live long and prosper.

A Happy New Year to those who are not subscribers. May they see the error of their way and reform before another January.

A Happy New Year to Grover Cleveland, the next President of the United States.

A Happy New Year to all good Democrats. They ought to be happy and deserve to be.

A Happy New Year to all Republicans. Bad boys always feel better after a good trounging.

A Happy New Year to President Harrison. He is the official head of this great Republic and deserves the good wishes of every patriot.

A Happy New Year to Hon. James S. Gorman. May he be faithful to the great cause of tariff reform and the people who elected him.

A Happy New Year to Congressman Allen. May he continue to practice his profession with honor and success in Washtenaw County.

A Happy New Year to Gov. Winans. Michigan looks to him for the best administration since the war.

A Happy New Year to all the printers. May they always get phat takes, have plenty of work and their pockets full of money.

A Happy New Year to all our advertisers. May they continue to deal liberally in printers' ink and may they reap the full benefit of their liberality.

A Happy New Year to those who got left at the last election. They will escape the cares and responsibilities of public office.

A Happy New Year to all the farmers' clubs. May they continue in the good work they have begun.

A Happy New Year to the farmers' Alliance. May it continue right along in the laudable work of smashing Bourbon politics.

A Happy New Year to the Michigan legislature. Let them remember that the people want a thorough reform in our tax and election laws.

A Happy New Year to our manufacturing industries, both old and new. May they be worked to their fullest capacity and make business boom.

A Happy New Year to our merchants. May their trade grow, and their bank account increase, and their advertising double up.

A Happy New Year to our pastors and clergymen. They ought to be happy for they have a clear conscience.

A Happy New Year to the Common Council. A block pavement on Chicago street is the improvement for this year.

A Happy New Year to all our churches. What would a modern community become without their daily work and influence?

A Happy New Year to the mothers of our land. The future of our country depends on the home, and the future of the home depends on the mothers.

A Happy New Year to Capt. Fred B. Wood. May his good luck continue to follow him in his new official relations.

A Happy New Year to Hon. Jno. D. Shull. We believe he will meet the expectations of his constituents who sent him to Lansing.

A Happy New Year to Register A. W. Smith. This is superfluous, however, as the Doc. is always happy under all circumstances.

A Happy New Year to County Clerk Waterman. May he fulfill the expectations of those who sent him to the County Seat.

A Happy New Year to Sheriff Baldwin. As he was saved from the wreck, he certainly ought to feel happy.

A Happy New Year to County Treasurer Wiggins. He can act both as farmer and banker now, and he will fill the bill in both capacities.

A Happy New Year to State Senator Horton. He will have lots of good company at Lansing.

A Happy New Year to Commissioners Helme and Chandler, and may they make the most of their good fortune.

A Happy New Year to Coroners White and Case. Perhaps they had better postpone the final inquest until 1892.

A Happy New Year to the press of Lenawee County. May the measure of their prosperity correspond with the measure of their efforts in building up the banner agricultural county of the Union.

A Happy New Year to Speaker Reed and Major McKinley. If they will heed the lesson of the last election they may be happy yet.

A Happy New Year to the Prohibitionists. They can at least boast of a clear conscience, whether they win or lose.

A Happy New Year to all, both great and small, short and tall. Be virtuous and you will be happy.

IT HIT THE "FIRST LADY."

A Danger that "Benny" will have to Use Safety Pins—Mrs. Harrison's Shopping Tour Spoiled by the McKinley Bill.

The laugh is on the administration. To-day a little story leaked out that is not only funny, but as true as gospel. The McKinley bill is responsible for it. By good democrats everything evil under the sun is ascribed to this "Napoleonic" piece of legislation. Nobody, not even the most pious republican, expected that there was a haw-haw in the thing. But there is.

Mrs. Harrison, "the first lady of the land," is the heroine of the story. That estimable lady, accompanied by Mrs. Dimmick, went over to Baltimore the other day a shopping. She always goes to Baltimore when she wants to buy anything—she has an idea that Washington merchants are in a conspiracy to swindle her. There may be some ground for this, for most Washington merchants know a White house customer at a glance and improve their opportunities. When Mrs. Harrison goes over to Baltimore she goes incog. She does not wear her best gown nor does she wear her worst. On this trip to Baltimore she was dressed quietly in a tailor suit of brown cloth, with a brown bonnet to match, and a handsome but ordinary everyday wrap. Mrs. Dimmick was dressed becomingly and modestly, as she always is.

The two ladies went over to arrange for some new winter gowns and to lay in some small household supplies of linen, etc. Mrs. Dimmick also wanted a line of hosiery, and Mrs. Harrison wanted some pearl buttons for Baby McKee. Both ladies went over with their accustomed economic notions and with that keen eye to thrift which ever characterizes the members of the thrifty Harrison household. They first went into the swell dry goods establishment of Baltimore and spent a long time looking at the beautiful French gowns and wraps displayed. When Mrs. Harrison began to price some of the dress goods she was astonished to find that those of the finest quality had gone up just thirty per cent. Her large black eyes glittered inquiringly at the handsome clerk, and she expressed her astonishment in no uncertain way.

"Why," she said, "three months ago this same class of goods you quoted to me at $2.40, and now you ask $3.20 a yard. Why is it?"

"Why, my dear madam," said the clerk with a modest look, "it is the McKinley tariff bill. On these goods the duty was formerly ninety per cent—now it is 107 per cent. On this other material which I quote to you at $2.80 a yard the duty was formerly sixty-five per cent and we could sell it at $2.25. Now the duty is eighty-five per cent, and we must have one fifth more."

Mrs. Harrison looked at Mrs. Dimmick and Mrs. Dimmick looked at Mrs. Harrison. Neither of the ladies dared do more than exchange glances lest they should reveal their identity. They, however, made a purchase or two, but did not buy as extensively as they had intended. Then they went over to the hosiery counter. Mrs. Dimmick wanted some hosiery, for which she had formerly paid at the same counter, $10 a dozen. She found the price marked up on her to $12 a dozen, and then it was her turn to open her eyes. She expressed her mind to the salesman in a way that women do sometimes, and was informed by that gentleman with a bland smile that it was the McKinley bill. He said that the duty on that class of goods had been formerly forty per cent and that now it was sixty-five per cent. He remarked further that a cheaper line of goods which last summer sold for $5 a dozen was now selling at $9 a dozen, and added: "In fact, ladies, the further we go down the scale in prices the greater has been the advance."

Mrs. Dimmick bought a half dozen of the kind of hosiery she wanted in the place of the whole dozen that she had intended buying.

Before leaving Washington, Mrs. Dimmick had promised to buy a new dress for her maid. She wanted some sort of woolen stuff such as ladies in the ordinary walk of life wear, and she went to look at some Henrietta cloth. She expected to pay eighty-five cents a yard and was dumbfounded to find that the price had been increased to $1.10. The salesman at the counter did not wait to be asked the reason for the rise—he volunteered the information that it was the McKinley bill. Last summer the duty on that class of goods was sixty one per cent; now it is 125 per cent. Mrs. Dimmick heaved a great sigh, but having promised her maid a new dress she bought it. When it came to buying pearl buttons for Baby McKee's small clothes, Mrs. Harrison got angry. Last summer she had bought those buttons in the same store for ten cents a card, two dozen on a card; now the salesman unblushingly charged her twenty-five cents a dozen for the same button.

"I suppose," she said, with sarcasm, "that this, too, is the result of the McKinley bill?"

"It is," said the salesman, with politeness. "The McKinley bill has put a duty on these goods, my dear madam of 1,560 per cent upon their cost in Europe. It is a prohibitory duty, and I think [the salesman did not know, of course, whom he was talking to] it was done to enable that old hypocrite John Wanamaker, to carry out a purpose he had in view of establishing a pearl button manufactory in Philadelphia."

Mrs. Harrison winced, and with a slight and very cold bow left the counter without buying any pearl buttons

Then these ladies went to look at some handkerchiefs. When they got to that counter they were more discouraged than ever. They found that everything in the way of linens, from the finest fabrics to the coarsest crash had gone up from forty to sixty per cent. As a consequence they cut their purchases down fifty per cent in volume.

Tired and more or less disgusted the ladies left the store and concluded to do no more shopping that day. They took the afternoon train for Washington, and, although Mrs. Harrison did not say so, it has leaked out from the White house that her opinion of Major McKinley is not what it was before she went on her shopping expedition.

TRUTHFUL WORDS.

In his splendid speech before the New York Reform club on Wednesday, Grover Cleveland thus referred to the republican taunts which followed the submission of his famous tariff message in 1877:

"Within twenty-four hours after the submission to congress of the question of tariff reform sundry senators and represenatives belonging to the republican party were reported to have jauntily ventilated their partisan exultation in the public press.

"If it be true that a senator from Nebraska said, 'It is a big card for the republicans,' this big card cannot appear remarkably useful to him now, for his state to-day contains a big curiosity in the shape of a democratic governor-elect.

"If the junior senator from New York declared that his party would carry this state by the largest majority ever known if they could be given the platform proposed, the reply will come when in a few days a democratic colleague is placed by his side.

"If a senator from Maine declared 'it is a good enough platform for republicans—we want nothing better,' how is it that he is now so diligently endeavoring to find out the meaning of the word reciprocity?

"If a New Hampshire senator believed that 'the republicans want nothing better with which to sweep the country,' the trouble his state is giving him to-day must lead him to suspect there is a mistake somewhere.

"If a senator from Wisconsin gleefully said he was glad to see us 'show our hand,' he cannot fail to be convinced, when he soon gives place to a real good, sound democrat, that there was after all more in the hand than he cared to see.

"If the present speaker of the house sarcastically said, 'It only shows what fools all the other presidents have been,' he may well be excused, since he has lately so thoroughly learned that in the sight of the people infallibility is not an attribute always to be found in the speaker's chair.

"If the representative from Ohio whose name is associated with a bill which has given his party considerable trouble of late said, 'If the democratic party had hired Burchard to write a stump speech it could not have suited us better,' it must be that circumstances leading to his approaching retirement from public life have suggested a modification of his judgment.

The campaign of education has been profitable to the country, though destructive to the ambitions of republican leaders. The issue has strengthened the man who had the courage to demand tariff reform, fortified his party and well nigh destroyed the opposition. A good campaign, indeed, a good campaign.

Marvelous Endurance.

The vast amount of labor performed by the heart in keeping all portions of the body supplied with blood is not generally known. It beats 100,000 times and forces the blood at the rate of 168 miles a day, which is 3,000,000,000 times and 5,150,880 miles in a life time. No wonder there are so many HEART FAILURES. The first symptoms are shortness of breath when exercising, pain in the side or stomach, fluttering choking in throat, oppression, then follow weak, hungry or smothering spells, swolen ankles, etc. Dr Franklin Miles' NEW HEART CURE is the only reliable remedy. It is a blessing to any one expecting to become a mother, says a customer of mine.

MONOPOLY'S PROFITS.

THE COTTON MILLS COUNT UP THEIR GAINS.

Handsome Profits of the Fall River (Mass.) Cotton Mills—A Combination to Keep Up Prices—A Case of High Tariff, Low Wages and Rich Tariff Spoils.

The cotton mills of Fall River, Mass., have been counting up their gains for the year, and the showing, though not so good as last year, affords abundant evidence that the mill owners are reaping a rich harvest of tariff spoils. Sixteen establishments, with a combined capital of $10,310,000, earned during the year ending Sept. 30, 1890, the sum of $1,361,818 net, or 13¼ per cent. on their capital. The total earnings of these mills last year were 20 per cent., the smaller earnings this year being due solely to the price of cotton, which was temporarily much higher in the spring and summer than is usual.

The prosperity of these mills may be seen from the facts which have been printed in the trade journals about several of them, in connection with the reports of the recent annual meetings: At the annual meeting of the Tecumseh mills the net earnings for the previous twelve months were given as $50,000, or 10 per cent. on their capital of $500,000, of which $32,500 was paid in dividends, or at the rate of 6½ per cent. per annum.

The Stafford mills' net earnings for the year ending Sept. 30 amounted to $123,000 on a capital of $800,000, or net earnings of more than 15 per cent. The net debt of the mills on Sept. 30 was $75,398 and the value of the plant $1,160,990.

The net earnings of the Narragansett mills were $61,000 on a capital of $400,000, and a dividend of 6½ per cent. was paid. These mills have made great improvements during the year, and notwithstanding the insides of the mills have been taken out, transposed and new machinery added, they were able to make net profits of 15 per cent. on their capital.

The Hargraves mill, one of the newest, earned $63,000 net during the year on a capital of $400,000, or nearly 16 per cent.

The King Philip showing is one of the most remarkable of the year. Its net earnings were $169,000, on a capital of $1,000,000 with 104,000 spindles, or net earnings of 17 per cent. exclusive of $12,000 paid in reduction of the debt, making a total of over 18 per cent. The plant is free of debt, but there is an indebtedness of $58,000 on tenements.

This year again the Granite mills show the greatest percentage of earnings. They earned more than 20 per cent.; but last year their earnings were 37½ per cent.

The high rate of earnings made by these mills is a subject of special interest to the public when it is remembered that these earnings are rendered possible by trust methods. These mills are engaged in weaving the plain cotton cloth from which calico prints are made, and which is therefore called printing cloth.

The Fall River manufacturers are now in their third combination to maintain the price of printing cloth, and the result is that for four months the price of it has been kept at 3 5-16 cents a yard. When the third combination went into operation Aug. 1 the price of cotton was at least three cents a pound higher than now, but the printing cloth combination keeps up the original price for its goods, which means, of course, that the mills are now making much handsomer gains than those just noticed.

These mills have recently complained much about overproduction. Toward the end of the summer the stocks of printing cloths on hand had grown to be so large that an agreement was entered into to shut down for a week to prevent the breaking of prices. The price of cotton having fallen very low, the mills have been working at white heat to turn out as much cloth as possible at the combination price. The result is that the stock of cotton cloth that has accumulated in the mills is enormous. The stock on hand is nearly four times greater than at the same time last year, and more than ten times greater than in 1888. It is probable that another shut down may be ordered to get rid of this enormous stock, and in that case the mill operatives may sit on the fence and reflect upon the beauty of protection to American labor.

The operatives in these Fall River mills are paid considerably less by the piece than is paid in England and Switzerland, and their higher daily wages are earned by attending to a larger number of looms, and thus producing more cloth than the English and Swiss weavers. Here is how the matter stands:

Number of looms run by one weaver in a cotton mill:

In America	6 to 6
In England	3 to 4
In Switzerland	2 to 3

Number of yards, same quality and width, turned out by one weaver:

In America	1,350
In England	875
In Switzerland	466

Rates of wages in 100 yards print cloth:

In Fall River	40 cents
In Lancashire	51 "
In Switzerland	60 "

Notwithstanding the fact that we produce cotton cloth so much more cheaply than it can be produced in Europe, the humbug claim is still made that we need a duty on it to protect American labor from the "underpaid pauper labor of Europe." The duty has long been practically prohibitory, and the slight reductions made by McKinley on some kinds of cotton cloth do not bring the duty down to a point where European competition can begin. The home market being guaranteed to the manufacturers they combine, and for three years keep up the price of their goods at a point where, as in one case already mentioned, profits of 37 per cent. are made possible.

The protected cotton mill owners have the advantage of cheaper cotton and cheaper labor than European manufacturers have, and they have a monopoly of the home market, yet some of these tariff beneficiaries who plead for protection to labor are actually reducing the wages of their operatives. A recent number of The Dry Goods Economist reports that the cotton weavers in Lonsdale, Valley Falls and Ashton, R. I., have had their wages reduced by about one-third. At a meeting of the Fall River combination, held Nov. 26, a reduction of the wages of operatives was the first measure proposed.

The cotton weaving industry is one of the most promising "infants" for the weaving process that is to come soon. Let the duties on cotton cloth be removed or reduced to a point where competition from abroad can begin, and the Fall River "combination" will be compelled to surrender a part of their unreasonable profits. The people would be the gainers.

THE WOMEN DID IT.

I was one of them "fool farmers;" yes, I'll own it like a man;
There was plenty of us fashioned on the same peculiar plan;
And I've lived out here in Kansas more than five-and-twenty years,
A growing poor and poorer, as it certainly appears.

I seldom read the papers—I work too hard for that,
And never knew why I got lean while other men got fat;
I didn't fool with politics, I had too much to do;
But I always voted as I shot, and as they told me to.

The day before election, just imagine my distress,
When I ketched my wife a-readin'—now whatever would you guess?
A free trade publication, and, to make it worse, she said
She'd read it regular each night before she went to bed.

And, do you know, that wife of mine just faced me up and down
That farmers slave to make a few monopolists in town.
I always try to get around these warm domestic spats;
But when I praised protection, and she laughed and answered, "Rats,"

I bristled up; it kindled all the sentiments of strife
To think this free trade stuff should be corruptin' of my wife;
I quit her then and there before her argument was through,
As every good protectionist makes it a rule to do.

That night we had a campfire, and our congressman was there;
We gave him "John Brown's Body" when he went to take the chair;
I wore my old blue uniform to spite the Democrats,
But all the time I wondered what my Mary meant by "Rats."

Our congressman was eloquent, he made a stirrin' speech;
I could almost see the battle's smoke and hear the bullets screech;
And when he bade us vote as we had shot at Malvern Hill
We rose with one accord and cried with one acclaim, "We will!"

We sang the good old war songs and we ate a mess o' beans,
And we passed the evenin' pleasantly recallin' bloody scenes;
And we took the straight out tickets and we planed 'em on our hats,
But all the time I wondered what my Mary meant by "Rats."

When I reached home I noticed that my Mary wore a smile,
Which seemed to me as indicatin' storms ahead or bile;
To head her off I said, "You'll call me early, mother, dear,
For to-morrow will be the livest day free trade will have this year."

Next mornin' just at sun up, as I woke and rubbed my eyes,
A wonderin' what she meant by "Rats," I saw to my surprise
My clothes and hat and boots all ranged in order on the floor,
And bearin' each a card I'd swear I never saw before.

My flannel shirt displayed this sign, "Taxed 60 per cent."
My trousers "Taxed 100"—so this is what "Rats" meant;
My vest said "Taxed 100," and my shoes "Taxed 25,"
My coat and hat "200," with "Protection makes us thrive."

I went to fill the basin and I noticed as I came,
"Taxed 45 per cent." Great Scott! the towel said the same.
The soap was marked at "20." As I dropped it on the floor
I chanced to see a scuttle full of coal chalked "24."

I passed into the kitchen, and it gives me pain to state
That my wife had on a woolen dress stamped "only 58;"
And in shooing out a guinea hen she made a little dive
Which showed a pair of stockings with a card marked "35."

The baby in his little bed was lyin' fast asleep;
I always held the little chap as most uncommon cheap;
But when I saw them cards on blanket, pillow, crib and sheet
I felt a lump raise in my throat, I knew that I was beat.

No matter where I went I struck them pesky little signs,
The stove, the plated, the knives, the forks, the window sash and blinds,
The scissors, needles, thread, all bore that terrible per cent.;
Bigosh, I didn't dare to ask what card was on the rent.

That was the shortest meal I ever ate in all my life,
And as I left the table, in remarking to my wife
That I was going to the polls, she helped me with my coat
And said, "I reckon, John, I needn't tell you how to vote."

I walked down to my votin' place; it looked like every yard
Was full of farmin' implements which bore a little card,
And seemed to say, from plow to spade, from thresher down to ax,
"Good mornin' John, and don't forget the tariff is a tax."

I voted straight, oh, yes, no doubt of that; I voted straight,
But not exactly in the way expected of my state;
And I showed the boys the little cards provided by my wife,
That night our congressman took formal leaf of public life.

I was one of them "fool farmers" during five-and-twenty years;
But I've learned a little common sense, as doubtless now appears;
You can run and tell McKinley—and—say—don't forget to state
That we've voted out in Kansas and we've voted darned near straight.

McKinley's linen duties are doing their work. Towels which were $1 a dozen are now $1.25; napkins which were 75 cents a dozen are now 87 cents. Toweling has gone up 4 cents a yard; table damask which was 25 cents a yard is now 30 cents, and tablecloths which were $1 are now $1.15. McKinley should be happy, since linen goods are no longer to be "cheap and nasty."

THE KINGDOM DIVIDED.

LESSON I, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JAN. 4.

Text of the Lesson, I Kings xii, 1-17. Commit Verses, 12-14—Golden Text, Prov. xvi, 18—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

1. "Rehoboam—Shechem—all Israel—to make him King."

Such are the words and phrases in this verse demanding our attention; but let us remember that we are reading the word of the Lord, and the Holy Spirit in this word is ever bringing before us persons, places and events which show us God honored or dishonored, God manifest and glorified, or the adversary manifest and God despised. Rehoboam was, so far as we know, the only son of Solomon, and therefore heir to the throne. His name, according to Young, signifies "Freer of the people," but he proved to be a great oppressor.

2. "Jeroboam, the son of Nebat, who was yet in Egypt, heard of it."

The previous chapter gives the history of this widow's son, God's purpose concerning him and offer to him if he would walk in His ways and do right in His sight.

3. "Jeroboam and all the congregation of Israel came and spake unto Rehoboam."

This seems outwardly all fair and submissive, but Jeroboam cannot have forgotten the promise of the Lord by the prophet Ahijah (xi, 29-31), and he is only quietly awaiting the developments which shall give him the ten tribes for his kingdom.

4. "Thy father made our yoke grievous; make thou the grievous service * * * lighter, and we will serve thee."

This, too, seems fair and reasonable, and it looks as if all might be well with Rehoboam if he will only do right.

5. "Depart yet three days, then come again to me."

The third day in Scripture is the day of resurrection and life and deliverance (Hos. vi, 2; John ii, 19; Matt. xvi, 21), but only for such as follow on to know the Lord.

6. "And King Rehoboam consulted with the old men * * * and said, How do ye advise, that I may answer this people?"

"With the ancient is wisdom; and in length of days understanding." "Days should speak, and multitude of years should teach wisdom" (Job xii, 12; xxxii, 7). But if the king had consulted the "Ancient of days" (Dan. vii, 13) he would have found true wisdom, and the word "Ancient" in Job xii, 12, according to the margin of the next verse, refers to God and not to man.

7. "If thou wilt be a servant unto this people this day * * * and speak good words to them, then they will be thy servants forever."

If he would only seek the welfare and peace of his people, as did those kings who sought to do right in the sight of the Lord, and as did Mordecai (Esth. x, 3) at a later period, then all would be well. But this was not his spirit.

8. "But he forsook the counsel of the old men * * * and consulted with the young men."

The old men had stood before Solomon, his father, but these young men had grown up with himself and stood before him.

9. "And he said unto them, What counsel give ye?"

10. "My little finger shall be thicker than my father's loins."

This is part of the answer which the young men instructed him to give to the people. The loins are significant of strength as in Job xl, 16; Prov. xxxi, 17; but in the case of Solomon it was strength of oppression.

11. "My father hath chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions."

So they would have him drew his people to him by encouraging him to act not as a shepherd of his people, but as a cruel taskmaster, a veritable Egyptian Pharaoh.

12. "So Jeroboam and all the people came to Rehoboam the third day as the king had appointed."

It is a dark day for Israel. They are to hear no comforting words; their yoke is not to be lightened nor their service made easier. And yet this man was king on the throne of David, ruling over the Lord's people.

13. "And the king answered the people roughly."

"Roughly" is the same word that in verse 4 is translated "grievous." Joseph also spoke "roughly" to his brethren (Gen. xlii, 7, 30), but in his case it was only outward roughness, yet well deserved, while back of it there was forgiveness and love.

14. "And spake to them after the counsel of the young men."

Wicked counsellors are a great curse, and are all in the service, for the time at least, of the first wicked counselor, who in the garden led Adam and Eve astray. It is bad enough when friends give evil counsel, but how much worse when one's own mother is the evil counselor (Gen. xxvii, 13; II Chron. xxii, 3).

15. "The cause was from the Lord."

Back of all these apparently ordinary circumstances God was working. He cannot do evil, but He often permits evil to take its course, and yet overrules all for the good of His people. Again in verse 24 we read concerning the conduct of Rehoboam and its results, "This thing is from me." It is a fearful thing to refuse to obey God and walk in the truth, for that lays us open to the possibility of His sending us strong delusion that we should believe a lie (II Thess. ii, 11). There is much in the Bible about evil from the Lord, as in the following texts: Judg. ix, 23; xiv, 4; I Sam. ii, 25; xvi, 14; II Chron. xviii, 22; xxii, 7; Isa. xix, 14; xlv, 7; Amos iii, 6; but it will always be found that the person or persons have deliberately turned away from God, and the evil that overtakes them is the result of their own doings, which God permits to come to them because they will not have His love and care (I Kings xi, 11).

16. "All Israel saw that the king hearkened not unto them."

Then they departed to their tents and made Jeroboam their king; there was none that followed the house of David but the tribe of Judah only. And when Rehoboam would have gone forth to subdue the rebels God by His servant forbade him, and he had to be content to have it so (vs. 20-24). Thus the highly privileged nation were divided because of their sins, and to this day they have never been as a whole nation reunited. We shall see as we go on in our studies that the revolting tribes grew worse and worse, wandering farther and farther from God, until after more than 200 years their iniquity came to a head and they went into captivity, from which they have not yet returned.

17. "But as for the children of Israel which dwelt in the cities of Judah, Rehoboam reigned over them."

Not for his sake, nor Solomon's, but for David's sake was this one tribe left him (xi, 13, 36); and because the scepter should not depart from Judah till Shiloh should come (Gen. xlix, 10).

A DYSPEPTIC'S ARGUMENT
Is a growl, and that growl marks the limit of argument with him. The best way to get him to try a medicine would be to advise against it—but notice how different his tone after using Burdock Blood Bitters.
"I have suffered with Dyspepsia for the last two years. Not long ago I commenced taking B.B.B. I am now on the second bottle and feel like a new man. G. KNOX, 12 Sherwood Ave., Binghamton, N. Y."
REPEATED TESTS WITH UNIFORM SUCCESS prove the fact that Burdock Blood Bitters will cure dyspepsia. The reason is plain, it tones the stomach to natural action and keeps the sluice ways of the system free from clogging impurities.
"I have been troubled with dyspepsia and heart disease for nine years and found no relief until I tried Burdock Blood Bitters. Now I am well after taking two bottles.
MRS. ETTIE FRAZIER, Bowne, Mich."

The figure 9 in our dates will make a long stay. No man or woman now living will ever date a document without using the figure 9. It stands in the third place in 1890, where it will remain for years and then move up to second place in 1900, where it will rest for one hundred years.
There is another "9" which has also come to stay. It is unlike the figure 9 in our dates in the respect that it has already moved up to first place, where it will permanently remain. It is called the "No. 9" High Arm Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine.
The "No. 9" was endorsed for first place by the experts of Europe at the Paris Exposition of 1889, where, after a severe contest with the leading machines of the world, it was awarded the only Grand Prize given to family sewing machines, all others on exhibit having received lower awards of gold medals, etc. The French Government also recognized its superiority by the decoration of Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, President of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor.
The "No. 9" is not an old machine improved upon, but is an entirely new machine, and the Grand Prize at Paris was awarded it as the grandest advance in sewing machine mechanism of the age. Those who buy it can rest assured, therefore, of having the very latest and best.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.
It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.
The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.
WHAT IT CURES.
All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.
It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.
Over 40 Years,
This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.
Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

THE HERALD FOR 1891.

The HERALD is still in the ring, fully prepared to fill its accustomed place during the year of grace 1891. The 15th day of November last completed a cycle of sixteen years under its present management, and Providence permitting, the "old reliable" is likely to sail right along under the same pilot for sixteen years to come.

It is needless to inform the public what to expect in our columns during the ensuing twelve months. The general policy of the paper is well known and its record has been made. First and foremost, it will aim to be a first-class local newspaper, to act as a faithful chronicler of all local happenings of importance within the territory of its circulation. In this respect it will continue to lead all competitors.

Recognizing the stringency of the times caused by excessive taxation, we shall endeavor to accommodate the necessities of our patrons by placing our rates at the lowest possible point, and our terms for 1891 have been adjusted with that end in view.

OFFER NO. ONE.

We have made arrangements with that wide-awake illustrated farm magazine, The American Farmer, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., and read by nearly 200,000 farmers, by which that great publication will be mailed direct to the address of any of our subscribers who will pay up all arrearages and a year in advance. The subscription price of the American Farmer is $1.00 per year. It costs you nothing. The two papers at our full rate of $1.50 per year.

OFFER NO. TWO.

The Great Divide is the title of a new monthly magazine published at Denver, Colorado, which has already taken a position among the best periodicals of this country. Our Club offer with the Great Divide is the most liberal one ever extended to our patrons. The Magazine for one year, the HERALD for one year and the Gemstone Cabinet for a premium will be given for $2.00. A sample copy of the magazine and a specimen of the Gemstone Cabinet can be seen at this office.

OFFER NO. THREE.

We offer reduced rates for the HERALD alone when payment is made strictly in advance. We earnestly urge upon our patrons the benefits of this plan. Call at our office in January, pay for your paper one year in advance, and thus secure the lowest cash rates. By so doing you will help yourself and help us at the same time. We will furnish the HERALD alone

WITHIN LENAWEE COUNTY

One year, cash in advance, for	$1.10
If paid after thirty days,	1.25
If paid after three months,	1.50

BEYOND LENAWEE COUNTY

One year, cash in advance,	$1.25
If paid after thirty days,	1.50

OUR CLUB LIST.

The papers named in the list below can be taken in connection with the HERALD at the lowest club rates. Subscriptions are also taken for all publications, but we have special terms with those named in the list. Sample copies can be seen at this office.

If it amuses the Eastern papers to poke fun at Chicago no one will begrudge them their sport. But when Chicago pulls off her jacket and settles down to business she gets there just the same.

MASONIC WEEK.

Last week was quite a notable one with the Masonic organizations here in Tecumseh. The Chapter, the Eastern Star and Blue Lodge all held large meetings, in two of which the regular annual election occurred.

The regular election of Chapter No. 42, R. A. M., took place on Wednesday evening, which resulted in the choice of the following list of officers for the coming year:

H. P.—J. F. Hicks.
K.—P. S. McKinnon.
S.—J. H. Smith.
C. H.—A. James.
P. S.—S. P. Hosmer.
R. A. C.—B. J. Garlinghouse.
Treasurer—J. Root.
Sec'y—C. A. Wright.
M. 3 V.—C. F. Patterson.
M. 2 V.—J. A. Boyd.
M. 1 V.—Thos. Kyle.
Stewards—W. C. Jordan, Jas. Elliott.
Sentinel—J. I. Werner.

After the election and installation were over, the High Priest, J. F. Hicks, was treated to a surprise that was not down on the bills. Ever since the Chapter was resuscitated through his efficient work the companions of the Chapter have held a grudge against him and P. S. McKinnon, acting under authority of his associates, proceeded then and there to give the High Priest a caning. The instrument he used was an elegant gold headed cane, the head containing an appropriate inscription.

The presentation remarks were made in Mr. McKinnon's usual happy manner, and the High Priest was taken wholly by surprise. He rallied, however, sufficiently to return his thanks in a few heart felt words for the kindness thus showered upon him by his companions. An open meeting and social followed after which the members of the Chapter with a number of invited guests partook of a bounteous banquet in the ante-rooms. The Chapter is now in a flourishing condition.

On Thursday evening the Eastern Star held their last regular session of the year. At the close of the secret session the meeting resolved itself into an open social, and a large number of outside guests enjoyed a very pleasant hour in social converse with the members of the Lodge. A fine collation was then served to those in attendance which fitly terminated the exercises of the evening. The Star is in fine working order, and is continually adding new names to its membership roll.

On Friday evening, Tecumseh Lodge No. 69, F. & A. M. held their regular election. The following officers were chosen:

W. M—J. H. Smith.
S. W—P. S. McKinnon.
J. W—B. J. Garlinghouse.
Sec'y—Alfred James.
Treas—T. D. Mark.
S. D—C. F. Patterson.
J. D—G. B. Garlinghouse.
Stewards—Dr. O. Q. Jones, Jas. H. Aten.
Tyler—John I. Werner.

It was the largest annual meeting held by the Blue Lodge in recent years and the election passed off very harmoniously.

After the election the Lodge was closed and about twenty-five outside guests were admitted, after which an open installation of the officers elect was held, conducted by Past Master Geo. S. Wilson. The brothers and visitors then repaired to the dining room where the stewards had provided a sumptuous banquet and the third table was set before all had been provided for. The company broke up at 1 ate hour, the visitors declaring that they had been royally entertained.

The Blue Lodge has been doing excellent work, under its present officers, resulting in a rapid increase in membership, and the fact that most of the leading officers were re-elected, proves conclusively that the officials now filling the chairs have the confidence of the brotherhood. Truly, last week was an eventful season with the brethren of the mystic tie.

A LUCKY LADY.

MILAN, Tenn, Sept. 23rd.

Mrs. G. W. Combs, Humbolt. Tenn. a former resident of this place, has recently fallen heir to half a million dollars left by her Scotch grandfather. She has forwarded proof of her relationship to the lawyers and will receive her inheritance to day.—Evening Mail and Express, New York, Sept. 23rd, 1890.

We are Mrs. Comb's lawyers and by her seeing our advertisement becam the agents of her good fortune. Wn have number of similar claims in our hands and expect to gain them If your ancestors came from the old country write us and inclose 25 cents for reply. There are more than half a billion dollars in Great Brittan alone, unclaimed, which rightly belong to people in the United States.

EUROPEAN CLAIMS AGENCY.

I suffered with rheumatism in the shoulder for months and the only thing I found that did me any good was Salvation Oil. It cured me, and I recommend it to all sufferers with said disease.

N. ULMAN, 1 Pearl Street, Baltimore, Md.

"Now is the winter of of our discontent made glorious summer" by Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This wonderful medicine so invigorates the system and enriches the blood that weather becomes positively enjoyable. Arctic explorers would do well to make a note of this.

THE CHRISTMAS PARTY.

The sixth annual Christmas party, given at the Opera House on Christmas night, eclipsed all its predecessors. The committee of arrangements set to work with that determination and their most sanguine wishes were fully realized. The hall was very neatly decorated. Evergreen festoons were suspended across the room above the gallery and the motto, "Merry Christmas," in large, fancy letters, appeared on the front drop scene over the stage. Tony Leon's full orchestra, of eight pieces, furnished the music, and better dance music was never heard in the Opera House. The concert prior to the dance was a fine program, about one hour in length, which was listened to by a crowded gallery. About sixty dance tickets were sold, giving a good crowd, and yet not enough to overcrowd the floor. Promptly at the appointed hour the grand march filed on, led by Mr. Will H. Hayden and Miss Etta Thorpe, and for twenty minutes the dancers went through the intricate evolutions of a beautiful march. Mr. Hayden and Miss Thorpe proved themselves fully equal to their new and delicate position. At the conclusion of the march the dancers formed for the first quadrille, and from that hour until the "wee sma' " hours of the morning the Opera House presented a musical and mirthful scene. Mrs. R. C. VanAntwerp furnished refreshments at Armory Hall, so that nothing was lacking in that portion of the entertainment. Adrian and Clinton were both well represented at the party, while the dancers of Tecumseh were all in attendance. It was certainly an elegant party and the young men who assumed the responsibility of the affair have abundant cause to congratulate themselves over its unqualified success.

TOM NAVIN A FREE MAN.

JACKSON, Dec. 30.—Ex-Mayor Thomas J. Navin, of Adrian, who was convicted in that city some seven years ago for forging mortgages on the Clark estate, is to be pardoned to-day from the state prison here, where he is doing ten years' time, on his plea of guilty.

Upon regaining his freedom he will enter the law office of John Atkinson, of Detroit, and practice law.

Col. P. J. Sheahan, of Detroit, Navin's brother-in-law, accompanied by John Navin, of Adrian, visited the prison on Sunday, and had a long talk with the prisoner.

The lawyers are convinced in their own mind that in six years from the time of Navin's involuntary return to the state his forgeries would be outlawed, unless a new complaint was lodged against him.

The six years will be up March 12, 1891. It is alleged that the heirs of the Clark estate have promised not to prosecute him again.—Adrian Times.

WILL BE THERE ON TIME.

We clip the following from the Newaygo Democrat:

During the centennial year Dan Soper was asked if he was going to Washington. "No," said Dan, promptly. "I never will go to Washington until we get a Democratic president." In 1884 he was a delegate to the national convention and voted for Cleveland. He attended the inauguration, and has visited Washington three times since. He now says he will attend the inauguration of a Democratic president in 1893. Dan has never visited the new capitol building at Lansing, having said he never would until Michigan elected a Democratic governor. Dan will be due at Lansing January 1. He has been in Lansing since his election, however; so "the boys" say.—Detroit Evening News.

"The boys" are mistaken this time. Dan hasn't been there yet, but when the sweet-toned bells ring out the glad announcement of the New Year's advent, our fellow townsman will be on hand as the first Democrat elected to the office of Secretary of State in Michigan since 1852.

Your Red Clover Extract and Red Clover Pills cured me of dyspepsia after all other remedies I could hear of had failed. I have taken half dozen bottles of the Extract and two boxes of Pills, and feel that I am cured. I know that my stomach and bowels have not been in so good and healthy condition for years. I am glad to be able to write you this, and you are at liberty to use it as you may see fit.

FACTS WORTH KNOWING.

In all diseases of the nasal mucous membrane the remedy used must be non-irritating. The medical profession has been slow to learn this. Nothing satisfactory can be accomplished with douches, snuffs, powders or syringes because they are all irritating, do not thoroughly reach the affected surfaces and should be abandoned as worse than failures. A multitude of persons who had for years borne all the worry and pain that catarrh can inflict testify to radical cures wrought by Ely's Cream Balm.

Science Works Wonders.

I had sciatic rheumatism so that I was all drawn over to one side. My hip sank in so that you could lay your hand in the cavity, and I did no work for a year. Nothing did me any good until I tried Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup. Four bottles cured me.

ALBERT KING, Van Wert, Ohio.

STANLEY—REYNOLDS.

The residence of B. F. Reynolds was the scene of a pleasant social event last Wednesday evening, Christmas eve. At about six o'clock the words were pronounced by Rev. G. D. Perry, which made Mr. George J. Stanley, of Raisin, and Miss Nellie Reynolds man and wife. About forty guests, consisting only of relatives and intimate friends of the contracting parties, were present, and everything went off as merry as the proverbial marriage bell.

The groom is a son of one of Raisin's prominent citizens—Mr. Fleming A. Stanley—and is a young man of sterling integrity and worth. In his choice of a life companion he has taken one of Tecumseh's most agreeable young ladies and one who will strive to make life's journey both pleasant and prosperous. The presents received by the bride were many and valuable, as well as useful. Mr. and Mrs. Stanley drove to Raisin that night, where they will reside on their father's farm, and took breakfast in their own home, already furnished, the next morning.

The bride has resided in Tecumseh for several years and has always been a favorite in our social circles. The groom, though not so well known here, is highly esteemed by all who are favored with his acquaintance. They enter upon their matrimonial duties accompanied with the best wishes and congratulations of a host of friends.

THE HOME COMFORT.

AMONG the many new advertisements in this week's issue of THE HERALD, will be found one of the illustrations of the "Home Comfort steel range" manufactured only by the Wrought Iron Range Campany, of St. Louis, Mo. This Company, established in 1864, is the largest range manufactory in the world and has a paid up capital of $500,000,00; its stability and standing in the commercial world is beyond question. Some idea may be had as to the amount of business done by it, by considering the following figures for a moment: In making Home Comforts there are used anually 225,000 pounds of copper, 3,000,000 pounds of the finest quality of the open hearth steel, 4,600,000 pounds of the best malleable Iron that can be made, 1,325,000 pounds of grates, red plates and fire linings, $36,000,00 worth of asbestos mill board, $5,000,00 worth of rivets and bolts. In their making and sale there are employed nearly 1,500 men, mostly men of families receiving prompt and liberal compensation for their services, many o them for years trusted and faithful employees and enjoying the confidence of the company to the fullest extent. The Home Comfort is having an immense sale. The general agent of the company will make Tecumseh his head quarters for the next few months.

"It is Good Work to Give Health."

The only remedy for blood disorders is one that will expel the germs of disease, and make the blood pure and rich. That is best effected by Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Prof. E. A. Wilson will hold a series of township institutes during the year 1891. The first one will be held at Tecumseh on Saturday, Jan. 10th. See the program elsewhere.

The Masquerade Dance at Armory Hall on Christmas eve., called out a good crowd. Some of the costumes were very fantastic. A pleasant evening was enjoyed by the participants.

Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Temple of St. Paul, Minn., are the guests of S. W. Temple's family this week. We are pleased to learn that Herr is doing well in his Western home, having a large business as an expert accountant.

The Mothers meeting of the W. C. T. U. will occur at their rooms, Friday, Jan. 2d, at 3 o'clock, P. M. It being the first meeting in the New Year we should be glad to welcome the ladies of the town, especially the mothers.

Christmas was more generally observed in Tecumseh than usual this year. Most of the stores were closed a portion of the day. Family parties were numerous, and many old Tecumsehites were here from abroad to participate in their Christmas cheer with former friends. Everybody, both old and young, seemed to enjoy themselves.

W. J. Ide's residence was the scene of a pleasant family reunion on Christmas Day. In addition to home relatives the following guests were present from abroad. Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Stewart, Dr. and Mrs. J. B. Haynes and daughters of Dundee; Mr. and Mrs. A. Hamilton of Raisin; O. A. Haynes and family of Adrian; L. M. Ide and family and Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Ide of Detroit.

For some time The Detroit News has been hinting that it had a surprise in store for its readers. Now the announcement has been made that they will publish a beautiful and useful magazine every three months, and present it free to every one of their regular subscribers. The magazine will be called "The Quarterly Register of current History," and will contain the history of the whole world with beautiful illustrations. The first issue will appear during the month of February. Full particulars about this new enterprise can be found in The Evening News.

The Christmas tree at the residence of Wm. Owen, was, by the combined efforts of Messrs. Hoeg, Owen and Armstrong families, indeed a beauty. After a bountiful repast, the grandfather, middle age, youth, "kid" and the tottling babe received their many useful and valuable presents, ranging in value from the nickle to many dollars. The innocent hearts shining through the bright eyes of the child, the hearty laugh of the youth and parents, the glistening tear in the grand-parents eye, amply repay for all trouble and they silently offer up a prayer that the little feet may tread in the paths of righteousness. We think if there is any communication between Heaven and earth it is at the family Christmas tree.

Lansing people have decided to give Gov. Luce a public reception, in the armory, Tuesday evening. Gov. Winans and other prominent Michigan people will be invited. The affair will be purely non-partizan, and is intended as a tribute to the Governor from his many personal friends at the capital.

Uncle Tom's Cabin played to a slim house Saturday evening. The play was well put on however and the company was a strong one, but we venture to say that every man, woman and child in Tecumseh has seen it during the past ten years, and 'tis becoming an old story. The company deserve a rousing house.

The Christmas tree at the Presbyterian church on Christmas eve., for the benefit of the Sunday School, drew a large gathering. Two large evergreens set in the center of the rostrum were loaded down with gifts from Santa Claus. A short musical and literary program was presented and then the tree was stripped of its delicious fruit, to the edification of the little ones.

There is a war on between the Clinton Local and Jacques Edwards, the French book peddler, who has been traveling about the country. The Frenchman uses the columns of the Manchester Enterprise in which to get even with the Local man, and the horizon to the north of us is lurid with the rhetorical pyrotechnics that emanate from each party.—Adrian Times.

Christmas eve at the M. E. Church was duly celebrated for the pleasure of both the little ones and the older ones also. A mammoth evergreen tree was set in the center of the pulpit rostrum which was loaded down with Christmas gifts. The task of gathering the fruit was no slight one for it took nearly two hours to clean the tree. A pleasing program was rendered previous to the distribution of the gifts.

The Baptist church had something new on Christmas eve. Instead of a tree they had a Christmas ship. A large platform was made extending over the rostrum and the corner pews on the west side, on which was placed the "Ino" with full sails spread, which were loaded down with Christmas gifts. Old Santa Claus was present in person and a "jolly tar" to help distribute the presents. An interesting program preceeded the distribution and the fun then proceeded until a later hour.

The latest discovered metal, lighter than hard wood and stronger than steel. The Michigan Stove Co., after a series of scientific experiments, are enabled to make an admixture of this wonderful metal with their regular high grade iron, with the result of producing smooth castings, additional strength, and preventing cracking; thereby rendering stoves made of this admixture more durable than WROUGHT IRON or STEEL. The "GARLAND," which are the product of this Co., are the only stoves made having that advantage. War of Elements

New York Has a Heavy Snow Storm.

STREET CLEANING DEPARTMENT WORKS ALL NIGHT

To Clear the Thoroughfares of the Beautiful—Canada Catching it Now—Trains Badly Delayed—The Blizzard Elsewhere.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—The snow storm of yesterday greatly delayed the incoming mails, and also the mails dispatched from this city. The southern mail, due at 9:50 last night, got in at 6:45 this morning. The southwestern mail, which is usually very heavy and comes in over the New York and Pennsylvania railroad, did not reach here until 12:30, instead of 4:17 p. m. yesterday. The Boston mail, which should have reached here at 4:20 this morning, did not materialize until 7:45 o'clock. The western mail, via the New York Central, which should have got into the office at 5:45 a. m., was over three hours behind time. All the other mails were from two to three hours late.

The street cleaning department was at work all night, removing the snow from the streets. About 900 men and 400 carts were employed. The snow has been removed from Broadway and all the principal thoroughfares of the city.

The sergeant in charge of the signal service office says: "The two storms—the one from the northwest and the one from the south—happily gave the city a wider berth than seemed probable from our observations yesterday. The southern one especially, from which we had most to fear, was borne further out to sea and to eastward of us than was at first anticipated. In other words the angle of the two converting storms widened sufficiently to leave us comparatively unscathed." I was quite right, however, in predicting the conjunction of the two storms somewhere in or near the St. Lawrence region. They united at about 2 o'clock this morning, and Montreal and Quebec are both feeling the fury of a blizzard. The wind is very high at those points and the snow very deep. The blizzard will probably rage in Canada today and tonight, and then pass off the shore over the ocean.

There is also a heavy snow throughout New England, with winds of from 30 to 45 miles an hour.

The sleet, in which, at 6:20 last evening the snow ended—thirteen inches in all having fallen—itself ceased at 2:45 o'clock in the morning. At 5 o'clock the sky cleared. At 8 a. m. the temperature was 25 degrees. The velocity of the wind here today is 26 miles an hour. It will increase towards night.

And Still Some.

BOSTON, Dec. 29.—The mail train on the Boston & Albany was two and a half hours late, owing to the storm. Western trains have not been heard from, and their locations are unknown here. A railway mail service official reports more snow between Springfield and Worcester than anywhere else on the line, and more snow in Boston than in New York. The Boston and Maine Montreal express was three hours late. On the Lowell division a local train was derailed at Somerville, holding a dozen local trains about two hours.

Deep at Plymouth.

PLYMOUTH, MASS., Dec 29.—From 12 to 14 inches of snow fell here. The Montreal express from Boston was delayed nine hours, and all local and freight trains are from one to ten hours behind time.

Lawyer Butner in Court.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—Lawyer William H. Buttner, the vender of fraudulent Cook county, Illinois, divorces, was brought to Jefferson Market court Saturday and charged with grand larceny in accepting money for the spurious divorce papers. He pleaded not guilty and demanded an examination. A time was set for the hearing and the bail fixed at $3,000. In default of bail Buttner was committed to prison.

HELD FOR ARSON.

A Johnstown Man Arrested on Serious Charges.

JOHNSTOWN, O., Dec. 29.—Ezra Tompkins was yesterday arrested on a warrant sworn out by Royal Kasson for the burning of his (Tompkins) shops and William Annetts saloon. Tompkins' bond was fixed at one thousand dollars. On failure of securing the proper persons to go on his bond, he was sent to the county jail at Newark, to await his hearing, which is set for next Tuesday, when some very racy developments are looked for.

WANT BETTER WAGES.

Engineers on a Branch of the Big Four Dissatisfied.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 29.—The engineers on the Cincinnati, Wabash and Michigan railroad are dissatisfied with the present pay, and are formulating a petition to present to President Ingalls, asking that the schedule paid on other parts of the Big Four system be given them. It is thought the trouble will be amicably adjusted.

FRIGHTFUL EXPLOSION

Wrecks Many Buildings at Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 29.—By an explosion of a boiler in Lowenstein's butcher shop on Central avenue, four buildings were completely wrecked. Bertha Gray was instantly killed, two persons are reported fatally wounded, and a number of others are said to have been injured more or less seriously.

A Freak of Nature.

SPRINGFIELD, O., Dec. 29.—J. H. Smith, of Enon, this county, has a phenomenon in the shape of a calf born several days ago without eyeballs. It has eyelids and sockets, but there are no eyeballs or anything resembling them. The animal is a weakling, but is growing stronger daily and is is likely to live. It will not nurse naturally from the cow.

Of Course He Was.

ZANESVILLE, O., Dec. 29.—Joseph Casey, the tough in the employ of J. M. Baing who assaulted C. O. Shrydck, editor of the Sunday News, was fined $50 and sent to the work house for thirty days by the mayor.

A TOTAL WRECK.

BIG TOWBOAT SINKS IN THE OHIO RIVER.

The Crew With Difficulty Save Themselves From a Watery Grave—Loss Nearly $15,000.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 29.—The steamer James A. Blackmore was sunk during a heavy wind storm near Buck's Landing yesterday afternoon. It is thought the boat is a total wreck. She was taking in tow a lot of empty barges, and had one on each side of her, when a gust of wind blew against the vessel with such force that she careened on her side. The cabin parted from the hull and the boat went down. It was with difficulty that the crew, which consisted of Captain Doods, eight deck hands, four firemen, two engineers and two pilots, saved themselves. The loss is between $10,000 and $15,000. Insured for $5,000. The Blackmore was owned by Nockinley and Doods, of Pittsburg.

THE WOLF AT THE DOOR.

A Thousand Discharged Laborers Suffering.

PORTLAND, ORE., Dec. 29.—Over one thousand of the discharged laborers from the Union Pacific railroad, along Puget Sound, are in the city and their situation is deplorable. Most of them are destitute and are unable to get their money from the contractors, J. H. Smith & Co., which was due on December 26. The contractors have been unable to get the money from the railroad company, hence their inability to pay the men. J. H. Smith is now in Omaha endeavoring to secure money from the Union Pacific. He has telegraphed that the company has promised him $300,000, and on this assurance the clamors of the men have for a time been quieted. Many of the laborers are in such desperate straits that their cashing their time checks at 60 per cent.

A Clever Capture.

NEW YORK, Dec. Dec. 29.—On the 30th of November, James T. Hamilton, secretary of the Big Bend mining company, started from this city for his home in Seattle, Washington, having in his possession various stock certificates, the face value of which are over $82,000. While waiting for his train in the Pennsylvania depot at Jersey City, his valise, which contained the stocks and other papers of value, was stolen. The police were informed of the loss and by some very clever detective work succeeded in tracing the thief to Philadelphia, where he was arrested on the 17th of December. The thief, who proved to be Harry Edwards, 24 years of age, of Camden, N. J., confessed his guilt, and was today brought to Jersey City to await trial. All the property, excepting a bank book belonging to Mr. Hamilton has been recovered.

Indiana Divorce Mecca.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Dec. 29.—Dr. Henry Schlieman, the mineral explorer, whose death is reported, came here in 1879, and leased a small house on an obscure street from Hon. William H. English, where he lived for several months. His mission here was to secure a divorce from his wife, a resident of Moscow, Russia, he alleging abandonment. It was explained, however, that she belonged to the orthodox church, and she was afraid to come to America for fear her children would be lost to the faith. Governor Hendricks was one of his attorneys. The divorce law of Indiana was more lax then now, and within twelve months he secured his divorce and immediately left for Greece.

NEW YEARS AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

President Harrison's Reception Will be Popular.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29.—President Harrison's New Year's reception promises to be largely attended. He will be assisted in receiving the guests by Mrs. Harrison, Mrs. Morton and the ladies of the cabinet. The reception will begin at 11 o'clock, when the members of the cabinet and judges of the Supreme Court will be received, followed by the senators and representatives in congress, army and navy officers and others in official position. The public will be received at 12:30 p. m. and the reception will terminate at 2 p. m.

AFTER AN ASSASSIN.

Detectives Pursuing the Slayer of General Seliverskoff.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—French detectives have arrived in this city. It is said that they are on the track of Padlewski, the assassin of General Seliverskoff, whom they suppose to be in hiding in London.

On the other hand it is reported by those in smypathy with Padlewski that he has sailed for America, having embarked on a steamer at Queenstown.

Big Blaze in Columbus.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 29.—The large bent works of J. W. Dann & Co., in the northeast part of the city, were burned yesterday morning. The fire started in the bottom of an elevator shaft, and was quickly communicated to each of the five floors of the building. The building was filled with finished work, all very inflammable material, and both the structure and its contents were destroyed before the flames could be controlled. The fire was of incendiary origin. Loss $48,000; insurance $30,000, placed in twenty different companies. This is the third time that the Dann works have been destroyed by fire.

SHOT DEAD.

An Ironton, O., Lawyer Meets a Sad Death.

IRONTON, O., Dec. 29.—Harry Williams, a prominent lawyer of this city, was accidentally shot and killed yesterday. While cleaning his gun the trigger caught and the load of buckshot was discharged into his head, death being instantaneous.

Prominent Springfield Man Dead.

SPRINGFELD, O., Dec. 29.—William C. Frye, an aged and highly respected citizen, was found dead in bed by his daughter, Mrs. George Collett, wife of the county treasurer. Physicians report that he died from a rush of blood to the head, probably produced by too hearty a diet Christmas.

The Bank Statement.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—The bank statement shows the banks have increased in reserve funds the past week $3,226,275, and now hold in excess of legal requirements $7,725,175.

Starving in Soudan

Queen Victoria's Interest in the Irish Crisis.

"DARKEST ENGLAND" READS BETWEEN THE LINES.

Attack of English Newspapers on the Salvation Army—Gladstone to the Orangemen—Death of Doctor Schlieman—Other News From Foreign Lands.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—The London Daily News correspondent at Suakim telegraphs today that the full magnitude of the famine that for eighteen months has ravaged the eastern Soudan can never be known. It is only where Europeans have been present that some detailed information has reached the outside world as to the terrible condition of the people. The extent of the affected region is very great; in fact trustworthy native accounts indicate that there is not a town nor district from the borders of Egypt proper to Sennaar in the south, from Darfoor in the west through Kordofan to the Nile provinces and east to the sea, that has not been during the past year and a half more than decimated by starvation. Not only the inhabitants of the plains have suffered, but the misery has also reached the mountaineers, from the Beni Amer country ty Abyssinia. The chief causes of the famine are described to be:

1. The insecurity of property, the natives being on this account afraid to place too much ground under cultivation.

2. The partial destruction by drought of the crops of 1889, the supply of grain being very deficient.

3. The total failure of the winter crops of 1889–90, the locusts having destroyed nearly every green thing.

The cotton crop of Tokar and Duroor was also devoured. The inhabitants of the country had to rely on the coast ports for supplies, which were released by the Egyptian government with a spare hand, causing unnecessary suffering to thousands of people. The oldest native inhabitant never saw the locusts so thick as they have been this year. The country was visited eight times by vast clouds of these ravicious insects. The victims of the famine are so numerous that it not an exaggeration to say that some sub-tribes of the Hadendowas and Amarars have ceased to exist. The awful experince of the people has not, however, lessened their determination to maintain their freedom. The greatest sufferers among the tribes men have been the families of those who in 1884 and 1885 arrayed themselves in battle against the English, Colonial and Indian forces and whose bones are still bleaching on the Plains, in silent protest against the English attempt to place the people again under Egyptian rule. Now many widows and children lie unburied beneath these breadwinners, starvation having found them easy victims. In some places in the Soudan the poorer classes were forced to eat cats, dogs, rats and lizards, all vegetable food having disappeared. There have also been many undoubted cases of cannibalism, freshly interred bodies of the dead having been exhumed to satisfy the cravings of hunger. Here and there a whole village is found deserted, with skeletons of the dead remaining in some of the houses. The wealthy fared hardly better than the poor, as riches could not procure food that did not exist. To add to the terrors of the situation, small-pox broke out and spread over nearly the entire famine district. For the past two months there has been some improvement, and by spring the people will probably have regained their normal condition; but they will not forget that the British and Egyptian authorities, by closing the gates of Suakim against them, are responsible for their terrible sufferings.

Queen Victoria is keenly interested in the Irish crisis, and received numerous telegrams regarding the Kilkenney campaign, while it was in progress. Her Majesty, with her fifty-three years of official experience, has, of course, a range of personal knowledge in public affairs that no minister can equal, and the remarkable accuracy of her memory enables her to illustrate the events of the present by a minute comparison with the past. It is fortunate that she has permanently near her some staunch Liberals, otherwise her impression of current transactions might become rather one-sided, for her journalistic pabulum consists of the Times, the St. James Gazette and the Globe. The Pall Mall Gazette and the Daily News enter the Castle by stealth in the surreptitious pockets of Liberal members of the household, who, it must be admitted, are not so numerous as they are influential.

The St. James Gazette has joined the Times in the crusade against the Salvation army; for the attack upon the "Darkest England" scheme is only a pretext for the inauguration of a warfare against the army itself. The Gazette repeats variations of all the allegations and innuendoes of the Times, and further promises to publish the results of recent investigations of its own into the inner history of the army. These onslaughts have had the effect of greatly increasing the zeal of the salvationists, who have long been without the spur which persecution affords, and they are now rallying to General Booth's support with revived fervor.

The Orangemen of Belfast recently forwarded to Mr. Gladstone a series of resolutions denouncing the home rule agitation, together with a letter bearing on the same subject. Mr. Gladstone has replied in a mild and conciliatory way, saying that he is unable to abandon the hope that they will yet make up their minds to follow the example of their forefathers who obtained home rule a century ago.

SECRETARY PROCTOR'S WIFE

Thrown From a Sleigh—Racing in Cutters.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29.—The wife of Secretary Proctor and his two sons were thrown from a sleigh Saturday while the horses attached to it were running away. Mrs. Proctor and her sons were not hurt but the driver was badly injured about the chest and was also knocked senseless. The sleigh was demolished.

A sleighing carnival took place on Pennsylvania avenue in the afternoon, and "speeding" was allowed between 4:30 and 5:30 p. m. The sidewalks of the famous thoroughfare were crowded with spectators, who cheered the drivers.

A Sound Legal Opinion.

E. Bainbridge, Munday Esq., County Atty., Clay Co., Tex. says: "Have used Electric Bitters with most happy results. My brother also was very low with Malarial Fever and Jaundice, but was cured by timely use of this medicine. Am satisfied Electric Bitters saved his life."

Mr. D. I. Wilcoxson, of Horse Cave, Ky., adds a like testimony, saying: He positively believes he would have died, had it not been for Electric Bitters.

The best medical authorities say the proper way to treat catarrh is to take a constitutional remedy, like Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

ESTATE OF JANE WIGGINS.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss. At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the city of Adrian, on Tuesday, the 23d day of December, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety.

Present Richard R. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Jane Wiggins, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Daniel Wiggins, Administrator upon the estate of said deceased, alleging that the funeral expenses and debts of said deceased and the expenses of administration thus far incurred have been fully paid, and that he is now ready to close said estate and to render his final administration account, and praying that said account may be allowed, and that the residue of said estate may be assigned and distributed according to the statute in such case made and provided, and that he may be discharged and his bond cancelled, and for such other order and decree as to this Court shall seem proper.

It is ordered, that Monday, the 19th day of January, 1890, at 9 o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

RICHARD R. ROBBINS, Judge of Probate.

DR. J. H. REYNOLDS

Late a member of the Board of Examining Surgeons at Adrian, Mich., and who has examined over two thousand soldiers for pensions, will hereafter devote two hours each day to

PENSION BUSINESS

The Doctor was a soldier and is a pensioner, and with his five years' experience as Examining Surgeon for Pensions, believes he can make it PAY YOU to come and see him.

He knows the RATE on every known disability

Knows what Diseases or Disabilities are the results of any other.

Knows (as every EXAMINING SURGEON will tell you) that many men do not draw what the law allows them, because their claims are not presented in proper shape.

Knows how to put your claim in such shape that you will get pay for ALL results of the disease or wound for which you are pensioned.

Knows all the recent decisions made by Commissioner and how to give you the advantage of them in dollars.

Knows that some recent rulings are of vital importance to many pensioners, if their claims are only properly presented.

Knows whether you are entitled to Rerating, and how to get it.

I charge just the legal fees because I earn them ALWAYS BRING YOUR CERTIFICATE WITH YOU.

If you want the benefit of a Pension while you live go and see Dr. Reynolds.

I can get you from $2 to $6 more per month under the new law than other agents.

To any person examined by the board; at Adrian, before Aug. 1, 1889, I have something of importance to tell you.

Come and let us examine you (no charge) and I will tell you all about it. About one-third of all the soldiers examined while I was on the board were rated for disabilities not claimed. You had better come and see me about it.

Correspondence solicited, with stamp for reply 15 East Maumee-st., Adrian, Mich.

ATTENTION, Soldiers & Sailors,

Under the new pension law just passed by Congress all Soldiers and Sailors who served 90 days in the Rebellion, and who are disabled from any cause permanently, (need not have originated in the service,) are entitled to a pension of from $6 to $12. All soldiers' widows, minor children and dependent parents come under this law. Being located at the Capital near the U. S. Pension office, we can give our personal attention to your claim and thus ascertain any defect quickly and supply the same. Write for blanks. Give full description of service and disabilities.

THE FARMERS' PAGE.

TO OUR FARMER FRIENDS.

We design devoting this page hereafter to the farming community, and shall make a specialty of Alliance and Grange news. Communications are invited from Lenawee County Grangers and Patrons. The HERALD believes in free speech and fair play towards all classes. Local items in regard to the workings of these two orders in Lenawee County will be cheerfully received and published, if kept within reasonable limits. We wish our farmer patrons to make this page their own, and to be free to express their views on all subjects. Send in your letters freely, but be brief.

FARMERS' PROGRESS.

W. A. Morrison, of Wisconsin, says in the N. E. Farmer: In this day of organization among farmers, if we hope for beneficial results we must go at it in a business way. The farmers' gathering must be an educational factor, that will equip him, make him a better farmer, better citizen, better business man, and a hustler who has been educated by contact with his fellow farmer and the world, which will give him knowledge and a breadth of understanding that will make him proud of his calling and not a football for politicians. Equip him with these capabilities and practicalities and make him an educated man of the world, build him up into a thinker, instead of a follower of vagaries and non-essentials; and you will have so fitted and prepared him that he will lead and have a following too, not because he is a farmer, but because he respects his business, and is level headed, and has extended his horizon; and this alone will place him side by side with business and professional men in legislative halls and places of trust, for merit in him will be recognized as well as in other vocations.

EDUCATION NEEDED.

The sentiment regarding the educational advantages of the farmers' organizations, and the need of such education among farmers, recently set forth in your columns, I wish to endorse. In fact this is almost a solemn matter. With the stupendous power which organization brings to this large body of citizens, is there not the utmost need of enlightenment regarding the conditions which affect, not one or two classes, but all? I have no fear that the farmers will err wilfully, but it is possible that they may do so unintentionally. Lack of information begets prejudice, but a definite understanding usually secures fairness. The recent election of a person to judgeship in Kansas who knew nothing of law can be easily overlooked when it is considered that his supporters scarcely hoped for his election from the incipiency of the movement; but farmers must not get hold of the idea that knowledge and fitness are secondary qualifications in those they select for public trusts.

The best cure for mistakes of all kinds is education, and the first step to the latter is its appreciation. This, I think, the present movement will stimulate. The very fact that farmers are quite isolated as a class serves to diminish their sympathy toward other classes. They have been "out of touch," so to speak, in the ages past; hence they have missed this educating influence, and its salutary influence has not been felt reciprocally by other classes. We need to get nearer together, and all will respect one another better. Then let every one inform himself, as best he can, upon all matters of interest. The winter months are at hand and there will be much spare time before spring, which if partly devoted to this purpose, will have a beneficial effect. If you do not live too far from the postoffice, subscribe for a daily newspaper for two or three months during the winter. The volume of reading matter will be very great for the price, and the insight of the world which such a course of reading will give one, if faithfully followed up, will open his eyes wide. By taking a daily one gets a connected whole concerning transpiring events which can hardly be derived from a weekly. This is a much bigger and more active world than many of us farmers suppose it to be, and the more we know of its important happenings the better qualified we shall be to uphold the right and "right the wrongs."

It is well to read largely of that which pertains to farming and stock raising, but in order that one's sphere of usefulness may be broadened he should be informed upon all matters. With such farmers in our organizations we have nothing to fear but more to hope from them than from any other class of industrial workers; and this is the safest way to combat any preposterous theories that may clamor for consideration by our farmers' organizations.

The price of potatoes this year makes anything concerning that crop interesting, and facilitating their cultivation should not be overlooked.

FARMERS' ALLIANCE

NEWS OF THE MOVEMENT.

From amidst the wheat blockades of California, Washington and Oregon the toilers in the cities on the Pacific coast evolve a plan of relief similar to the sub-treasury plan.

Foreign capitalists now own over 20,000,000 acres of land in the United States. Let every patriotic American citizen ponder over what this means and where it will lead to if not stopped.

Alliance principles enacted into law will benefit the masses. It might not be so pleasant for the money sharks to carry on an extortionate business; but it's not going to rob them, as the present system empowers them to do with us.—Home Rule.

If you wish to get a glance of the recent progress of Eastern profit-makers, take one of the trust companies. In seventy-five years its capital and deposits rose to $12,000,000. But within the past six months they have increased $10,000,000.—Great West.

For a man who has to get up before daylight and work till after dark, life is of no particular importance. He simply earns enough one day to prepare him to work another. His whole life is spent in want and toil, and such a life is spent without value.—Journal of Industry.

The struggle for existence shall not always prevail. God works through natural laws to bring the race to a condition where suffering and struggle and conflict cease, and harmony, born of co-operation, becomes the ruling law of life.—Sociologic and Co-Operative News.

Kansas, Nebraska and South Dakota under a free vote and fair count would have been carried overwhelmingly by the Independent People's party, but the wealth creators of those States were defrauded of their birthright by chartered assassins of free institutions.—Exchange.

Dispatches from Atlanta, Ga., on December 9, announced that United States Senator-elect John B. Gordon had been initiated as a member of the Farmers' Alliance. The ceremony was performed in room 21 of the Capitol, in the presence of Decatur Alliance and Alliance legislators.

Farmers need never expect to see continuous prosperity while speculators are enabled to accumulate millions in a day gambling on their products, and speculators will continue to gamble on those products as long as the Government is administered by parties which must have boodle to win.—Free Lance.

What a soft set of fools we mortals have been. Formerly if a man wanted to be re-elected to office, all he had to do was to introduce some bill in behalf of down-trodden humanity, have the bill submitted to the committee, who will never report back, because it was not intended that it should; get out and make a few good speeches, in which they tell us of the wrongs that have been committed and point out our duty in big red letters how to vote for him and his party, and back he would go. But it is not so nowadays, don't you see?—Lincoln (Neb.) State Laborer.

Senator Stanford passed by Ogden on his way East. The election in California was a great vindication for him. The voters of the State, by the vote they gave the Stanford legislative ticket, declared that in the quarrel forced upon Senator Stanford by Mr. Huntington they sympathized with the Senator. The legislative ticket was carried by some 38,000 majority, more than 20,000 in excess of the majorities of other successful candidates and 30,000 in excess of the majority of the Governor-elect. The lower house alone of the California Legislature has majority enough, to re-elect the Senator.—Salt Lake Tribune.

Recent elections, as seen in California, where Senator Stanford held his State alone to its moorings of Republicanism, and simply because of his candidature for the Senatorship—show that there is only one man in the United States who can cope with Cleveland. It is needless to name him. His great wealth, his singular generosity and philanthropy, his keen sympathies with the common people, his proposition to lend the people money on land instead of on bonds to the bankers and to Wall street, his free silver coinage proclivities, make Senator Stanford omnipotent on the Pacific slope and the only possible competitor, at this hour, of Grover Cleveland.—Birmingham (Ala.) News.

When the farmers are distressed by the gold basis conspiracy no relief is given; the mortgage takes their home and the sheriff puts them out. When the stock gambling National Bank Association get in a tight place the United States Treasury opens to pay a premium on forged bonds, interest is paid one year or more in advance of maturity, in order to ease the money market for the favored class. When the Government has no longer money to relieve the infamous scoundrels then they are permitted to issue clearing house certificates and use them as money. Possibly the Republican party and the Administration at Washington do not know that the late election is a rebuke to that kind of business.—Three Rivers (Mich.) News Reporter.

Will Take a Hand.

The State Farmers' Alliance of Minnesota, a special from St. Paul says, proposes to have a hand in National politics in 1892. A call has been sent to the county Alliances of the State for a convention of the Minnesota Farmers' Alliance, to be held in St. Paul, December 30. The county Alliances are instructed to call conventions at which each local Alliance is to have three delegates. These county Alliance conventions are to elect delegates to the State convention, who are to be "prepared to stay in St. Paul days if necessary." The object of the State convention, it is understood, is to take steps toward the organization of a National Alliance political party. The Minnesota Alliance polled 58,000 votes for its candidate for Governor six weeks ago, elected one member of Congress, came within 500 votes of electing another, chose over forty members of the Legislature and had majorities over all parties in seventeen counties.

SOUND THE ALARM.

An Array of Issues That Confront the Workingmen and Farmers.

Between the two old parties there are no great issues to-day so far as the management of National affairs is concerned, but the farmers' organizations have given a new face to the campaign by throwing into it the greatest issues of the times, upon the decision of which the whole future of the country is at stake.

Those issues relate to the peace, prosperity, well-being and freedom of the working millions who are to pass judgment upon them. They deal with the original rights of human nature and the accumulating wrongs of human society. They take up the questions of labor, capital and land, of production, distribution and monopoly.

They call a halt to the money power, which has seized the country by the throat, and invoke the strength of the masses, in whose hands is their own redemption.

Issues! Why, when has the present generation ever before had such issues to determine?

They are not made up of individuals. They are not an outgrowth from party machinery or political ambition. They are forced upon the country through circumstances for which no man is responsible, through developments by which all men are profoundly affected.

The people have gradually come to realize the incongruities that are growing up among them; to know that this seizure of the public wealth by gangs of gamblers and monopolists is working to their detriment; to realize that some way of relief must be found from this hideous struggle of labor; to understand that this widening of the social gulf is full of danger to them, and to protest against the impoverishment of the producer for the enrichment of the capitalist. They have been awaking to the fact that things can not go on forever in the present fashion. Their cries have been growing louder year after year, as they approached the perilous edge beyond which lies—who can tell?

"No issues for farmers in the campaign!" Look at the platform. There you will find a score of issues big enough to fill your head, whatever its compass, big enough to call out your energies and put you in an earnest mood of mind.

No issues!

The starving miners of the coal mines are an issue.

The million men vainly striking for better pay are an issue.

The millon women and children fighting the tigers of the factories are an issue.

The howls from the Pennsylvania coal holes are an issue.

The reeking tenements of New York, Chicago and other cities are an issue.

The upheaval of industry and society under the swell of machinery and capital is an issue.

The rack renters are an issue.

The devouring millionaires are an issue.

Wall street is an issue.

The malefactors of monopoly are an issue.

The banking hyenas are an issue.

The land grabbers and grain gamblers are an issue.

The deviltries of our competitive system are an issue.

Gould, Vanderbilt, Armour, Astor, Huntington and all that gang are an issue.

These are among the issues of life or death for the American people brought up in this campaign.

World-shaking are the issues of to-day. Heavy is your responsibility in acting upon them.—West Michigan Patron.

CUMULATIVE TAXATION.

It Would Destroy Trusts, Eliminate Watered Stocks, Break Up Land Monopoly and Equalize Opportunities.

Many of our correspondents have discussed the proposition of establishing a graduated income tax. If such a tax could be assessed and collected with certainty, doubtless it would be found, in a large measure, effective. But a modification of the same idea is offered, which seems to possess all the advantages, without the disadvantages, of the graduated income tax. This is known as "cumulative taxation."

In Kansas an association has been formed for the purpose of promoting this idea, and they are using as a textbook a little pamphlet on the subject written by W. V. Marshall, of Santa Fe, Kan.

In order to get the theory before our readers as succinctly as possible we publish below a form of a bill proposed as a model whereby to enact this system into law. We commend it to our readers as worthy of their perusal and discussion:

Section 1. That the public revenues within this State shall be obtained by a tax upon capital and upon other property, and all capital within this State shall be subject to taxation in the manner prescribed by this act.

Sec. 2. That the term "capital," when used in this act, shall include all property belonging to individuals, firms, corporations or associations, which is used or adapted to be used for the purpose of gain or profit, as land, mines, mineral, merchandise, manufactories, tools, means of transportation, tax sale certificates, judgments, notes, bonds and mortgages, cash on hand or deposit, and every other form of gain-making assets. It shall not include that form of property which has passed the stage of direct money-getting purposes, and is used primarily for the comfort and enjoyment of man, as one's self-occupied dwelling, his furniture, or family library, or ornaments and means of mere taste an pleasure.

Sec. 3. That the capital shall be classified according to the kind or the use to which it is adapted, to-wit: Farm lands, including the animals, shelter, implements, and material employed in farming, shall be classed as farm stock; railroads, including all the means and material employed in transportation, shall be classed as railroad stock; each class of mines, with the property and implements used in mining, shall be classed under appropriate heads, as shall also each class of manufactories and merchandise, and all forms of capital.

Sec. 4. That the respective possessions of the individuals, firms, corporatsons or associations, having taxable property, shall then, besides being listed in the name of the party or parties to whom they belong, thus forming a schedule of valuations separate and distinct as to class as well as to ownership.

Sec. 5. That each distinct quantity of property, as determined by the class to which it belongs and its ownership, shall be subject

A Valuable Discovery,

Dr. Brown Sequard's elixir of youth may be an importent discovery, but every one knows that Dr. Franklin Miles' New Heart Cure certainly is. It has given thousands afflicted serious heart disease a New Lease of Life. Druggists who can observe its effects on many costomers everywhere speak very highly of it. Mr. John Weaver Knightstown Ind., says: "I have sold much of Dr. Miles New Cure and have received many good reports." O. Monroe, of Dunkirk, N. Y., reports large sales. "And the best part of it is every bottle has given satisfaction." Sold and guaranteed by Baker & Hall.

She Was Completely Cured.

A daughter of my customer suffered from suppressed menstruation, and her health was completely wrecked. At my suggestion she used one bottle of Bradfield's Female Regulator, which cured her. J. W. HELLUMS, Water Vally, Miss. Write The Bradfield Reg. Co., Atlanta, Ga., for particulars. Sold by John J. Orr.

A FAMILY JEWEL.

Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., the famous Surgeon and Physician, has sent us a copy of his Book, "How to Cure Kidney, Liver and Blood Disorders." It is a work which should be read in every home, for the value of the medical lessons alone. It contains also many life illustrations, and two fascinating stories from the widely known author "Ned Buntline." Anyone sending their address with name of this paper to Dr. Kennedy, will receive the Book free by mail.

A "Sovereign" that Costs One Dollar.

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout N. Y., is known to be a certain cure for Nervousness, Debility, and the ills peculiar to women. This sovereign remedy stimulates the Stomach, Kidneys, and Liver to a healthy action. For all troubles of the blood and urinary organs it has no equal, and a bottle, which costs only one dollar, should be in every house.

Life is Misery,

To thousands of people who have the taint of scrofula in their blood. The agonies caused by the dreadful running sores and other manifestations of this disease are beyond description. There is no other remedy equal to Hood's Sarsaparilla for scrofula, salt rheum and every form of blood disease. It is reasonably sure to benefit all who give it a fair trial. Be sure to get Hood's.

By All Odds

The most generally useful medicine is Ayer's Pills. As a remedy for the various diseases of the stomach, liver, and bowels, these Pills have no equal. Their sugar-coating causes them not only to be easy and pleasant to take, but preserves their medicinal integrity in all climates and for any reasonable length of time. The best family medicine, Ayer's Pills are, also, unsurpassed for the use of travelers, soldiers, sailors, campers, and pioneers. In some of the most critical cases, when all other remedies have failed, prove effective.

"In the summer of 1864 I was sent to the Annapolis hospital, suffering with chronic diarrhea. While there, I became so reduced in strength that I could not speak and was compelled to write everything I wanted to say. I was then having some 25 or 30 stools per day. The doctors ordered a medicine that I was satisfied would be of no benefit to me. I did not take it, but persuaded my nurse to get me some of Dr. Ayer's Pills. About two o'clock in the afternoon I took six of these pills, and by midnight began to feel better. In the morning the doctors came again, and after deciding that my symptoms were more favorable, gave me a different medicine, which I did not use, but took four more of the pills instead. The next day the doctors came to see me, and thought I was doing nicely, (and so did I). I then took one pill a day for a week. At the end of that time, I considered myself cured and that Ayer's Pills had saved my life. I was then weak, but had no return of the disease, and gained in strength as fast as could be expected."—F. C. Luce, Late Lieut. 55th Regt. Mass. Vol. Infantry.

"Ayer's Pills are

The Best

I have ever used for headaches, and they act like a charm in relieving any disagreeable sensation in the stomach after eating."—Mrs. M. J. Ferguson, Pullens, Va.

"I was a sufferer for years from dyspepsia and liver troubles, and found no permanent relief until I commenced taking Ayer's Pills. They have effected a complete cure."—George W. Mooney, Walla Walla, W. T.

PAPER CURRENCY.

The Amount Afloat Cannot Be Told With Certainty.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—A Washington special to the Daily News, says that no one can form an intelligent idea of the volume of paper currency today in circulation. The treasurer purports to give each year an exact and detailed statement of the existing condition of the finances, but the treasurer has no exact data upon which to base his report, and consequently it is defective and unreliable. There is not to be found in any bureau of the treasury department any record of the notes or certificates for which the government is responsible, and the treasurer's report is consequently nothing more than guess work as to the volume of paper money afloat. He cannot say of his own knowledge how many notes or silver certificates of the several denominations authorized by law are outstanding, nor can he give the precise aggregate amount. The way the treasurer arrives at the amount of money afloat is by deducting the amount of currency destroyed from the aggregate amounts paid out by the government. This would appear to be correct, but it is fatally defective because he has no means of knowing that there are no duplicates of the notes destroyed either in the treasury department or in the hands of the people. It may be assumed that there are no duplicate notes afloat, but assumption cannot be accepted as a reliable basis for banking operations.

The only way the government has of knowing that there is no duplication of notes is by obtaining from the contractors, who furnish the paper, a sworn statement of the number of sheets supplied the bureau of engraving and printing, and then deducting the number destroyed in the press room, and adding to this number the number of sheets of printed notes received at the treasury department. These must balance with the total number of sheets furnished by the contractors.

A SKATING HORROR.

SEVENTEEN DEAD BODIES RECOVERED THUS FAR.

Horrible Ending of a Gay Pleasure Party—Warwick-on-Avon Was the Scene of an Appalling Catastrophe—Without a Moment's Warning the Treacherous Ice Gives Way.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—A terrible accident is reported from Warwick-on-Avon. While several thousand skaters were disporting themselves on the river at that place the ice suddenly and without a word of warning, cracked in the middle of the river. An immense fissure opened, through which some 500 of the skaters were plunged into the icy waters. A cry of horror arose from the spectators, while the more fortunate of the skaters lost no time in reaching the river banks. When the first shock was over a number of people hurried to the rescue of the drowning skaters and a number of them were pulled out, but it is feared that many were drowned, as a large number are missing. The latest reports state that seventeen bodies have been recovered, among them several women.

RAVING MAD.

Banker Driven Insane by the Failure of His Institution.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 29.—The tremendous strain upon L. L. Stevens, owner of the Sanborn County Bank, Woonsocket, S. D., which failed, has driven him stark mad. Frequently he has torn hair from his head and constantly called for money he could not get. Steps are being taken to have him examined by the insanity board and have him sent to an asylum, it his delirium does not leave him. Just before going crazy he gave instructions to the assignee to pay back some money to a few creditors who had made late deposits, but nobody knowing the combination of the safe, it could not be opened. Small depositors lose about $20,000, and they are becoming greatly excited.

They have employed H. C. Preston, of Mitchell, S. D., to prosecute their claims and insist that somebody is guilty of fraud. Thad L. Hays, cashier of the bank and son of the county treasurer, who had $8,000 on deposit, is in Springfield, Ill, on his Christmas vacation.

UP THE FINANCIAL FLUME.

The Old Banking House of Hunter & West Goes.

GREELY, COL., Dec. 29.—The old banking firm of Hunter & West has failed through bad outside investments. Mr. Hunter and Mr. West have made an assignment of all their personal property as well as the bank's assets as follows: Bank assets, $90,000; Mr. Hunter's, $33,000; Mr. West's, $14,300. Bank liabilities, $32,500; Mr. West's private liabilities, $65,000. If time is given it is hoped that no one will lose anything. Several attachments have been made, one by the Union national bank of Denver for $10,000.

The National League Fund.

DUBLIN, Dec. 29.—The Freeman's Journal announces that the conferences between William O'Brien and Timothy Harrington have resulted in an understanding whereby the funds of the National league now in the hands of that organization can be devoted to the maintenance of the tenants evicted for not paying rents under the plan of the campaign which was begun on different estates throughout Ireland by the National league. In addition these funds will be used to assist other sufferers depending upon the league for support. All disbursements will be made by Kenny and Webb, members of parliament and joint treasurers of the league.

Lumber Company Assigns.

LANCASTER, PA., Dec. 29.—The Fishing Creek Lumber company made an assignment here to William B. Given, of Columbia. The company has a paid up capital of $100,000, and the assets, consisting of a large sawmill in Columbia county and extensive wood lands in Columbia and Sullivan counties, are believed to exceed the liabilities. Edward Eberman, of Lancaster, is the president. Tight money is assigned as the cause.

The Dempsey-Fitzsimmons Fight.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 29.—The interest in the Dempsey-Fitzsimmons contest is increasing, and sporting men are speculating heavily on the result. Dempsey has a legion of admirers who are backing him at even money. Fitzsimmons, however, appears to be the favorite with the majority of sporting men, many of whom believe Dempsey is over matched.

AN OHIO MAN

Bobs Up Serenely at the Killing of Sitting Bull.

LIMA, O., Dec. 29.—George Selce, a member of the Seventh regiment, United States infantry, that has been stationed at Fort Bismarck, South Dakota, for two years, is at home on furlough, visiting his parents. His regiment was the first one ordered to the front after the messiah craze broke out, and he was an active participant in the recent Indian hostilities. In an interview he gives an interesting account of the capture and death of Sitting Bull, being an eye-witness. His story was as follows:

The police bushwhacked around until three o'clock, when they entered Sitting Bull's lodge and arrested him. The old warrior offered no resistance, and after he had made himself ready, all started for their horses. It was thought he was unarmed, but just as the little party had got outside the door of the wigwam, fifty Indians led by the old chief's son, came dashing out from behind some brush and fired a volley at the police. With the appearance of his warriors, Sitting Bull reached down and pulled from each bootleg a large six-shooter revolver and began firing right and left. His resistance only lasted a few moments, when he fell pierced with many bullets. After their chieftain fell the Indians soon gave up the fight, many throwing away their guns. The soldiers who were a short distance away, came to the relief of the police as soon as the sound of the shooting was heard, and saved them from being massacred. The lieutenant of police died the second day after the engagement, from wounds received. The soldiers think Sitting Bull was killed by stray bullets, whether fired by police, soldiers or Indians will never be known.

FATAL SHOOTING.

TWO SHERIFFS GET THE WORST OF IT IN MISSISSIPPI.

Winchester Rifles and Revolvers Used With Fatal Effect—Two Men Shot Through the Lungs and Will Die.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 29.—The Times-Democrat's Lumberton, Miss., special says: Daviston, a small town one and a half miles below here was the scene of a fatal shooting affray about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon in which four men were shot, one being killed instantly and two others fatally wounded. The trouble originated from a fight at a party on Christmas evening near Red Top between four men, F. T. Favre, one Parker, Neal Strahan and John Hickman, when Favre fired on the crowd, killing Pasker and dangerously wounding the other two. Favre was arrested and placed in Ellisville jail for safe keeping, by J. F. Cooke, justice of the peace of diftrict No. 1. Justice of the Peace J. M. Smith, of district No. 2, dispatched Deputy Sheriff W. W. Stockstill with the necessary papers to secure Favre's release on $800 bond. Sneriff Shivers, upon hearing of his release, summoned his deputies and came to Daviston on a freight to rearrest Favre. Just as the train came to a halt the firing began. Favre was instantly killed, and Sheriff J. M. Shivers was shot through the left lung with a pistol, the ball passing through and coming out on the right side. Both the latter are pronounced mortally wounded. The two wounded sheriffs were brought to this place, where they are receiving the best attention.

A FEARFUL CHRISTMAS

For Mariners on the North Atlantic Coast.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 29.—All vessels arriving in port now report having experienced very bad weather on Christmas day and all were more or less damaged. The only casualty reported, however, was on the schooner John C. Smith, which arrived from New York. Her captain reported the accidental drowning of the mate, Edwin M. Cole. During the storm on Christmas day, a lurch of the vessel threw him overboard and he was not seen again. Cole was 35 years old and lived in Winchester, Mass.

IDENTIFIED.

The Thug Shot by an Indianapolis Street Car Driver Was Alex. Cronin.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Dec. 29.—The highwayman who attempted to rob a street car Friday night, and was shot and killed by Driver Seeley, was identified as Alex. Cronin, a Louisville crook, whose parents reside in St. Louis. He has served one term in the Kentucky penitentiary and two terms in this state for highway robbery. Seeley appeared in court today and all charges against him were dismissed.

Heavy Assignment.

NEW Orleans, Dec. 29.—A Vicksburg special to the Daily States says: Late this evening the dry goods firm of O'Keefe, Guide & Co. assigned to D. J. Schlenker to secure a claim of $42,000. There are other preferred claims to the extent of $20,000. The firm is comparatively a new one, composed of enterprising young men, but was the third largest dry goods house here. In the early part of this year their store was partly burned and the firm was virtually out of business for three or four months while their store was being rebuilt.

CINCINNATI CONFLAGRATION.

The P., C. & St. L. Freight Depot is Burned.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 29.—The freight depot of the Pittsburg, Cincinnati and St. Louis railroad, on Front street, was entirely destroyed by fire last night. Seven or eight freight cars were consumed. The loss is estimated at $25,000. The origin of the fire is unknown, but it is supposed to have started from a stove in one of the offices.

Tore His Arms Out.

NASHVILLE, TENN., Dec. 29.—William Nelson, while at work at the Standard Avenue Handle Factory, at Knoxville, met with a horrible accident. His right arm became entangled in a moving belt, and he was drawn upward to the line shaft. He was carried around the pully several times, when his arm was completely torn from his body at the shoulder. He now lies in a dying condition.

Escaped in Night Clothes.

CHICAGO, Dec. 29.—Stephen B. Kent and family barely escaped with their lives yesterday from their burning residence in Lakeview. The house was completely destroyed and others in the vicinity badly scorched. The loss is about $12,000.

HOME COMFORT

Wrought Iron Range!

Manufactured at St. Louis

Read what the People say of the gentlemen representing this Company and their

Home Comfort Ranges

We understand that the Superintendent and Salesmen, representing the Wrought Iron Range Company, of St. Louis, Mo., intend very soon to leave Archbold for a new field of labor. We can truthfully say that they have conducted their business here in a manner worthy of the respect and patronage of any community. They have made Archbold their headquarters for the past four months, and during that time have sold several carloads of their Home Comfort Cooking Ranges to the best people in counties of Fulton, Williams, Henry and Lucas, and so far as we have been able to learn, their Ranges are giving perfect satisfaction. When this company came to our town we thought they were like most traveling agents in regard to their mode of doing business, that is taking notes of farmers and discounting them in banks, but we learned since then, that they do not sell, barter or dispose of their notes, and have found them just and fair in all their dealings. We wish them the same success in other fields that have had here:

Mr. Hoyd Brown, from Jackson, was at Britton last week visiting his parents.

George Bauchman and wife, of Milan, were visiting friends here last Wednesday and Thursday.

We hear that Miss Etta Hoag has left the hotel and will attend the Britton school the coming term.

Samuel Underwood and John Britton went to Adrian last Friday evening to attend the meeting of the Knight Templar.

Walter Beasley has sent in his resignation as barn yard clerk at the Exelby House, on account of bad weather and muddy horses.

A week ago last Monday George Gifford's second daughter, (Lettie) took a spoonful of Paris Green, with the purpose of ending her existence. Dr. Hendershot and his stomach pump however saved her life, for which she is now thankful.

Mr. Thomas, our night operator, has left Britton to take a position at Auburn, Ind. Mr. Thomas has only been here a few months, but he has made many friends in that short time, who regret to see him leave here.

The dance on New Year's eve was a grand success. Notwithstanding the unpleasant weather, ninety-two numbers were sold. James Riley took the prize for the most comical dressed gentleman, and Mrs. Wall, Cadmus, for the most elegantly dressed lady.

Henry Miller seems to have taken a great liking for the village of Tecumseh. Last New Year's eve he hired a rig from the Hotel barn and started for Tecumseh in the pouring rain, and when he returned a few hours later he was not alone. We congratulate you Henry.

Married—Jan. 1st, at the home of Fannie E. Davidson, Detroit, Mich., by the Rev. B. F. Mott, Emanuel Connell and Allie E. Hallett. The ceremony took place in the presence of many intimate friends. Miss Hallett and Mr. Connell are well known society people of Butler, Ind. Mr. Connell is conductor on one of our western roads. The happy couple will make their future home in Chicago, Illinois. Mr. Connell and his wife are spending a few days with the groom's sister and parents before going to their new home. Many valuable presents were received from friends abroad.

A week ago last Wednesday Fred Dubois started to town with the Hotel spring wagon. He was not alone for a lady sat comfortably on the other side of the seat; her comfort however was rudely broken; whether Fred attempted to embrace her, or whether she attempted to embrace Fred will never be known. Suffice it to say the team had hardly started from the hotel, when she suddenly lost her equilibrium and fell headlong from the wagon to terra firma. It was a bad shaking, but no bones were broken. However, the lady thought descretion the better part of valor and positively refused to trust herself in Fred's company any further.

Dr. Thomas Smith, our veterinary surgeon, possesses a bulldog of ferocious nature and appearance and it has long been the doctors boast that this animal could whip any other canine in the village. The other day the black dog "Rover" (who was recently matched to outpull our worthy Drs. team), was quietly walking along the streets of Britton, when he was insulted by Mr. Bulldog. Rover at once resented the insult and proceeded to make his dinner from the doctors canine. He would, without doubt have made a good square meal, had he not been beaten off by the bystanders.

RHEUMATISM CAN BE CURED.

Rheumatism has baffled the skill of our best physicians, and to-day more men, women and children are suffering from this terrible disease than ever before. The opinion seems universal that it is incurable, but this is a mistake. Rheumatism can be permanently cured by the use of Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup and Plasters.

An Ohio lady was so frightened by a snake that her glossy black hair turned white as snow. It was soon returned to its original color by Hall's Hair Renewer.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES

W. H. Arner had a very poor spell the first of the week.

Louise Rogers visited friends during her holiday vacation.

The January thaw, although on time, was of short duration.

The Normal and Cleary students returned to Ypsilanti Monday.

J. F. and F. J. Temple were on the sick list for the past few days.

C. O. Hiscock returned to his school work at Albion College Tuesday.

Prof. W. H. Daniels, of Clinton, called on friends Friday and Saturday.

Ed. Palmer and the Rappleye sisters began their schools again Monday.

Mrs. R. S. Houseman entertained relatives and friends on New Year's day.

James Reynolds, of LaSalle, visited his daughter, Mrs. F. J. Temple, last week.

Flora Withington, of Samaria, visited Emma Miller during the past week.

The village school began Monday with a full attendance and a new interest in their work.

The Library reading circle will meet at the parlors of the Library on Wednesday evening of next week. Prof. W. H. Rieman and Mary Osgood, committee.

Owing to the bad weather, the attendance was small at the social held at the home of Mrs. W. R. Wilson, on Friday night, but a very pleasant evening was spent by those present.

James and Mrs. Lane, of Holloway; Mrs. Hattie Doty Haskell, of Ludington; Mrs. Carrie Doty Whitmarsh and her husband, of Palmyra, and Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Montgomery were the guests of Mrs. Hall and family Tuesday.

On Saturday night of the present week the Mendelssohn Quintette Club Concert Co. will give a musical entertainment at the Opera House, in Tecumseh. Tickets can be secured at the Library of Miss Clark. Admission, 50c; reserved seats without extra charge. Each ticket has a reserved coupon on Sec. 3, row F.

The election of officers of the Sunday School for the ensuing year was held Wednesday evening of last week, resulting in the following:

Supt.—Rev. J. A. Lowry.
Ass't Supt.—C. M. Gove.
Sec.—F. J. Temple.
Ass't Sec.—Jennie Osgood.
Treas.—Mary Osgood.
Librarian—J. D. Arner.
Chorister—Belle Barlow.
Organists—Lulu Rappleye, Clara Temple, Lelia Sutton, Flota Smith.
Lesson Artist with the blackboard—Dr. R. H. Nelson.
S. S. Missionary officers:
Pres.—F. J. Temple.
Treas.—Mrs. N. C. Miller.

SPRINGVILLE SIFTINGS

Grandpa Monaghan now wears his blandest smile.

Mrs. Florence Smith and Mrs. Winnie Waring of Tecumseh, were the guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. Rogers, last week.

Among the former residents to return for the holidays were Mr. and Mrs. Ira Hayes, of Tuscola, and Calvin Lewis, of Pentwater.

School commenced Monday with a good attendance. Mr. Marr is doing efficient work and his efforts are appreciated by the patrons.

Springville is represented at the Normal by Nina Allen, Bertha Monaghan, Ed. Kerr, Bert Case and Arthur White. Agnes Hubbard returned to Tecumseh, Lottie Beebe to Adrian High School and C. Vaughan to Hillsdale.

The varied and numerous exercises of the Debating Society continue to attract large audiences. Saturday evening the rising young statesmen of the village decided the Force Bill to be a just and wise measure, the wit and Kilgore tactics of the opponents of the Bill counting as naught against the logic of its defenders.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

C. Carpenter and wife, of Chelsea, were visiting at E. J. Whelans, the first of the week.

The young people tripped the "light fantastic toe" at Pliny F. Beebe's Wednesday evening.

Away across from the Pacific coast, and over across the border from the British possessions, comes this card to Mrs. Edward Wisner: "Married—Saturday Nov. 22nd, at Victoria, B. C. Philiene F. Hathaway to John D. Hunsaker." The letter from Mrs. Hunsaker also announces the death at Salem, Ore., of her aunt, Mrs. Harriet Miller.

Influenza neither improves the looks, temper or articulation. But Old Saul's Catarrh Cure does cure it so quickly as to surprise one. Only 25 cents a package, sold everywhere.

MACON MUSIC.

M. V. Sickley started Friday for Georgia, to introduce his washing machine.

B. S. Scudder received a fine Seth Thomas clock Monday, from the manufactures of Old Honesty Tobacco, Louisville, Ky., he having the largest number of tags.

New Year's day will long be remembered by Aunt Julia Hendershot, although it rained all day. The children and grand children to the number of nineteen packed their baskets with the dainties that go to make up a New Year's dinner and set sail for the old homestead, taking Aunt Julia by surprise. To say that all enjoyed the occasion is needless; but none more more than Aunt Julia, who received as a token of their love, a fine extension table and spread, after which baskets were brought forth, and all agreed that it was good for them to be there. After picking up the fragments they again set sail for their homes, a distance ranging from one-half to five miles, taking with them the love of a mother and grandmother who is now in her seventy-seventh year.

On Friday evening, Jan. 16th, the Loyal Temperance Legion of this place will give a concert, at which time the following program will be presented. Admission free.

Opening song by the Legion.

Rec.—Anna Smith.
Song and Chorus.

TIPTON TOPICS.

Miss Lida Simmons is seriously ill.

Ray Kemp has obtained a position in Tecumseh, in the express office.

Last Tuesday evening a large number of Tibbie Daniels' friends took her by surprise, and all passed a pleasant evening.

Mr. William Wilson, a former resident of this place, and who will be remembered by many, spent a portion of last week with friends here.

Last Friday evening a goodly number of friends called at the home of C. Vedder, and not finding him at home, prepared to make themselves masters of the scene. He was sent for, and returning, found the house well filled and all enjoying themselves as best they could. All passed a pleasant evening and at a late hour they took their departure, leaving a handsome chair as a token of esteem and appreciation of his services as chorister.

The M. E. Sunday-school held their annual meeting for election of officers for the ensuing year, Jan. 4th, and the following officers were elected:

Supt.—A. Delong.
Ass't Supt.—Mrs. Gibbs.
Sec'y.—Bessie Preston.
Ass't Sec'y.—Frank Fisher.
Treas.—Irving Luce.
Librarian—Arthur Daniels.
Chorister—C. Vedder.
Ass't Chor.—Leroy Dibble.
Organist—Maud Poucher.
Ass't Organist—Bessie Preston.

CAMBRIDGE FARMERS CLUB.

The Cambridge Farmers' Club met at the home of Marion Case and elected the following officers for the year 1891:

President—Wm. Raven.
Vice President—Anna White.
Secretary—A. J. Case.
Treasurer—Anna Dewey.
Executive Com.—John Dewey, Mrs. M. Reed, Mrs. W. Read.
Chaplain—Marshall Reed.

Twelve members were added. The next meeting will be held at David Neeleys, on the first Saturday in February.

Bright's Disease contracted in the army—treated by the most eminent physicians, but unsuccessfully. Finally pronounced incurable, and then permanently restored by Dr. Craig's Original Kidney and Liver Cure. (The case of Col. O. J. Averell, of New York.) He might have saved hundreds of dollars and years of pain by its earlier use.

The best anodyne and expectorant for the cure of colds and coughs and all throat, lung, and bronchial troubles, is, undoubtedly, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Ask your druggist for it, and, at the same time, for Ayer's Almanac, which is free to all.

THE FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

The preliminary meeting held at the HERALD office last Saturday afternoon to talk up a farmers' institute was well attended, about twenty delegates being present.

The meeting was called to order by B. F. DePuy and O. H. Bramble was chosen Secretary. The object of the meeting was stated by the President and remarks were made by several of the delegates. Seven organizations were represented and three others had signified their intentions to join in the movement. There were present by delegates, Holloway P. of I.; Social Club; Cambridge Club; Tecumseh and Franklin Club; Northern Lenawee Club; Farmers' Union; Macon Grange; Onsted Grange.

A motion was unanimously carried that a Farmers' Institute be held in Tecumseh about the middle of February, that it be concluded in one day of three sessions.

On motion the chair appointed a finance committee of three, Messrs. Laing, Martin and Davidson.

On motion an executive committee of one member from each organization was appointed, to have charge of all the business pertaining to the Institute:

Social Club—Mrs. F. C. Rector.
Holloway P. of I—Alex. Richard.
Farmers' Union—B. F. DePuy.
Macon Grange—J. W. Baker.
Northern Lenawee Club—Mrs. S. P. Sheldon.
Tecumseh and Franklin Club—Mrs. B. Hurry.
Cambridge Club—Wm. Raven.
Onsted Grange—F. W. Gilbert.
S. Washtenaw Club—A. D. English.
Britton P. of I—E. L. Lowe.
Macon P. of I—I. C. Mills.
Tipton P. of I—Mrs. C. H. Kemp.
Franklin Club—M. D. Alexander.

On motion it was resolved that the members of this committee be authorized to appoint their own substitutes in case they cannot act.

A meeting of the executive committee was called at the HERALD office, on Saturday next, Jan. 10th, at 10.30 a. m.

Adjourned.

NORTH EAST FRANKLIN.

Carrie Taylor has returned to her work in Macon, leaving here Friday.

Mrs. Spaulding returned Saturday from a visit with her daughter Holloway.

It is rumored that Ben. Lamkin has been offered two hundred dollars for his bargain on the Monaghan farm.

Minnie Jenkins has been very sick with a cold on her lungs, but her many friends are rejoicing over more favorable symptoms.

Mrs. Mary Woods, of Hillsdale, with her little son, arrived at Rodman Taylor's just as the New Year was coming in. She will remain for some time and care for her sick father, who, we are glad to say, is improving daily.

The members of the White Rose Club had an enjoyable gathering at G. W. Allen's Saturday night. Many visitors were present and the quaintly prepared program was carried out with one omission. All seemed pleased. The members of the Club are greatly in earnest and propose to keep the ball rolling if possible. They expect to hold a Demorest medal contest soon, of which further notice will be given in due time.

FARMERS' SOCIAL CLUB.

The Farmers' Social Club will hold a sample meeting at F. C. Rector's, Thursday evening, Jan. 15th. Let every one feel an interest in the meeting and bring samples.

The committee would like all the samples sent in Thursday forenoon, if possible, that they may have ample time to arrange them. They would like all grains and seeds in pint or quart cans or bottles, labeled with the producers name, and the kind of soil it was raised upon.

Vegetables and apples in peck quantities, also labeled.

Ladies, don't be outdone by the male members, but bring samples of your canned and dried fruits, bread, pies, cake, &c., with recipes for the same. Send samples of fancy work, painting, embroidery, crocheting, knitting, and drawn work, hand sewing, or anything of use or ornament.

Let this be truly a sample of the industry of farmers.

There will be a short program, as follows:

Song—Etta and Edgar Coddington.
Address by the president, R. B. Gillespie.
Inst. Solo—Ora Gillespie.
Essay—Grace Gillespie.
Recitation—Lovina Schreder.
Song—Grace and Garland Gillespie.
Inst. Solo—Rheda Benedict.
Song—Etta Coddington.
Question Box.

"It leads them all," is the general reply of druggists when asked about the merit or sales of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Have you sworn off drinking and smoking for this year? Remember now is the accepted time.

McKinley prices are gradually but surely coming, but McKinley wages have failed to materialize thus far.

The "infant industry" of kicking has had a wonderful growth since the McKinley tariff bill went into effect.

It was a big day at Lansing yesterday, and Gov. Winan's administration was inducted into office in a blaze of glory.

"Grover Cleveland or a Western Democrat" is the war cry of the St. Louis Republic, and the western Democracy all shout Amen.

Michigan is surely a favored state. It escapes the big blizzards, it has a Democratic administration and it has a treasury full of money.

A crisis will be reached on the elections bill this week. It can be crowded through the Senate by revolutionary action, but in no other way.

The surplus which Cleveland left in the treasury has already been knocked silly and deficiency bills to nearly fifty millions are now on the docket.

The new state officials all took possession of their offices on new years day, and the entire state administration is democratic for the first time in thirty-six years.

Politics will be red hot this month in Kansas, Illinois and New Hampshire. All three legislatures are in dispute and three U. S. Senators are trembling in the balance.

In opposing the Force bill the Democratic Senators are fighting for the liberties of the people. The people will sustain them in fighting the iniquity at every step.

Col. Conger is the member of the Republican national committee from Ohio. Col. Conger is President of the harvester trust. Put this and that together and draw your own conclusions.

Secretary Rusk is quoted as saying that "this Mower and Reaper Trust will cost the Republican party hundreds of thousands of votes at the next Presidential election?" The Pittsburg Despatch, a Republican paper, adds: "He might have gone further and said that the presence of trusts among the protected industries contributed more than any other one cause to the reverse of the last election. The Republican party has but one way of ridding itself of that incubus, and that is to provide for placing all products controlled by such combinations on the free list during the duration of the trust."

Pork and molasses isn't a Texas dish, but anybody who likes it can get all he wants down there. Since pork packeries were opened in Dallas and Fort Worth it is hog-killing time all the year now, and the molasses crop this season is said to be bigger than ever before. There is lots of worse victuals in this world than molasses and sausage. The molasses flavors the sausage and the sausage flavors the molasses, and the two together combine successfully with buckwheat cakes. On the whole, Texas would be a pretty good State to live in even if it didn't have a cotton crop that is rapidly climbing to 2,000,000 bales.—St. Louis Republic.

The duty on wheat flour in Spain has been increased from 18 shillings to 25 shillings 6 pence as a retaliatory measure to the McKinley bill. This is but one of the first effects of that measure, for, it is a declaration of commercial war against the civilized world, and, for that matter, against the barbarians as well. Some republican leaders have laid the flattering unction to their souls that when the American people come to understand the bill they will be sorry for the unmerciful drubbing they gave the authors of it, but, unless indications are deceptive, the better the people come to understand the measure, the greater will be their desire to have another opportunity to re-enforce the salutary lesson of last November.—Chicago Times.

THE NEW APPORTIONMENT.

The new apportionment bill, which has passed the House by a good majority, will doubtless pass the Senate and become a law. Although considerable opposition was manifested to the bill on the ground that the census was notoriously unfair and imperfect, still it is probably better that some apportionment bill should be passed at the present session of Congress and thus a fruitful cause of political strife be removed. The Democrats have acted wisely in offering no factional opposition to the bill. It is perhaps true that it gives the Republicans some advantage in some of the states, but it is also true that a violent attempt to prevent the passage of any bill might inflict even more political damage upon the Democracy. Partizan legislation frequently acts as a boomerang and harms its authors more than its victims. Assuming that the present bill will in due time become a law, we present below a table showing the composition of the House under the old and new apportionments. The next House will contain 356 members, thus divided among the several states.

The electoral college will also be increased in like proportion, and will consist of 444 members in 1892, in ead of 401, as in 1888; 223 will constitute a majority of the electoral votes and the party that elects its President must receive that number. The subjoined table will show the distribution of the electoral votes:

Alabama	11	Nebraska	8
Arkansas	8	Nevada	3
California	9	N Hampshire	4
Colorado	4	New Jersey	10
Connecticut	6	New York	36

In 1892 most of the States are likely to stay where they are, but others may be carried by the farmers alliance. Michigan and Illinois went Democratic last fall on a light vote. The full vote of a presidential year might record a different story. But Wisconsin, Massachusetts and Rhode Island swung into the Democratic column with such a decisive majority upon a full vote, as to indicate a permanent political revolution. These three states can be properly classed as doubtful in 1892.

* * *

Under the new apportionment the following classification would seem to be a fair one.

Democratic—Alabama, Arkansas, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, New Jersey, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, West Virginia—178.

Republican—California, Colorado, Idaho, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Vermont, Wyoming, Washington—184.

Doubtful—Massachusetts 15; Indiana 15; New York 36; Rhode Island 4; Wisconsin 12; total—82.

HOW THE TARIFF WORKS.

The Case Against Protection Clearly Stated.

The reason why the tariff question has been so hotly debated is that people in general have had very dim ideas of the way in which tariffs work. "Protection to American labor" has a taking sound, and most people who favor it are captured by the name. This is natural. All true Americans believe in protecting American labor—the only question is, whether tariff taxes have that effect.

There are two kinds of tariffs—tariffs for protection and tariffs for revenue. Protectionists often try to mix up the two, but they really have nothing in common. There can be no revenue from a tariff unless foreign goods come in to be taxed, while the object of a protective tariff is to keep goods out. A perfect revenue tariff would yield no protection at all, and a perfect protective tariff would yield no revenue at all. The question is, whether protection is a good thing in itself. If it is, we ought to have it without regard to revenue. If duties of sixty per cent. will give higher wages than duties of twenty per cent., then the McKinley bill is a good thing, but we ought not to stop at that. The American workman is entitled to the best wages he can get, and we ought to put the rates up to a hundred, a thousand, or ten thousand per cent. In fact, we ought not to be satisfied with duties at all, but should absolutely forbid foreign goods to be brought into the country.

The democratic contention is that the tariff is merely a necessary evil to provide for the expenses of the government; that it cannot benefit labor or promote prosperity, but is merely a drag on both, and consequently the lower we can put it and still keep the government running the better off we shall be.

The people who believe that custom houses can make us prosperous should sit down and try to think out carefully just how they expect this effect to be produced. When an American merchant sends to Europe for a stock of goods the things are stopped at the custom house and taxed. When the merchant who imported them sells them to a wholesaler he adds the tax, the custom house expenses, which are pretty high, and a profit for the use of his capital. The wholesaler charges all this up to the retailer and adds another profit on his own capital. The retailer sells the things to anybody that may wish to use them, with all these costs added and a still larger profit of his own. The result is that for every dollar he spends the consumer gets about fifty cents' worth of goods and fifty cents' worth of tax, brokerage and extra profits.

This is the plain, direct effect of the tariff. If it were the only effect, of course nobody would be in favor of the system. But there is an indirect effect much more important, and it is upon this that the protective theory rests. In raising the price of foreign goods the tariff raises the price of American goods, too. That is its object. In this case, as in the other, the consumer buys fifty cents' worth of tax with every fifty cents' worth of goods, but the government does not get the money. It goes into the pockets of Mr. Carnegie, Mr. Niedringhaus, General Butler and the other millionaires whose fortunes have been built up by monopolies fenced in by our national laws.

It is asserted that these taxes are levied for the benefit of labor. If you will read the McKinley bill carefully from end to end you will find that its authors forgot to mention labor in a single paragraph. There are 472 sections in the dutiable schedules—nothing that the workman must use and pay for has been overlooked—but there is no duty on the importation of foreign workmen to compete with him. When Mr. McKinley and his friends were making up their bill, their committee room was full of capitalists, explaining what sort of duties they would like. Did anybody hear of delegations of laborers making similar explanations.

The intentional effects of high duties is to make high prices, and this, while it is sometimes good for capitalists, is always bad for workingmen. When things are high people buy less of them, and that means that fewer men are needed to make them, that there is competition among workers for jobs, and that wages go down. Suppose a carpet mill to be making a million yards of carpet a year, and selling it at fifty cents a yard. That brings in $500,000. If the price were raised to a dollar a yard, and the sales reduced to 500,000 yards, the owners of the factory would take in the same amount, and their profits might be greater, because all their running expenses would be diminished. But how about the weavers? Only half as many of them would be needed, and those who were thrown out of work would be begging to be allowed to stay at lower rates and wages would go down.

That is precisely what has been happening in several industries since the McKinley bill went into effect. Altho' the workman's cost of living has gone up, his wages have gone down, because there is less demand for his services. People are getting more wear out of their old clothes and their old crockery and their old tinware, and fewer new things are bought.

Americans are a patriotic people, and they proved during the war that they would willingly stand any amount of taxation for the benefit of the government. But when they are barely able to make both ends meet, and the government takes a third of their earnings, not for its own needs, but to hand over to men already so gorged with wealth that they do not know how to dispose of it except in vulgar display, the American people have a right to kick.—San Francisco Examiner.

THE FARMERS' VOTE.

In all the Northwestern agricultural States the issue before the people in the last election was the McKinley Tariff Bill. The farmers do not like the policy of that measure, and showed by their votes for Congressmen that they propose to throw off the excessive burdens of protection.

In Indiana, in 1888, the Republican plurality in the Congressional vote was 4571. This year the Democratic plurality amounted to 34,928.

In Minnesota, the Republican plurality of 1888 was 31,456. This year the Democratic plurality was 14,070.

In Kansas the Republican plurality on the Congressional vote of two years ago was 78,000; this year the opposition carried the State by more than 12,000.

The farmers of Nebraska gave to the Democratic and Alliance candidates for Congress an aggregate plurality of about 29,000. In 1888 the Republican candidates' plurality amounted to 25,000.

In Iowa the Republicans carried the Congressional districts in 1888 by 28,000. This year the Democrats win by 8,000.

The verdict against the Tariff law in Illinois was very emphatic. In 1888 the Republican plurality was 27,067; this year the Democratic plurality is 34,500.

It is to Congress that the farmers look for relief from the burden of tariff taxation, and it is apparent from these figures that they have done their utmost to defeat the men responsible for the McKinley Bill.

In these six States the Republicans have 41 Representatives in the present House and the Democrats 18. In the next House the Democrats will have 44 and the Republicans 15.

There is no doubt as to the position of the farmers on the tariff question.—N. Y. World.

"Cloture" is an exotic which the Republican Senators propose to transplant to American soil. For over a century the American Senate has been essentially a deliberative body. All at once the Republican majority discovers a reason for applying the gag law. And why? To force through the Senate a Force and Fraud bill, subversive of the rights of the States!

MARVELOUS ENDURANCE.

The vast amount of labor performed by the heart in keeping all portions of the body supplied with blood is not generally known. It beats 100,000 times and forces the blood at the rate of 168 miles a day, which is 3 000,000,000 times and 5,150,880 miles in a life time. No wonder there are so many HEART FAILURES. The first symptoms are shortness of breath when exercising, pain in the side or stomach, fluttering choking in throat, oppression, then follow weak, hungry or smothering spells, swolen ankles, etc. Dr. Franklen Miles' NEW HEART CURE is the only relirable remedy. Sold by Baker & Hall.

WORTH ITS WEIGHT IN GOLD.

If a price can be placed on pain. "Mother's Friend" is worth its weight in gold as an alleviator. My wife suffered more in ten minutes with either of her other two children than she did all together with her last, having previously used four bottles of "Mother's Friend." It is a blessing to any one expecting to become a mother, says a customer of mine.

Washing Clothes

or cleaning house with ordinary soap is like rolling a heavy stone up hill; it takes main strength and a good deal of it. The same work done with Pearline is like rolling the stone down hill—it's easy; quick; true; goes right to the mark; and with very little labor. All dirt must go before PEARLINE. It robs woman's hardest work of its drudgery—(a praiseworthy theft, by the way). The question is—does it or does it not hurt the hands, clothes or paint? We tell you it don't—but we are interested (as well as you)—so ask your friends who use it; you'll find most of them do; the annual consumption is equal to about three packages a year for every family in the land. But better yet—get a package (it costs but a few pennies, and every grocer keeps it), and try it for yourself—your gain will be larger than ours.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers are offering imitations which they claim to be Pearline, or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—they are not, and besides are dangerous. 188 JAMES PYLE, New York

SPRINGER ON REFORM.

THE ISSUE WILL REMAIN TARIFF REFORM.

The Illinois Congressman Gives His Views of the Tariff Reform Outlook—The New Congress Will Keep the Question Open. Republicans in a Dilemma.

Hon. William M. Springer, of Illinois, while in New York not long ago talked with a member of the Reform club on the prospects of tariff reform. He spoke in the most hopeful manner of the outlook, and he felt the utmost confidence that the Democrats would win on the tariff issue in 1892. Mr. Springer said:

The Republican politicians of Washington are now endeavoring to divert public attention from the principal issue upon which they were repudiated at the November election. They seem to be of the opinion that there is but one way open through which success is possible in 1892. Upon the tariff question they have been thoroughly repudiated. They now hope by reviving sectional issues through and by means of the Force bill and appeals to sectional prejudice to reform political issues upon other lines than tariff and taxation.

In this they will be as much disappointed as they were overwhelmed by the result of the recent election. The people of the country have pronounced against taxation of the many for the benefit of the few. They will not give up this issue until it has eventuated in practical legislation in accordance with their demands. If we were now living under the form of government which prevails in monarchical England, the new congress would be at once convened, and the McKinley bill would be repudiated immediately; but under our more conservative methods we must abide the constitutional forms required for securing results.

On the tariff question the republicans can neither go forward nor backward with any prospect of bettering their condition. To stand still is conceded defeat; to move in the other direction offers scarcely less advantage. If they go forward they must rely upon the fulfillment of pledges made before the election and pending the passage of the McKinley bill, to the effect that while prices of articles affected by the tariff might be temporarily advanced, yet, ultimately and in the near future, by means of competition, such prices could be greatly reduced and articles would be sold cheaper than before the passage of the bill, thus placing their reliance in the future for a reversal of the popular judgment in November upon a claim that competition is to come to their relief, and that by the time of the next presidential election the people will be in the full enjoyment of cheap necessaries of life secured through competition. This hope is a flattering one; it can never be realized.

Competition has already done its perfect work in this country in the matter of reducing prices. So perfectly has competition been carried on that combination for the purpose of arresting competition has been resorted to all along the line. There is scarcely a manufacturing industry in the United States that is not more or less controlled by some kind of combination for the purpose of limiting the output and regulating the prices. In some cases this combination has taken the form of trusts or organized monopolies. These trusts have secured the concentration of nearly all the capital engaged in a given industry, and by this combination a complete control of the output and prices has been secured.

In other cases a milder type of combination has been resorted to. In some cases the combination has been secured by means of correspondence between the various interests and a tacit agreement reached as to output and prices year after year. But through one form or another scarcely an industry can be mentioned in which further competition is not prevented or made impossible by the mutual concurrence of those engaged in the business.

Those, therefore, who look to competition for a reduction of prices will be deceived. Prices of manufactured articles can only be reduced, while the McKinley bill is in force, by the reduction of wages or by the adoption of improved processes. The latter will come without the tariff; it is entirely independent of it. In most lines of industry it would seem that the processes of manufacture were almost perfect at this time; but still we may hope for continued improvement in this direction, although such improvement will scarcely be perceptible in the brief space of two years. Lower prices secured by reduction of wages would be attended with greater disaster than if present prices should be maintained and wages increased. So that wherever cheapness is secured by reduction of wages, the remedy will be worse than the disease, speaking in a political sense, as it will affect the interests of the Republican party. Hence it seems conclusive that the Republican party cannot improve its position on the tariff or on taxation by adhering to the McKinley bill.

If, however, the leaders of the party should determine to reverse their position, overturn the leadership of Harrison, McKinley and Reed, and put Mr. Blaine forward with the implied promise of the repeal of the McKinley bill, the enlargement of trade through reciprocity, and the bettering of their condition by repudiating all that the Republican party has done since it came into power, it will find this latter condition more hopeless than the former.

President Harrison in his message to congress "pointed with pride" to the fact that there had been recently an increase in the prices of agricultural products, such as corn, wheat, etc., and he endeavored to convey the impression that such increased price of agricultural products was the result of the McKinley bill. Nothing could be further from the truth. If he had taken pains to examine the report on the condition of the crops—which issued from the agricultural department almost simultaneously with his message—he would have found that in Kansas the average yield of corn per acre was only eleven bushels, whereas it ought to have been thirty. The very fact that there is almost a total failure of the corn crop in Kansas was one of the reasons which produced the political revolution in that state.

The failure or shortness of the corn crop of the great corn belt of the country caused scarcity of this product, and scarcity resulted in higher prices for corn. But the trouble with the farmers was that they had little or no corn to sell, and many of them who had stock to feed became buyers at the higher rates which scarcity had produced. The prices of agricultural products are determined entirely by the extent of production, and this is governed by natural causes, not by legislation.

A failure of crops in this country is regarded by the farmers as the greatest calamity that can befall them, but such failure inevitably results in higher prices of farm products, and therefore the president has cited as an evidence of prosperity that which the farmers themselves regard as a calamity, namely, higher prices resulting from crop failure. There can be no combination among farmers to reduce the output of agricultural products; such combinations are not even desirable. Farmers universally strive for bountiful harvests, the pious ones among them praying as well as laboring for them. They regard a bountiful harvest as essential to their prosperity, notwithstanding the fact that the greater the crop the less will be the price of the products.

They are political economists who believe, who realize, in fact, that abundance is wealth and that scarcity can never tend in that direction. If the next season should be favorable, and large crops of wheat, corn, oats and other products of the farm should be realized, there will be a corresponding depression of prices, and the larger the crop the lower the prices. If such should be the result a year from this time the president in his annual message would—following the lines of his late one—deplore the unfortunate condition of the country brought about by the low prices for farm products caused by abundant harvests!

The Republican leaders cannot hope to divert the attention of the country from the tariff question whatever they may do, whether they go forward or go backward. The Democratic party has a plain, unmistakable duty to perform; that duty consists in moving steadily onward and pressing the advantage which it has already obtained. It will keep this question before the public until the fruits of victory have been realized, until the McKinley bill has been repealed, and until materials which make profitable manufacture impossible have been relieved from unnecessary burdens and so cheapened as to not only aid manufacturing, but increase profitable production. It will demand larger markets for American farm products; not only reciprocity with Cuba, South America and Canada, but freer trade with all the world.

The late election was only the expression of popular desire; that popular desire has not been accomplished. It may not be fully realized until after the next presidential election, at which the final and complete victory will be achieved—namely, the election of a president and both branches of congress, who will carry into effect the popular verdict of last November. During the Fifty-second congress the large Democratic majority will keep this question continually in view. It will not be turned to the right nor to the left; it will not permit side issues of any kind to interfere with this all absorbing and all important question. With the advantages already obtained it will be little less than criminal to permit anything to occur which would make impossible ultimate and complete tariff reform.

A Shipment of Glassware.

The "quality" of McKinleyism may be seen from a case recently reported by a Boston paper. A merchant recently imported from Antwerp an invoice of medium table glassware, paying for it $1,775. On landing it at the custom house the McKinley duty was found to be $1,065, thus making the entire cost $2,840. The duty under the old law would have been $742.30, or $322.70 less than the McKinley duty. A part of this difference grows out of the customs administrative law making the boxes, straw, packing, etc., dutiable at the same rate as the merchandise when an ad valorem rate is levied.

The old rate on table glassware was 40 per cent.; the McKinley rate is 60 per cent., or an increase of 50 per cent. upon the old rate. This increase is said to have been put on by McKinley for the benefit of the glassware manufacturers in his district. One of the Philadelphia manufacturers, who went before McKinley to ask for a higher duty, had much to say about the pauper laborers of Germany, who "eat meat only once a week," and yet he confessed that workers in our American glass factories have work only about nine months in the year.

McKinley Free Trade.

The protectionists cannot avoid showing that they do not believe their own words when they tell us that "the tariff is not a tax." In order to develop the manufacture of beet root sugar in this country the McKinleyites put a provision into the tariff law that all machinery for manufacturing it should be admitted at the custom houses free of duty till July 1, 1892.

This was intended to encourage the new beet root sugar industry, but if the tariff is not a tax how can this exemption from the duty help the sugar industry? The McKinleyites are anxious to help a young and promising infant industry, and the first food they give it is a large chunk of free trade in their machinery. After doing this these same McKinleyites go up and down the land trying to prove that this very free trade would ruin the country; that it is advocated only by "those who serve foreign interests" and are enemies to their country.

IDOLATRY IN ISRAEL.

LESSON II, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JAN. 11.

Text of the Lesson, I Kings xii, 25-33. Commit Verses, 28-30—Golden Text, Ez. xx, 4—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

25. "Then Jeroboam built Shechem in Mount Ephraim and dwelt therein."

Rehoboam having been warned by Shemiah, the man of God, not to go against the revolting tribes to subdue them, returned home with his army and contented himself to be king of Judah only, according to the word of the Lord (vs. 22-24). Thus the twelve tribes became two nations, not to be united again till the coming of the son of David in power and glory (Ezek. xxxvii, 21-28). Shechem became for a time the capital of the kingdom of the ten tribes.

"And went out from thence and built Penuel."

Here the angel of the Lord wrestled with Jacob and changed his name to Israel. Jacob called the name of the place Penuel (the Face of God), for, said he, I have seen God face to face, and my life is preserved (Gen. xxxii, 28, 30). Jeroboam's building these places may be explained by the fact that in the days of the Judges they had been destroyed (Judg. viii, 17; ix, 45).

26. "And Jeroboam said in his heart, Now shall the kingdom return to the house of David."

He evidently did not know in his heart anything of the meaning of either Shechem (shoulder) or Penuel (the face of God). His heart had not received the precious promise of Deut. xxxiii, 12, nor did he know Him of whom it is written "the government shall be upon His shoulder."

27. "If this people go up to do sacrifice in the house of the Lord at Jerusalem, then shall the heart of this people turn again unto their Lord, unto Rehoboam, king of Judah, etc."

There is no gratitude to God in this, nor any confidence in Him, but there is a thought of direct disobedience; for Jeroboam knew that God had commanded that sacrifice should be offered only in the city and at the place which he had chosen (Deut. xii, 5, 14).

28. "Whereupon the king took counsel and made two calves of gold."

It was not the counsel of God, it must have been the counsel of the ungodly. He must have known the story of the golden calf in the wilderness and of the thousands who fell because of that sin; but if any one had reminded him of that, and had suggested that his present course was a dangerous one, he might have replied: "Oh, that was 500 years ago, and we do not know whether there was any truth in it or not; that is an old story and perhaps only a tradition. Then look at those idol groves and high places on Olivet which the great Solomon built for his wives, and where he worshiped also (I Kings xi, 5-8), and yet he prospered and died peacefully."

"It is too much for you to go up to Jerusalem; behold thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt."

He talked like the devil in the garden of Eden when he suggested to Eve that God demanded too much when he told them not to eat of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, or when he suggested to Achan that it was too much self denial not to take that garment and that gold, or when he suggested to Jesus through Simon that it was too much to think of dying at Jerusalem.

29. "And he set the one in Bethel, and the other put he in Dan."

What a desecrator of holy places! Bethel (house of God), where God gave to Jacob such a glorious vision of heavenly things and such promises for the future (Gen. xxviii, 11-19); where God set up a ladder that reached to heaven and Jacob dedicated a pillar to God, here this rebel sets up an idol and establishes idolatry.

30. "And this thing became a sin."

Not only a sin against God, but a sin against himself and all his house to cut it off, and to destroy it from off the face of the earth (xiii, 34). He that sinneth against God wrongeth his own soul, and all they that hate Him love death (Prov. viii, 36). Moses, when speaking to Israel of the calf which Aaron made, said, "I took your sin, the calf which ye had made, and burnt it with fire (Deut. ix, 21).

"The people went to worship before the one, even unto Dan."

It would be such worship as Cain offered, the worship of disobedience, and therefore hateful to God. They were breaking the first and second commandments of the law, besides all the other commands which God had given concerning the only place of worship. There is no particular place now where we are to worship God, but as Jesus taught the woman of Samaria, God seeketh true worshipers who will worship Him in spirit and in truth.

31. "And he made an house of high places, and made priests of the lowest of the people which were not of the sons of Levi."

Notwithstanding the command, "Thou shalt give the Levites unto Aaron, and to his sons, * * * and the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death" (Num. iii, 9, 10), this man takes any one and sets him apart as a priest. It is not enough to despise the only true God, the God of Israel, and the Holy City, and the Temple, the only appointed place of sacrifice, but he also despises God's chosen priesthood and sets up one of his own. We do not need to seek far, even in our own day, for a man made priesthood, many of whom, to judge by their conduct, are among the lowest of the people, and if they do not worship golden calves they certainly do worship golden eagles. Nor need we step outside the Protestant church, nor even enter the Episcopal church, to find them, for they may be found in all.

33. "And Jeroboam ordained a feast * * * like unto the feast that is in Judah, and he offered upon the altar.

Moses did not ordain feasts; everything connected with the tabernacle and temple, and worship and feasts was appointed by God; but this man takes the place of God and imitates God. He reminds us of one described in II Thess. ii, 4, "who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshiped; so that he, as God, sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God." God had appointed that on the seventh month and tenth day of the month Israel should fast, and afflict their souls, and by appropriate sacrifices such as He ordained keep the great day of atonement, the high priest on only that one day in all the year going into the holy of holies to sprinkle the blood upon the mercy seat. Then on the fifteenth day they were to keep the feast of tabernacles. But this man knows better than God; he has no day for atonement, but on the fifteenth day of the eighth month he will have a feast and sacrifices.

"Sacrificing unto the calves that he had made, and he placed in Bethel the priests of the high places which he had made."

God was the architect of tabernacle and temple, but these places of worship were made by this man, to whom God had been so kind, and who was now so vigorously setting himself and his people against God.

A DYSPEPTIC'S ARGUMENT

Is a growl, and that growl marks the limit of argument with him. The best way to get him to try a medicine would be to advise against it—but notice how different his tone after using Burdock Blood Bitters.

"I have suffered with Dyspepsia for the last two years. Not long ago I commenced taking B. B. B. I am now on the second bottle and feel like a new man. G. KNOX, 12 Sherwood Ave., Binghamton, N. Y."

REPEATED TESTS WITH UNIFORM SUCCESS prove the fact that Burdock Blood Bitters will cure dyspepsia. The reason is plain, it tones the stomach to natural action and keeps the fluid ways of the system free from clogging impurities.

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia and heart disease for nine years and found no relief until I tried Burdock Blood Bitters. Now I am well after taking two bottles. MRS. ETTIE FRAZIER, Bowne, Mich."

THE FIGURE "9."

The figure 9 in our dates will make a long stay. No man or woman now living will ever date a document without using the figure 9. It starts in the third place in 1890, where it will remain years and then move up to second place in 1900, where it will rest for one hundred years.

There is another "9" which has also come to stay. It is unlike the figure 9 in our dates in the respect that it has already moved up to first place, where it will permanently remain. It is called the "No. 9" High Arm Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine.

The "No. 9" was endorsed for first place by the experts of Europe at the Paris Exposition of 1889, where, after a severe contest with the leading machines of the world, it was awarded the only Grand Prize given to family sewing machines, all others on exhibit having received lower awards of gold medals, etc. The French Government also recognized its superiority by the decoration of Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, President of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor.

The "No. 9" is not an old machine improved upon, but is an entirely new machine, and the Grand Prize at Paris was awarded it as the grandest advance in sewing machine mechanism of the age. Those who buy it can rest assured, therefore, of having the very latest and best.

WHEELER & WILSON M'F'G CO., 350 and 187 Wabash Ave., Chicago.
Sold by J. S. Kinney, Tecumseh.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts; Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Prices 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

KING OF THE BLOOD

The Most Thorough Purifier of the Blood Yet Discovered.

Cures all Humors, from a Pimple to the worst Scrofula.

It purifies the Blood.
It invigorates the Liver.
It regulates the Bowels.
It strengthens the stomach.
It gives vivacity in place of lassitude; cheerfulness in place of gloom, and robust vigor in place of debility.

Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Disordered Liver, Constipation, Nervous Affections, General Debility, in short all the numerous diseases and discomforts caused by impure blood are speedily conquered by this powerful corrector, the chief and sovereign of all ancient or modern medical discoveries—KING OF THE BLOOD.

Its name is its best description as it is a royal dispenser of the blessings of health and vanquishes the foes that lurk in the blood.

It banishes PIMPLES, SALT RHEUM, SCALY ERUPTIONS, ULCERS, SCALD HEAD, FEVER SORES and all SCROFULOUS DISORDERS.

It checks CONSUMPTION in its early stages. It has frequently cured it when advanced.

It disperses TUMORS and CANCERS without the surgeon's knife.

It cures DROPSY, general or partial.

It cures FEMALE WEAKNESS and DISEASE.

It reduces in a safe and effectual manner all swellings, external or internal.

It eradicates the effects of Venerial Disease and Mineral Poisons and establishes a sound constitution.

THE HERALD FOR 1891.

The HERALD is still in the ring, fully prepared to fill its accustomed place during the year of grace 1891. The 15th day of November last completed a cycle of sixteen years under its present management, and Providence permitting, the "old reliable" is likely to sail right along under the same pilot for sixteen years to come.

It is needless to inform the public what to expect in our columns during the ensuling twelve months. The general policy of the paper is well known and its record has been made. First and foremost, it will aim to be a first-class local newspaper, to act as a faithful chronicler of all local happenings of importance within the territory of its circulation. In this respect it will continue to lead all competitors.

Recognizing the stringency of the times caused by excessive taxation, we shall endeavor to accommodate the necessities of our patrons by placing our rates at the lowest possibl point, and our terms for 1891 have been adjusted with that end in view.

OFFER NO. ONE.

We have made arrangements with that wide-awake illustrated farm magazine, The American Farmer, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., and read by nearly 200,000 farmers, by which that great publication will be mailed direct to the address of any of our subscribers who will pay up all arrearages and a year in advance. The subscription price of the American Farmer is $1.00 per year. It costs you nothing. The two papers at our full rate of $1.50 per year.

OFFER NO. TWO.

The Great Divide is the title of a new monthly magazine published at Denver, Colorado, which has already taken a position among the best periodicals of this country. Our Club offer with the Great Divide is the most liberal one ever extended to our patrons. The Magazine for one year, the HERALD for one year and the Gemstone Cabinet for a premium will be given for $2.00. A sample copy of the magazine and a specimen of the Gemstone Cabinet can be seen at this office.

OFFER NO. THREE.

We offer reduced rates for the HERALD alone when payment is made strictly in advance. We earnestly urge upon our patrons the benefits of this plan. Call at our office in January, pay for your paper one year in advance, and thus secure the lowest cash rates. By so doing you will help yourself and help us at the same time. We will furnish the HERALD alone

A VISIT TO ROME.

St. Peter's Church—The Vatican—St. Paul's Church—The Capuchin Church—The Pantheon—Pompey's Statue.

Early in the morning of August 18th, we left the Continental Hotel to visit St. Peter's church. We crossed the bridge of St. Angelo which spans the Tiber whose waters at this season of year are very low, but when swollen by heavy rains the river frequently overflows its banks. It was here that Horatius defended the bridge, celebrated in verse by Macaulay. The bridge of St. Angelo was built by Adrian A. D. 136, while just beyond it is the magnificent mausoleum or tomb of Adrian, now called the castle of St. Angelo. Proceeding but a short distance further we came to St. Peter's square where is located an obelisk which was brought from Heliopolis or the City of the Sun by the Roman emperor, Caligula.

Your readers will take notice that nations began to rob old Egypt of her monuments many years ago.

Standing in front of St. Peter's church we were filled with admiration at the sight of the grandest piece of architecture which has ever been erected by the hand of man for the worship of God.

St. Peter's church covers about five square acres of ground. It is built on the site of Nero's circus where it is said that St. Peter was martyred; however the writer does not claim any theological tradition and therefore will not attempt to settle this question. It appears to be dreadfully mixed. St. Peter's church was about one hundred and seventy-six years in building, and cost three hundred and six millions of dollars in building it. The height of the dome is four hundred and seventy feet. Within the church there are thirty altars. The roof is supported by one hundred and forty-eight columns, many of which, were taken from the ruins of ancient Rome. Here we saw collossal statues of saints, magnificent tombs of popes, statues by Michael Angelo and Canova. A bronze statute of St. Peter commands the attention of visitors from all climes; the foot of the statue is partially kissed away by the countless numbers who have pressed their lips to the foot of that cold statue. Here is the tomb of St. Peter and St. Paul which we visited, and paying a franc (20 cents) each, we were permitted to pass into the sacrista and view the splendid robes of the pope and cardinals; also the pope's jubilee gifts which are exceedingly elegant. The altar over the tomb of St. Peter is surpassingly brilliaut which is surrounded by one hundred and twelve ever burning lamps; the whole internal structure is gorgeous to a greater degree than anything which we had previously seen.

The Vatican is the pope's palace, and is said to be the largest in the world. It contains many hundred rooms and halls. About the halls of the Vatican, the visitor meets the Swiss guards whose fantastic dress was designed by Michael Angelo. We ascended the splendid Scala Regia (royal stairs) to the Sistine Chapel where we viewed the magnificent ceiling frescoed by Michael Angelo, representing the Creation, Fall, Deluge etc. On the wall sixty-four foot wide is Michael Angelo's terrible and incomparable Last Judgment, which once seen can never be forgotten. We visited the four rooms containing the noblest frescoes of Raphael representing the School of Athens, Attila, Liberation of St. Peter, etc. In the Picture Gallery we admired Raphael's Tranfiguration, and the Madona, also some of the paintings of Tetian, Guido and Murillo. The Museum of Sculpture contains some of the finest pieces in the world; a few of these are distinctly remembered including Apollo Belvidere, Perseus by Canova, Juno and Minerva, all of which are very beautiful. St. Paul's church is without the walls of the city. It is not very attractive from the outside but the inside is exceedingly beautiful; its ceiling is decorated in gold. The roof is supported by one hundred columns of highly polished granite, and the two columns near the altar are fully twenty feet in circumference. The floor is of fine marble and polished in the most artistic manner. St. Paul's is cherry, bright and beautiful; one of the finest churches that we have had the pleasure of visiting.

During our sojourn in Rome we were anxious to visit the world renowned Capuchin church, and the time had now arrived for that purpose. We had some difficulty in hunting up a monk to guide us through the old church, but finally one made his appearance, having a cowl or hood upon his head, wearing a long black beard, dressed in a long gown coming down to his ankles, and a rope girdled his waist, which was tied in front, while his feet were decorated by a pair of sandals. The appearance of this gentleman was not very inviting although he answered our purpose as a guide. He showed us Guido's celebrated picture of St. Michael, and then bade us follow him into the vault or basement of the church which contains the bones of four thousand monks. These bones are cleaned and placed together in the most methodical manner. The bones of the forearm are bundled together, and likewise the bones of every other portion of the human frame. Skulls piled on skulls until they reach to the height of seven or eight feet, and then to add to this ghastly decoration, three or four skeletons are dressed in the garb of a monk and placed in an upright position between these huge piles of bones. My attention was now directed to the Messrs. McKeough, of Chatham, Ont., (who were both pleasant and intelligent companions in my journey thro Italy), whose curiosity appeared to be satisfied and expressed a desire to leave the ghastly spectacle, wondering what could be the object in placing this amount of human anatomy on exhibition. The monks of this order doubtless hold the opinion that the spectator will be morally benefited by viewing this unique array of human bones. We paid the unprepossessing monk a fee and departed, thinking that a few more years would bring his bones along with those which we had just viewed with so much curiosity.

On our way to the Pantheon we stopped to view the beautiful fountain of Trevi, whose waters we drank to insure our safe return. The Pantheon was in the early centuries of the Christian era a pagan temple; it was built about sixteen hundred years ago. It is at present a Roman Catholic church. The Pantheon is in the best state of preservation of all the old Roman buildings. It is circular in form with walls twenty feet thick. These walls were originally covered with marble, but the marble has long ago been removed for the purpose of embellishing other churches. This building has no windows but is lighted by a circular opening in the top twenty-eight feet in diameter. The statues of the gods which occupied seven niches have long since been destroyed, and in their places are seven altars. The great painter Raphael is buried here, and here is the tomb of the first Italian king, Victor Emmanuel.

We visited the Spada palace which contains the celebrated statue of Pompey. It was at the foot of this statue that "Great Cæsar fell" slain by the hand of Brutus and his fellow conspirators. History states that the blood of Cæsar sprinkled the base of Pompey's statue.

We took a last farewell view of Rome from the Pincian Hill; viewed from this hill every part of the city comes under observation; the dome of St. Peter towering above all other buildings.

J. F. JENKINS.

THE MENDELSSOHN QUINTETTE CLUB.

Among the musical organizations now traveling, none has a higher reputation than the old Quintette Club of Boston. It has flourished for many years, and although occasional changes have been made, it still retains its identity. Tecumseh people will have an opportunity to listen to this famous quintette next Saturday evening at the Opera House, and doubtless a good audience will be forthcoming. The Club consists of five artists, as follows:

MR. ISIDOR SCHNITZLER.

Violin Virtuoso and Concert Master, Native of Rotterdam, Holland, began his solo performances on the violin in public, at the early age of eight years. He was so great a student and displayed so marked an ability for his chosen profession that at the age of fourteen he attracted the attention of the King of Holland, and His Majesty assumed the entire expense of his tuition at Brussels, under the famous Wieniawsky, and afterwards at the Royal School of Music at Berlin from which he graduated with high honors, traveling over Europe, as violin virtuoso.

MR. SAMUEL WELLINGTON JENNISON.

Born in St. Paul, Minnesota, of the well-known musical family, Gen. S. P. Jennison of Red Wing. Early unmistakable inclination for music, wisely fostered by his parents, had the best tuition possible.

MR. THOMAS RYAN.

Solo Clarinette and Viola. There is probably no musician in America so familiar to concert audiences all through the length and breadth of the land as Mr. Thomas Ryan, the viola and clarinette player of the Club.

MR. PAUL HENNEBERG.

Solo Flute and Viola. His success last season with the Club was phenomenal He was regarded as the greatest genius on the flute ever heard, surprising his hearers also with the versatility of his talent, on viola and violoncello.

MR. PAUL JENNISON.

Solo Violoncello, is unquestionably able to sustain a place in the front rank of cellists in the United States, and undoubtedly the greatest violoncellist America has produced.

MISS MARIE BARNARD.

The Prima Donna connected with the troupe this season is Miss Marie Barnard. A California girl who has received all her training in her home in San Francisco, chiefly from Mr. and Mrs. Rosewald. Miss Barnard is a highly cultivated lady, with a beautiful voice, skillfully trained.

DEATH OF HANNAH LARNED.

The funeral of Mrs. D. C. Larned was held at the old home on Ottawa street last Sunday afternoon. After the responsive service from the Gloria Patri, by the minister and choir, Rev. Getchell delivered the following brief address, closing with prayer:

"Seldom do I read an obituary, brief or otherwise, upon funeral occasions. But as there are said to be exceptions to all rules, I think there are good reasons that I should now give the following regarding her who has gone:

Mrs. Hannah Larned, wife of Daniel C. Larned, was born at Phelps, Ontario County, N. Y., May 15th, 1822, and departed this life Dec. 25th, 1890, almost 69 years old.

She was married at Ridgeway, Lenawee County, Mich., and together as husband and wife they walked for 43 years, 7 months and 6 days. In the fall of 1859 they moved to Tecumseh, where they have since resided.

On the 25th day of June, 1887, she was stricken with paralysis; then again the 15th of June, 1889, at which time she fell and fractured her hip and right arm. On the 1st day of December, 1890, the final stroke came, from which she never rallied.

The faithful, patient soul has flown to that realm where it is said, "there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying nor pain. For God shall wipe away every tear from their eyes." That was her hope, and it is the comforting spirit and faith of Him who stood by her in His love, as she fell asleep by the "gates of Light" and angels bore the immortal of her away to that life "where night," it is said, "never comes and suffering is not known."

I have read that "the coffin is the cradle of Heaven." The thought is one of fancy, expressed by some soul in lines of poetic beauty. But as a fancy or reality, I sometimes wonder what angel loved ones sing the immortal lullaby, and what mother and father souls are near when the morning light of eternity appears. My faith is ardent and never more intently strong, that Jesus, in a way I do not wholly know, broke the prison bars of death asunder for all mankind, and left the eternal doors at least forever ajar; yet in that which is more than all worded prayer. I long and yearn for vision that is sweet, to have glimpse of the immortals who pass in and out over the threshold of the great beyond upon noiseless wing, or with footsteps we do not hear, to receive and succor all our own, and to bring the comforter, of which Jesus assured, to hearts that ache and sorrowing human souls.

But notwithstanding it is said, "all travel that way, mostly, if not wholly, in the dark,"—yet something sings it to my being, in trust and beauty, as Jesus affirmed,—"I will not leave you desolate or comfortless;" and thus none are orphans forever or left alone; none are forgotten or unloved in our Father's many-mansioned house above.

I am quite confident that this which we term death is expedient to all human souls; and while I do not know its fullness and glory, as it seems Jesus knew, yet if this be for one it must so be for all, and thus there is a doorway or condition, at which all physical and moral suffering ends; all such hardships, tribulations and partings cease, and more than beatific vision, an eternal flood of joy possesses the soul.

Some may call such views ecstatic, but they fill me, as Alice Cary has penned—"full of whispered song"—and,

"The palace walls I almost see.
Where dwell my Lord and King,—
O Grave! where is thy victory?
O Death! where is thy sting?

My brother and friend, and others who mourn, I would not stir you in your grief by the touches of memory. If I do not speak to you at length, do not deem it a lack in me of prayer and sympathy, but much the rather. I have them for you all the deeper and far more, and will comfort, rather than add to your tears. Look up through these and see the rainbow hues that tinge them with such love and blessed memory, such promise and beauty, and feel, in this case at least, to thank God release has come, and though you deeply loved and will longingly miss, you could not wish her in her once physical condition with you again, in any such outward form of flesh. Let her fidelity to you light up your sunset with untold glory and make your loneliness even in twilight as Longfellow sings.—

"When the evening lamps are lighted"— and her love and patience as the moments of Heaven to your soul. Your brothers of the Mystic Tie are here, and you well know—if true men and masons as they all should be—in sympathy and in prayer they remember your welfare with their own, before they came hither, in offering their adorations unto Deity. These are jewels of the soul, invested by the Hand from on high, that can never be buried with this human body but as those that will designate our rank, station and worth, as one by one we appear beyond the portal of a death or a grave, and are pronounced true and upright in that celestial Lodge above, that is called "paradise of God."

For all your love and care; for all that the wedded life and a happy home has been, in affection and sacredness, be praverful trusting, patient and calm, and listen, as if in heavenly accent, to hear her whisper, in words of eternal ecstacy and victory.—

"What a strange, delicious amazement is death!
To be without body and breathe without breath
I should laugh for joy, if you did not cry;—
Oh listen! Love lasts! Love never will die."

The choir closed the services with the beautiful chant, "It is Well."

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

The winter term is now fairly begun and we are glad to be in school again.

Several new studies are taken up this term.

Fred Boyd, of the class of '90, gave us a call last Monday morning.

A number of new pupils are enrolled this term.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Little Trixie this evening.

Remember the Quintette Club Concert next Saturday evening.

The winter term of school began last Monday in all the departments.

Reserved seats are now on sale at Adamson's for the Mendelssohn Concert.

Mrs. Spencer Lester of Detroit, was visiting at the old home a part of last week.

Fun and frolic, mirth and music all combined at the Little Trixie show this evening.

Louis Berger, after a two week's visit at the old home, returned to Elgin last Monday.

Last Sunday was a beautiful day and there was a large attendance at all the churches.

Jim Dunnigan has entered the Duchess of Avondale, at the Jackson Bench Show, to be held Jan. 10th to 14th.

It was soft enough on New Years Day, but the freeze up of Friday came very opportunely, and the roads are still good.

Remember the change in date of the Little Trixie show. The entertainment will off come this, Thursday, evening.

Frank Snedecor has bought Mr. Holdway's interest in the firm of Snedecor & Holdway. Ed. will remain with him however.

The Philadelphia Times Almanac for 1891 is at hand and is filled with useful statistics. It is almost as indispensable as a dictionary.

Milan Wheeler of Coldwater, spent last Saturday with friends in Tecumseh, returning home on the afternoon train. He should make longer visits.

The last number of the Winfield Monthly Herald is on our table. It is a neat little monthly published at Winfield, Kansas, by Rev. Geo. P. Wright.

A preliminary meeting to arrange for a farmers' Institute was held at the HERALD office last Saturday. Another meeting will be held next Saturday forenoon.

The annual renting of pews at the Baptist church took place last Friday. There was a good attendance throughout the afternoon and the financial results were fully up to the average.

The Mendelssohn Quintette Club is one of the very best musical combinations now traveling. All lovers of music should make their arrangements to attend, as they can rely upon a musical treat.

Stephen Burleson of Quincy, has been shaking hands with his Macon friends. He came out last Friday and returned Tuesday. Stephen is evidently prospering, as he has five children and a fine farm of 160 acres.

The Misses Nellie and Hattie Conklin gave their young friends a reception on New Years night, Thursday evening. A large company was present, notwithstanding the inclement weather, and a merry evening was spent by all.

Jas. Van Antwerp received a Christmas present from friends in California, consisting of a crazy quilt, which is one of the finest specimens of the quilt genus we ever saw. It is an elegant piece of needle work and must have cost an immense amount of labor.

A six o'clock tea and reception enlivened the parlors of Dr. and Mrs. H. L. Stewart on Thursday evening last. A large company assembled, and although it was stormy enough without there was plenty of good cheer within. It was a most pleasant occasion for all who participated.

A special service at the Presbyterian church last Sabbath morning drew a large congregation. The Pastor, Rev. W. H. Babbitt, delivered a discourse on the New Year, followed by the installation of elders P. S. McKinnon and Dr. Frost. The service throughout was of a deeply religious and interesting character.

Louis Berger is the possessor of an old newspaper relic. It is a number of the HERALD dated Feby. 12, 1857. R. T. Stocking was the publisher and B. L. Baxter editor at that time. Among the news from Chicago was a mention of a bridge being swept away by a freshet at Elgin, Ill. Louis took the paper home with him to show his Elgin friends.

While the editor of the Ann Arbor Courier was in Allegan recently, he ascertained that that enterprising city collected a thousand dollars by general tax every year to help the neighboring townships to build good roads leading into town. Almost impassable sand roads have been transformed into smooth hard highways, upon which any load may be drawn. The consequence is that Allegan is the great farmers' market to which produce is brought twelve and fifteen miles. A good example for some towns in this latitude.

Go and hear the Quintette Club next Saturday evening.

Miss DeLamater of Jackson, was the guest of Miss Nellie Anderson last week.

Miss Nettie Hendershot of Hastings visited Dr. Steinhoff's family last week.

J. R. Bennett spent most of his Christmas delivering the good things provided by the Adrian Benevolent Club for the needy poor. Many homes were gladdened by his visits and many hearts beat more joyously than they would have done had not "Uncle Joe" and his colleagues remembered their needs. Long may they all live to continue their good work.—The Messenger.

Last Tuesday forenoon Ed. Pawson of Franklin, was hauling a load of poles out of the woods, riding on top of the load. While driving over a side hill the load tipped over, and he struck on top of a log, some of the poles rolling upon him. He was very badly hurt. L. E. Taylor came down after Dr. North who went up there post haste. The Doctor says that although badly hurt, his symptoms at present are very favorable.

Hood's Calendar for 1891 is out and it is certainly a beautiful production of the lithographers' and printers' arts. The subject represents three children playing musical instruments, and the positions, expressions, coloring and general finish make a most charming picture. But to be appreciated it must be seen. Ask your druggist for Hood's Sarsaparilla Calandar, or send six cents in stamps for one copy, or ten cents for two, to C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

The latest discovered metal, lighter than hard wood and stronger than steel. The Michigan Stove Co., after a series of scientific experiments, are enabled to make an admixture of this wonderful metal with their regular high grade iron, with the result of producing smooth castings, additional strength, and preventing cracking; thereby rendering stoves made of this admixture more durable than WROUGHT IRON or STEEL. The "GARLAND," which are the product of this Co., are the only stoves made having that advantage. Election Bill Fight

Will Likely Be Settled This Week.

AN ATTEMPT WILL BE MADE TO "SIT OUT" THE BILL.

The Plan May Be to Keep a Republican Quorum at Hand, and Thus Prevent Adjournment Until the Democrats Give Up From Weariness.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—The Senate met at noon today and resumed the regular business of the session which has been suspended since Wednesday last. The Monday session will not be very long as it is the desire of the Republican senators to call a caucus during the afternoon to determine on an order of business for the week. When the Senate adjourned Wednesday there was pending an appeal taken by Mr. Morgan from a decision of the chair that it was not in order for him to move to take up a resolution offered by him some time ago relating to the elections bill. Mr. Morgan had the floor to address the Senate indefinitely on the subject of this appeal. When the matter comes before the Senate in the morning hour Monday Mr. Sherman expects to move to lay the appeal on the table so as to cut off debate on it.

It is generally expected that the long delayed fight on the elections bill will be precipitated this week. It is not determined in what form it will come. The Republican caucus in the afternoon will outline the programme. A proposition will be made to the caucus to try the test of endurance—to attempt to "sit out" the bill, day and night, holding a quorum of Republican senators in the Senate chamber and cloak rooms to prevent an adjournment and to be ready to vote on the bill and pass it whenever the Democrats give up through sheer weariness. Opposed to this will be the proposition to change the rules and provide for calling the previous question. In event of the adoption of either of these propositions, it is to be expected that the Senate will hold prolonged sessions, for it will be necessary to put through the proposed change in the rules by almost the same tactics as are proposed for passing the bill without it.

Many of the members of the House who left Washington before Christmas to spend the holidays elsewhere, have returned to the city and it is likely there will be a quorum when the House meets today. Under the rules of the House Monday will be individual suspension day when members may call up measures for passage under suspension of the rules. From the action of Democratic members last week in order to have the House adjourn until Tuesday, thus skipping suspension day, it would seem that there will be considerable opposition to the passage of the measures called up Monday and if there is no quorum it is likely no business will be transacted.

TESTING THE LYMPH.

Progress of the Experiments in New York City.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—The effects of Dr. Koch's lymph in cases of lupus, bone tuberculosis and tuberculosis of the glands, has been so thoroughly tested that interest in the results of the treatment of such cases at the various hospitals in this city has given place to an even greater interest as to the effects of the lymph in cases of phthisis.

During the first experimental treatments the physicians greatly preferred cases of lupus or tubercular bone diseases because the reactionary symptoms were more clearly defined and the results more pronounced and satisfactory. Now, however, lay and professional interest has reverted to the primary disease, consumption, for which the fluid was supposed to be almost a specific. Perhaps the interest in cases of consumption is now all the greater because of the fact that the lymph is more vigorous and even more dangerous in phthisis than in other tubercular diseases. The most gratifying results have followed the treatment of phthisis cases at Bellevue hospital.

The advanced cases there were inoculated at first with one-fourth of a milligramme of the lymph, the dose being gradually increased as the violence of the reactionary symptoms subsided. The eleven phthisis cases were weighed on Friday, showing an average increase in weight for each patient of something over three pounds. This is regarded as a particularly favorable result, in view of the fact that the time of treatment, and the patients are being detained only as a precautionary measure. Dr. Loomis, of the Board of Health, and other doctors do not believe in the existence of any cases of leprosy in the city as has been reported. So far as known there is no case of leprosy under the lymph treatment in New York

DEMPSEY-FITZSIMMONS MILL.

Interest in the Coming Fight is Becoming Intense.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 5.—The interest in the coming Dempsey-Fitzsimmons fight is becoming intense, and indications are that the largest crowd that ever attended a mill in this city will be present at the Olympic club rooms on the night of the fight—January 14. The contest committee of the club are doing all in their power to make the patrons of the club comfortable, and no expense is being spared to make the approaching battle the best managed affair of the kind ever reported in the annals of pugilism.

The referee will be chosen a couple of days before the fight, and he will be a prominent club member.

The World's Money.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—The International Monetary conference has been called to meet at the Diplomatic chamber of the department of state, at 12 o'clock on Wednesday next, when Secretary Blaine will deliver an address of welcome. Subsequent meetings of the conference will be held in the parlors of the Arlington hotel. Since the publication of delegates appointed, a few days ago, notice has been received of the appointment of Mr. H. A. P. Carter to represent the Hawaiian kingdom; Mr. Hannibal Price to represent the republic of Hayti, and Senor Don R. W. Stevens, the republic of Honduras.

THE NEW YORK FIRE.

Later Estimates of the Great Conflagration of Theaters.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—The latest estimates of the fire losses are somewhat smaller than first given out in the confusion of the fire. They are now placed at about $575,000, insured mostly in English companies. The American companies involved are the Home, German-American, Greenwich, Mutual Armstrong and Fire Association of New York. Harry Miner said today he would rebuild the Fifth avenue theater within sixty days, and have a house ready for the return of the Kendalls. Every wall of the theater will have to be taken down. A later investigation greatly lessens the loss on Herrmann's theatre. The chief damage in the auditorium was done by water to the plush covered chairs, carpets, etc. It is believed a few hundred dollars will cover this. Much injury was done on the stage and in the property rooms. The latter are a complete wreck. There are a few indications of fire, but water had been poured in a deluge. Mme. Hermann said: "I expect we can give a performance next Monday night. Much of the paraphernalia of Professor Hermann has been destroyed, but enough is left to enable him to continue his performances. Much of the apparatus with which he performed his tricks has been ruined."

The Fifth avenue theater, as seen now, consists of a decorated entrance on Twenty-eighth street and four half demolished walls in the interior of the block. It was completely wrecked. Firemen were still pouring water into the ruins. Rumors that several firemen lost their lives are denied by the authorities. The Sturtevant house seems to have suffered less than was at first reported. The room clerk said that the lower rooms would be cleared up immediately and put in readiness for guests. Regular business of the hotel would not be interfered with he said. Two hundred guests were at the hotel that night, and he thought that one hundred and fifty could be accommodated.

The Sun says the fire losses are grossly exaggerated and the total will not exceed two hundred thousand dollars. The origin of the fire is still a mystery. The crossing of the electric light wires and cigarette smoking are the principal theories advanced. Harry C. Miner said his theatre was insured for $20,000. It was thought for a time that Miner's insurance policy, with the upward of $3,000 cash, were destroyed. The safe in which they had been placed went down in the ruins of the theatre, but they were subsequently recovered.

COLLARED THE CASH.

CHARLES WILLIS, OF STOCKBRIDGE, MASS., IS CAUGHT,

And Confesses to Have Taken Money in Small Sums From His Employers for More Than Twelve Years—Amount of His Stealing.

STOCKBRIDGE, MASS., Jan. 5.—Charles Willis, for fifteen years treasurer of the Stockbridge Savings bank, is a defaulter. Defalcations amounting to $23,300 have been brought to light so far, and further stealings are expected to be disclosed as the examinations of his accounts proceed. The stealing has been carried on regularly for more than 12 years, small amounts being taken at a time. The examination was due to the suspicion and investigation of Bank Examiner Chapman, to whom Willis made a full confession. There is much excitement in the town as the bank was already in a critical position as a result of the Dunham note recently found among its assets. The expiring injunction upon it has been continued indefinitely. The state commissioner of savings banks will send a man to take charge of the institution.

JOKE ON THE PRINCE OF WALES.

How He Killed a Lion in British India.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—There is a story going the rounds which relates to his royal highness, the Prince of Wales, and a sporting and art exhibition now going on at King's Lynn, for the benefit of the West Norfolk fox hounds. Among the trophies exhibited is the skin of a lion said to have been shot by the Prince of Wales in India. The true story of the lion, as told by a military officer, who was there, is that the unhappy animal was caught in a pit especially prepared for it by the natives and kept there until the arrival of the prince who had been specially invited to administer the coup de grace. This was not done as speedily as it might have been, considering that the prince is a patron of the royal society for the prevention of cruelty to animals. However, as the lion was probably unconscious before the prince arrived, his natural trepidation before the king of beasts, even helpless at the bottom of a pit, could not have added much to its sufferings. Some of the prince's cynical friends have often expressed the hope that the British lion will always have a fairer fighting chance than the unhappy victim of his prowess whose skin is exposed to the open-mouthed rustics of Kings Lynn.

HURLED TO DEATH.

Three Men Struck by a Panhandle Train.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 5.—Last evening James Henderson, aged 38, married, residing on Thirty-third street, Pittsburg; Charles O'Hara, aged 55, married, residing in Philadelphia, and an unknown man, were run down by an east bound passenger train on the Pennsylvania railroad near the Thirty-third street crossing. The unknown man was instantly killed. Henderson received fatal injuries. O'Hara is seriously hurt but may recover. The men were walking on the track at the time of the accident. O'Harra refuses to give the house number or street on which he resides in Philadelphia.

FIFTY-TWO SHOTS.

Desperate Battle With Illicit Whisky Men.

GAINESVILLE, TEX., Jan. 5.—Deputy Marshal Tom Lily has just had a desperate battle with three whisky peddlers in the Chickasaw Nation, while trying to arrest them. Fifty shots were fired and two of the pedlders were killed and a third fatally wounded. Lily was dangerously hurt.

Entertained the President.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Secretary Blaine entertained the president and a number of prominent officials at dinner at his residence Saturday night.

In the Bad Lands.

The Troops Are Reported to Have Met Defeat.

A SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL AT LINCOLN, NEB.

Reports That the Redskins Drove Back the Soldiers in the Engagement, and a Number of Them Were Killed.

LINCOLN, NEB., Jan. 5.—Specials to the Journal, dated the second, from Pine Ridge, give more definite rumors relative to the reported engagement between General Carr's command and the Indians in the Bad Lands. These would indicate that the troops had been driven back and a number killed, but the reports cannot be considered authentic. Scouts who have returned from other hostile camps, however, bring anything but reassuring news. The Indians will not listen to peace propositions, and a small detachment of troops have been sent to the scene of Monday's battle on Wounded Knee, where many bodies of the Indians slain remain yet. These will be either buried on the ground or brought to the agency.

The party sent out to bring in the dead bodies found 108 lying on the field. An attempt was made to remove the dead to Pine Ridge Agency, but before the task was completed the rescuing party was attacked by a roving band of hostiles and driven away.

The soldiers in the hospital are doing nicely, physicians predicting the recovery of all.

CHARGE OF COWARDICE.

General Brooks Gets a Scoring From Brave General Miles.

GORDON, NEB., Jan. 5.—A special from Pine Ridge says: Two troops of the Ninth cavalry and two of the Eighth infantry reached the battlefield at Wounded Knee Friday afternoon. They are on their way to this place from the Rosebud agency, but will camp at Wounded Knee for a couple of days to protect a burial party that left the post Saturday morning. The Indians will be buried at government expense in a long trench. General Miles is concentrating troops with his usual rapidity, and Pine Ridge is now in a well protected condition. One company of infantry has been placed on each side, beyond the agency buildings, and earth works were thrown up. Beyond this is a line of friendly Indian pickets. It is understood that General Miles opened fire on Brooke in language that was terse and emphatic. It is current talk that one of the officers here called Brooke a coward and was placed under arrest, only to be promptly released by Miles. Red Cloud sends in a message, saying: "Take the troops away. Leave us as we were years ago." Little Wound seconds Red Cloud's motion. Isaac Miller, a white man, was killed Friday on Lower White Clay creek.

Four Indians Killed.

DENVER, COL., Jan. 5.—A special from Cheyenne, Wyo., to the Rocky Mountain News says: A special from White River gives an account of the fight between Captain John Kerr's K. troop, Sixth cavalry, and a party of Indians. Four of the Indians were killed, with no loss to the troops.

THE CRYSTAL SLIPPER

Leaves Chicago After a Long Series of Presentations.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—Last night the Crystal Slipper, which had its original production at the Chicago opera house in the summer of 1889, bade farewell to Chicago. An immense audience lingered after the curtain had fallen and joined in singing Auld Lang Syne. In response to a tumult of calls the curtain rose, disclosing the leading members of the company arranged in a tableau on the stage, and for half an hour the affair took on the character of an impromptu reception of the actors by the audience. During the thirty-seven weeks that the production has been seen in Chicago, no less than $376,000 have passed into the box office.

BRUTALITY ON SHIPBOARD.

Knocking Men Down When They Are Too Sick to Work.

HALIFAX, N. S., Jan. 3.—The evidence of Lorenzo Ring in his charge of brutality against the officers of the British ship Selkirk has been taken to the hospital where Ring is under treatment. He states that the captain knocked him down with a blow because he would not take his turn at the wheel, and that that officer assaulted him on several occasions because he did not perform his duties as quickly as the captain thought he should. The first mate also assaulted him with a belaying pin and hurt him so severely that he was unable to walk and had to crawl around on his hands and knees. He was also refused food and made to suffer intensely from hunger as well as from his injuries.

AT THE MERCY OF BURGLARS.

Crooks Take Charge of Chicago—More Burglaries There.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—Business houses in the down town district are apparently at the mercy of an organized gang of expert safe robbers. Three more robberies were reported to the police yesterday morning, the raid this time being made on South Water street, but only $225 and a number of mileage tickets were secured.

Miss Abell Takes the Veil.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Miss Mary Abell, daughter of the late A. S. Abell, of Baltimore, has taken the white veil at the Georgetown convent. The chapel was elaborately decorated for the occasion. The ceremony was performed by Cardinal Gibbons, attended by Bishop Curtis and a number of prominent priests. Miss Abell was named "Sister Mary Joseph" in religion. After the ceremony the company to the number of 150 were entertained at breakfast.

A MINE DISASTER.

Many Miners Fall Victims of an Explosion.

VIENNA, Jan. 5.—An explosion of fire damp has occurred in the Trinity pit near Ostrau. Fifteen bodies have been taken out of the pit and twenty-four men are missing, and are supposed to have perished.

WHAT IS SCROFULA

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which developes ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or the many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors;" which fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. Being the most ancient, it is most general of all diseases or affections, very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can It Be CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. Some of these cures are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula, be sure to try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"My daughter Mary was afflicted with scrofulous sore neck from the time she was 22 months old till she became six years of age. Lumps formed in her neck, and one of them after growing to the size of a pigeon's egg, became a running sore for over three years. We gave her Hood's Sarsaparilla, when the lump and all indications of scrofula entirely disappeared, and now she seems to be a healthy child." J. S. CARLILE, Nauright, N. J.

THE FARMERS' PAGE.

A GREAT REFORM MOVEMENT.

The Legislature of Kansas at its last session appointed a committee to revise the statutes, and we learn that the committee has completed its work; and according to the newspaper accounts their report is the most direct and practical effort to reform abuses and lessen the burdens of taxation that has been made in any legislative body for many years. It recommends the abolishment of many unnecessary offices, and the cutting down of salaries of public offices to the standard of compensation paid for similar service in general business. It makes a sweeping out on state, county and municipal advertising, which there, as in Ohio, has paid three or four times as much as current business rates. It makes a large reduction in the number of judges of the circuit courts, etc., etc.

All these reforms are needed in Ohio, and as they are obviously just and practicable methods for reducing the burdens of taxation, and diminishing the means available for corrupting voters at the elections, it is to be hoped that our farmers will make a common cause in urging their adoption by the Legislature of Ohio.

Let every sub-ordinate grange, every alliance organization, every agricultural institute, and finally, every country citizen, declare in favor of this most just and necessary manner of reform.

T. C. JONES.

Delaware County, O.

THE FLORIDA ALLIANCE MEETING.

The following digest of the action of the meeting of the National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union at Ocala Fla., was crowded over from last week:

1. We demand the abolition of national banks. We demand that the government shall establish sub-treasuries or depositories in the several States which shall loan money direct to the people at a low rate of interest, not to exceed two per cent. per annum on non-perishable farm products, and also upon real estate with proper limitations upon the quantity of land and amount of money. We demand that the amount of the circulating medium be speedily increased to not less than $50 per capita.

2. We demand that Congress shall pass laws as shall effectually prevent the dealing in futures on all agricultural and mechanical productions; preserving a stringent system of procedure in trials, such as shall secure the prompt conviction and imposition of such penalties as shall secure the most perfect compliance with the law.

3. We condemn the Silver bill recently passed by Congress, and demand in lieu thereof the free and unlimited coinage of silver.

4. We demand the passage of laws prohibiting alien ownership of land and that Congress take prompt action to devise some plan to obtain all lands now owned by aliens and foreign syndicates, and that all lands now held by railroads and other corporations in excess of such as is actually used and needed by them, be reclaimed by the Government and held for actual settlers only.

5. Believing in the doctrine of equal rights to all, and special privileges to none, we demand that our national legislation shall be so framed in the future as not to build up one industry at the expense of another, and we further demand the removal of the existing heavy tariff tax from the necessaries of life that the poor of our land must have. We further demand a just and equitable system of graduated tax on incomes. We believe that the money of the country should be kept as much as possible in the hands of the people, and hence we demand that all national and state revenues shall be limited to the necessary expenses of the Government economically and honestly administered.

6. We demand the most rigid, honest and just state and national governmental control and supervision of the means of public communication and transportation, and if this control and supervision does not remove the abuses now existing, we demand Government ownership of such means of communication and transportation.

CENTRAL OHIO FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

The institute was held at Westerville O., December 17 and 18. The weather was not favorable on the first day for a large attendance, but the second day was very pleasant and the attendance was greater (although not so large as some years), with the interest great.

There seems to be a feeling among farmers who live on poor soil farms that they must make a change in their mode of tilling and the kind of produce to raise. Corn and hogs have reigned for many years, but now the demands of the people are for more fruit; hence the lectures of Waldo F. Brown at our institute, on the garden and the orchard, were listened to with the greatest interest.

Professor Clarence M. Wood, of the Ohio Experiment Station, explained in his lecture how the fruit is destroyed by insects, and the remedy—spraying the apple, peach and plum trees soon after the fruit is formed with a solution of Paris green in water, four ounces of Paris green to fifty gallons of water.

A number of interesting talks were had on butter making; care of cows, tile draining and care of meadows.

The hay market of the city of Columbus was freely discussed. This market place was described by Mr. F. P. Dill, a Franklin county farmer who sells large quantities of hay each year. The market is situated on the west side, and the police of the city will not allow any wagons loaded with hay to stop on any of the streets for more than fifteen minutes, so that at times after a man has sold his load of hay and is waiting for the purchaser to come and go with him to the stable a policeman will order the driver to move on, and when the driver does not know the location of the purchaser's barn he misses the sale made, and is compelled to look for another purchaser.

FOR FREE WOOL.

A High Protection Paper Wants Free Wool—It Warns the Wool Grower to Stand From Under—Let the Manufacturer Also Shell Out.

The Boston Journal of Commerce is a high protection paper which does not believe in a duty on wool. In a recent number it comments on the westward movement of population as shown by the census, and finds in that movement "an exemplification of the course of settlement and development of a country."

That course of settlement and development it describes in words which it quotes from somebody as follows: "After the hunter, trapper and prospector, the herdsman follows, and for a time the raising of cattle is the chief industry. As settlement becomes less sparse, this is followed by agriculture, which, in its turn, as the population becomes more dense, is succeeded by manufactures."

The Journal makes this the text from which to read the wool grower's brief lesson. "Here is an expression of a fact," it says, "that is entirely ignored by the wool-grower in his struggle against the inevitable course of natural events. He is made to believe that pioneer occupations can live and thrive by the side of those that are fostered by density of population and a more civilized order of surroundings. It is because of these false ideas that cause him to be constantly clamoring for Government protection against the inroads of natural forces that denote social and industrial progress."

In other words, Massachusetts wants free wool for her mills, for she is smart enough to see what a great boon to her industries free wool would be. The recent election in that State, which resulted in a Democratic majority in the Congressional delegation of the State for the first time in more than thirty years, is an emphatic expression of the New England demand for free raw materials, above all for free wool.

It will be only a few years before wool is entirely free, and then the 63,000,000 people of this country will at once have the advantage of cheaper and better clothing—an advantage with which the entire wool-growing industry of the country does not for a moment deserve to be compared. The wool product of the country does not amount to more than two per cent. of our agricultural products; and our native wool is considerably less than half of our yearly consumption. In regard to our wool-growing industry, the one question which always hits the bull's eye is, why should 63,000,000 people be made to pay a high tariff tax on wool for the benefit of the insignificant number who grow wool?

The Benton Journal of Commerce is right; the duty on wool must go. But the Journal as a protectionist paper and on protection grounds, can not make out a strong case against the wool-grower. The latter has a perfect right to the same protection that the Journal demands for the manufacturer, and when the grower is put on a basis of competition with the whole world he will not be thought unreasonable if he asks that the manufacturer should surrender some of his protection also.

When the Journal cries out against the wool-grower for "constantly clamoring for Government protection against the inroads of natural forces," it must remember that the wool-grower is not alone in that clamor. The tendency of the time is toward the cheapening of all manufactured products as the result of invention and improved methods of manufacture and transportation. When our manufacturers ask to be exempted from the play of this cheapening tendency, they, too, are "clamoring for Government protection against the inroads of natural forces;" and it is only a matter of simple justice that when the emancipation of industry commences the good work should go forward along the whole line. Let us have cheaper wool; but let us also have cheaper coats—and no fear that these cheaper coats will "necessarily involve a cheaper man and woman beneath the coat," as our wise President has expressed it.

THE LEAD TAX.

A Case of Gains For the Few and Losses For the Many—Manipulations of the Trusts and Rings—Prices Which Have Been "McKinleyed."

The New York Press prints the following in an editorial to show the beneficial effect of the McKinley tariff on lead: "At Socorro, N. M., a town that was ruined by free trade in Mexican lead, three hundred extra men have been placed at work at the smelter and the Eagle lead mines (this mine has been shut down for three years) at $3.50 per day, and this result is but a sample of many other places. A very conservative estimate places the number of men in Arizona and New Mexico, that were idle when the McKinley bill was passed and are now employed, at 10,000, and that the output of their labors will swell the production to the amount of $7,500,000 annually."

Whereupon the Press remarks: "The McKinley bill is working out practical results in spite of the election."

Let us see what those "practical results" are in the case of lead.

In the old tariff law there was a duty on lead ores, but no duty on the lead contained in silver ores. Thus a large quantity of lead ores came in from Mexico in silver ores, these ores being smelted in vast quantities in Kansas City and other places, and giving employment to thousands of men. These ores are what are called fluxing ores, and are needed in smelting our dry lead ores. Most of our ores are dry ores, and all the owners of mines producing such ores were very anxious to have the Mexican fluxing ores continue to come in free.

There is, however, a small but powerful clique in Colorado, known as the "carbonate ring," who own what are called the Carbonate Lead Mines.

It was in the interest of this ring to keep out the fluxing ores. In order to secure this result they contributed in 1888 a very large amount of "fat" to Quay and Dudley's "blocks-of-five" corruption fund, it being understood by outsiders that the ring was to be duly recompensed when the new Administration came into power at Washington.

This is what actually happened. After the Harrison Administration came in there was a squabble on the part of the carbonate ring to get silver-lead ores put on the dutiable list by the Treasury Department.

A decision was given by Secretary Windom which restricted the importation of the Mexican ores, and the price of lead began at once to advance from the old figure of 3¾ cents a pound. Last May the paragraph in the McKinley bill imposing a duty of 1½ cents a pound on all the lead in silver-lead fluxing ores brought in from Mexico was passed in the House, after a sharp debate, and the ring became confident that if a tariff law should be enacted it would impose such a duty. Thereupon the price again began to advance. Just before the vote on this paragraph the price in Chicago and St. Louis was 3½ to 4 cents. The following week it was 4¼ cents. It is now about 5 cents.

Now the question for such high tariff organs as the Press to answer is this: Where is the profit to the country at large in paying 2¼ cents a pound higher for its lead in order that a few hundred or thousand miners in Arizona and New Mexico may get higher wages? Is it economy? Would any intelligent farmer or business man conduct his affairs on such a principle?

The duty on lead played directly into the hands of the lead trust. By causing a scarcity of lead it enabled the trust to put up prices. There was actually a lead famine. On October 4 the New York Engineering and Mining Journal said:

The lead famine still continues, and that it is owing to the shortness of supply in the United States of suitable smelting material and fluxing ores there is no question of doubt from the state of affairs now existing in Leadville, Col. This district, when the discussion was going on as to whether Mexican fluxing ores were admitted or not, was represented by those opposing the admission as being capable of furnishing not only sufficient for its own smelting industry but a large surplus for smelters established elsewhere. Now Leadville is actually importing Mexican fluxing ores in spite of the long haul and high price, to keep her own smelters going!

In recent years there have been scarcely any importations of pig lead, the old duty being prohibitory; but now that the home market price has gone so high, importations have again set in, notwithstanding the duty of two cents a pound. For the week ended November 15 about 450,000 pounds were entered at New York.

The lead duty is bearing its legitimate tariff fruit in building up trusts. A recent number of the Metal Worker says:

The lead business of the country is rapidly drifting into the control of a few organizations. The evidences of success of the lead trust, the combination of the white lead interests, with two smelting plants and one refinery allied with it, has given an encouragement to others. It is true that the grand centralization scheme of the other smelters and refiners fell through completely, but since then the two leading Montana smelting works at Great Falls and at Helena have combined, and fused with them is the large new refinery which is just being completed at Chicago. Some of the group of capitalists who are in control of this combination own also the Colorado Smelting Company at Pueblo and possess mining property in that State. Others are very largely identified with mining interests in Montana and the Cœur d'Alene region, in Idaho.

The white lead trust has also been advancing the price of white lead, which is used in making paint. About the first of October the price of white lead was 6½ cents a pound against 4 cents in England. Under date of November 11 the trust sent out a circular announcing "an increase in prices." It gives the rate of white lead purchased in kegs in lots of less than 1,000 pounds, at 7¾ cents net (that is, without any trade discount). If bought in 25-pound tin pails, 8¼ cents per pound; if in 5-pound tin cans 10¾ cents. The price of white lead in the United States at the present time, if in kegs, is, therefore, 93¾ per cent. in excess of the foreign price; if in 25-pound tin-pails, 106¼ per cent., and if in 5-pound tin cans over 150 per cent., less a fair allowance for the difference in the cost of the tin in this country and Europe.

And in answer to facts like these the protectionist organ points us to the fact that "three hundred extra men have been placed at work" at Socorro, N. M.

Would it not be a good thing to turn loose a few bloodthirsty fool-killers in this country?

"A SLY DIG."

The Secretary of State Permits a Stab at the McKinley Bill to Go Into His Reports.

The State Department at Washington issues every month a stout pamphlet entitled, "Reports from the Consuls of the United States." James G. Blaine being now Secretary of State is responsible for what goes into these reports.

The present attitude of the Secretary to his party's tariff policy lends a curious interest to the report on the new Russian customs tariff decree, which was sent to the State Department by George W. Wurts, secretary of the United States Legation at St. Petersburg. This report is printed, evidently with the approval of Mr. Blaine, in a recent number of the Consular reports.

In his report Mr. Wurts says:

"The new tariff will be regarded abroad as prohibitory for a number of articles already enormously taxed at the Russian custom house, and many of them such as Russia cannot produce; or, if so, of a quality so inferior as scarcely to be marketable; such, for example, as wine, many articles of luxury, considered by the educated classes as necessaries, and others. Russia can not yet produce all her necessaries; and to practically exclude them by increase of tariff is a questionable policy in a country so greatly dependent upon importations from abroad."

In condemning the tariff decree of the Czar in Russia Mr. Wurts plainly condemns the McKinley tariff put through by the "American Czar," which is built entirely on the Russian principle of exclusion. Did Mr. Blaine permit these words to go into the official reports in order to express the same contempt for McKinleyism which he expressed so forcibly last spring when he crushed in his fine silk hat and dashed it against the wall? Mr. Wurts evidently knows Blaine's opinion of McKinleyism.

A Sample Infant Industry.

Lard, pressed meats, vegetables and fruits preserved in tin all go up in price. The children's appetites are taxed that a Pittsburgh syndicate may have the chance to think over whether there is enough in it to start a plant and import a few hundred Welsh laborers.—Kansas City Times.

MERIT WINS.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. Ayer's

Sarsaparilla. Your life, or that of some one near and dear to you, may depend on the use of this well-approved remedy in preference to any other preparation of similar name. It is compounded of Honduras sarsaparilla (the variety most rich in curative properties), stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, and the iodides. The process of manufacture is original, skilful, scrupulously clean, and such as to secure the very best medicinal qualities of each ingredient. This medicine is not boiled nor heated, and is, therefore, not a decoction; but it is a compound extract, obtained by a method exclusively our own, of the best and most powerful alteratives, tonics, and diuretics known to pharmacy. For the last forty years, Ayer's has been the standard blood-purifier of the world—no other approaching it in popular confidence or universal demand. Its formula is approved by the leading physicians and druggists. Being pure and highly concentrated, it is the most economical of any possible blood medicine. Every purchaser of Sarsaparilla should insist upon having this preparation and see that each bottle bears the well-known name of

J. C. Ayer & Co.,
Lowell, Mass.

In every quarter of the globe Ayer's Sarsaparilla is proved to be the best remedy for all diseases of the blood. Lowell druggists unite in testifying to the superior excellence of this medicine and to its great popularity in the city of its manufacture.

Clinton Column.

CLINTON, MICH., JAN. 8, 1891.

Neil Williams resumed college duties this week.

Miss Bertie Johnston spent last week in Manchester.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Embler visited Manchester friends last week.

Miss Lou McDermott, of Detroit, spent a few days here last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Dow Draper are visiting friends in Jackson this week.

Mrs. Chas. Nase gave a delightful pedro party last Tuesday evening.

The Misses Farrell, of Manchester, visited Miss Ella Smith part of last week.

Mrs. Mary Codling has been quite sick for about two weeks, but is on the gain.

Mrs. George Light and daughter returned to their home in Chicago Monday.

Miss Florence Rowland, of Tecumseh, spent Saturday and Sunday with Mrs. B. F. Thompson.

Miss Clyde Marsteller returned to St. Thomas, Ont., last Thursday, after a three weeks' vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Hulett returned from their trip in the northern part of the State last Saturday.

C. S. Burroughs visited Detroit Monday, and Toledo Tuesday, in the interest of his gum business.

Mrs. Lena Webber and children, of Chelsea, have been visiting at her father's, Frank Kirchgessner's.

Mrs. Louise Clark and Miss Laura Clark left Monday for Ann Arbor, after a visit here of two weeks.

Miss Mae Morey was unable to attend to school duties last Monday. Miss Ella Morey took her place.

Miss Ella Jackson, of Tecumseh, spent Tuesday and Wednesday of this week with Mrs. F. D. Lancaster.

Mrs. Franklin Bender, who has been visiting Mrs. Will Katner, returned to Ceresco the latter part of this week.

Chas. Thompson is again among friends here, the time for which he engaged to work for Mr. Spayde having expired.

F. D. Lancaster has been suffering this week with a severe attack of la grippe. He has the sympathy of a suffering multitude.

At a meeting of the Common Council last Monday night George Belding was reinstated in his old position as janitor of the town hall.

Mrs. Roff was quite badly burned about the face and hands one day last week, while attemptidg to remove a jug of hot water from the stove.

Miss Emma Henderson, who came here last week from Racine, Wis., will remain until spring and keep house for her sisters, Lizzie and Anna.

School opened this week Monday with a full attendance. Everything seems in good running order and the prospects never were better for a successful term.

J. T. Clark and Ned Newcomb drove to Milan last Saturday, Mr Newcomb taking the train there for Ann Arbor. Mrs. Newcomb left here on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Burroughs attended the Club party at Manchester last Friday evening, as guests of Dr. and Mrs. E. M. Conklin. They report a very pleasant time.

Miss Libbie Newcomb, of Bay City, has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. J. T. Clark, for a few days. Miss Newcomb has recently been made superintendent of a hospital that was lately established at Bay City.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Hall had a narrow escape from death last week Wednesday night from coal gas which escaped from their round oak coal stove. When they awoke the house was filled with the gas and they were nearly suffocated, but soon recovered on obtaining fresh air. They do not wish to have the experiment repeated.

The concert given by the New York Symphony Club last Thursday evening was of a very high order from commencement to ends and intensely enjoyed by all who were fortunate enough to hear it. The hall was filled to its utmost capacity, notwithstand the extremely unpleasant weather. Mr. Warren G. Richards, as an impersonator and humorist, is one of the best we have ever had here and the other performers sustained their parts equally well.

The ladies of St. John's Church give an entertainment on Thursday and Friday evenings of this week. The first part consists of music, vocal and instrumental, tableaux, and "An Artist's Studio." The second part will be presented by Mrs. Jarley and her inimitable wax works, all new figures. The ladies of this society have gained the enviable reputation of giving first-class entertainments and no doubt will sustain it in this case. The price of admission is ten cents to all.

"What, you coughing yet my friend?" "Of course! my cold is no better." "Well, don't stand on the order of going, but go to the druggist and get a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, quick." He went, and he was straightway made happy.

MACON CHIT CHAT.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Hendershot spent the holidays visiting friends at Lima, Ohio.

"My taxes are the lowest that they have been in several years," is the general comment of the tax-payer.

Mr. and Mrs. Mort Hendershot of Manchester, Mich, spent New Year's week visiting their relatives in this vicinity.

Will Langan's new barn idly approaching completion, and is a much needed and useful improvement to his place.

Sam Hatch made glad the hearts of his many friends and his own family by spending a ten days vacation with them during the holidays.

Services will be held 10:30 a. m. at the Reform Church every Sunday morning during the month of January. The new pastor Rev. Mr. Gulick is making hosts of friends and preaching excellent sermons.

It is rumored that Mr. James Hatch will build a new house for his son Mills in the spring. The rumor is none too good to be true for Mr. Hatch is just the man to do a right generous thing like that.

Sylvester Thomas is making business move right along with his lumber sawing machine. The largest job he has done yet is for Wm. H. Osborne, and includes one hundred and twenty thousand feet of lumber.

One of the most enjoyable occasions of the season was the "map social" held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Pennington on Friday evening Dec. 26th, 1890. Ample amusement was afforded by the lady pinning the name of a state on her shoulder and the confused young man, sometimes an old one beating his caliber to find out what the capital of that certain state was that he might buy it quick. Mrs. Pennington's entertainment was thoroughly enjoyed and netted the sum of $12,00 for the treasury of the W. C. T. U.

MANCHESTER MATTERS.

Mrs. Myra Craft, from Ohio, visited her former acquaintances here last week.

Mrs. F. Williams is no better. Her physician, Dr. E. N. Palmer, comes from Brooklyn twice a week to see her.

The rain on New Year's day was a benefit to our wells and cisterns if not to the roads.

Lizzie Allen returned to her home in Saginaw City, last Tuesday, after a week's visit with relatives in this vicinity.

Miss Lucy English spent a part of last week and the present one, at Litchfield, the guest of her Curtiss cousins.

Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Baldwin came home on Friday last from a trip to Lawrence, VanBuren Co., to see their son, Dr. Zell L. Baldwin.

Tramps are numerous. Three stayed over night in James Lamb's barn one night last week.

Mrs. T. J. Besimer and son Anson, returned Saturday to Jackson, after a short visit at her father's, Matthew Prout's.

The Rev. I. L. Case contemplates giving a lecture on the mode of living at the South, a subject upon which he is well qualified to speak, having lived there for many years. The proceeds will be used for the benefit of the Universalist Sunday-school.

NORTHERN LENAWEE CLUB.

The first meeting of the Northern Lenawee Farmers' Club was held at the residence of W. B. Keyser, Friday evening, Jan. 2nd. Although the attendance was not large, the enthusiasm was unabated, and one of the most interesting meetings in the history of the Club was the result. It being unanimously agreed to continue the meetings once a month for the ensuing year. Three delegates, J. F. N. Bowen, Chas. McNiel and Mrs. S. P. Sheldon, were appointed to confer with similar committees from the other organizations in reference to a Farmers' Institute. A short but interesting literary program was listened to, after which the question box was opened and for two hours every one tried to convince his fellowmen that there are two sides to every question, and that he was on the right side. The club adjourned to meet at J. F. N. Bowen's, Jan. 23rd, with a new line of program which will be given later.

TIPTON ASSOCIATION P. OF I.

The annual meeting of this Association will be held in their hall, on Tuesday evening, Jan. 13th, 1891, at which time officers for the ensuing year will be elected and other important business transacted.

We will also discuss the commercial union of the P. of I., which has recently been organized by the Grand Association.

We request every member of our order to be present and acquaint yourselves with this important branch of our work.

Every member come. You may be benefited financially by this company.

C. H. BRAMBLE.

IF YOUR HOUSE IS ON FIRE

You put water on the burning timbers, not on the smoke. And if you have catarrh you should attack the disease in the blood, not in your nose. Remove the impure cause and the local effect subsides. To do this, take Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier, which radically and permanently cures catarrh. It also strengthens the nerves. Be sure to get only Hood's Sarsaparilla.

If there were called a meeting of babies and young children and the question put to vote "who was their greatest benefactor" the loud and unanimous vote would be "Dr. Bull," for he gave us his wonderful "Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup."

"Hello! Tom. Glad to see you, old fellow! It's almost ten years since we were married. Sit down; let's have an experience meeting. How's the wife?"

"Oh! she's so-so, same as usual, always wanting something I can't afford."

"Well, we all want something more than we've got. Don't you?"

"Yes: but I guess 'want will be my master.' I started to keep down expenses; and now Lil says I'm 'mean,' and she's tired of saving and never having anything to show for it. I saw your wife down street, and she looked as happy as a queen!"

"I think she is; and we are economical, too,—have to be. My wife can make a little go further than anyone I ever knew, yet she's always surprising me with some dainty contrivance that adds to the comfort and beauty of our little home, and she's always 'merry as a lark.' When I ask how she manages it, she always laughs and says: 'Oh! that's my secret!' But I think I've discovered her 'secret.' When we married, we both knew we should have to be very careful, but she made one condition: she would have her Magazine. And she was right! I wouldn't do without it myself for double the subscription price. We read it together, from the title-page to the last word: the stories keep our hearts young; the synopsis of important events and scientific matters keeps me posted so that I can talk understandingly of what is going on; my wife is always trying some new idea from the household department; she makes all her dresses and those for the children, and she gets all her patterns for nothing, with the Magazine; and we saved Joe when he was so sick with the croup, by doing just as directed in the Sanitarian Department. But I can't tell you half!"

"What wonderful Magazine is it?"

"Demorest's Family Magazine, and—"

"What! Why that's what Lil wanted so bad, and I told her it was an extravagance."

"Well, my friend, that's where you made a grand mistake, and one you'd better rectify as soon as you can. I'll take your 'sub.' right here, on my wife's account: she's bound to have a china tea-set in time for our tin wedding next month. My gold watch was the premium I got for getting up a club. Here's a copy, with the new Premium List for clubs,—the biggest thing out! If you don't see in it what you want, you've only to write to the publisher and tell him what you want, whether it is a tack-hammer or a new carriage, and he will make special terms for you, either for a club, or for part cash. Better subscribe right off and surprise Mrs. Tom. Only $2.00 a year—will save fifty times that in six months. Or send 10 cents direct to the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th Street, New York, for a specimen copy containing the Premium List."

The New York WORLD never crows. For what it has done it asks no favor and no consideration. That is ancient history—to be forgotten. It looks only the future—to the work to be done. Our hopes and fears, our joys and sorrows are all before us—not one behind.

In THE WORLD'S work for 1891 every American citizen is vitally interested and not one—no matter what his politics may be—can afford to be without its weekly edition, which has not an equal on earth as a newspaper. Nine men out of every ten know this to be true. Every tenth man should send to-day for a specimen copy, that the knowledge may be universal.

Subscribe at once. Three months costs only 25 cents, and by every week's delay you miss something worth more than the subscription price for the year—which is only one dollar. Address THE WORLD, New York.

HOME COMFORT

Wrought Iron Range!

Manufactured at St. Louis

Read what the People say of the gentlemen representing this Company and their

Home Comfort Ranges

We understand that the Superintendent and Salesmen, representing the Wrought Iron Range Company, of St. Louis, Mo., intend very soon to leave Archbold for a new field of labor. We can truthfully say that they have conducted their business here in a manner worthy of the respect and patronage of any community. They have made Archbold their headquarters for the past four months, and during that time have sold several carloads of their Home Comfort Cooking Ranges to the best people in counties of Fulton, Williams, Henry and Lucas, and so far as we have been able to learn, their Ranges are giving perfect satisfaction. When this company came to our town we thought they were like most traveling agents in regard to their mode of doing business, that is taking notes of farmers and discounting them in banks, but we learned since then, that they do not sell, barter or dispose of their notes, and have found them just and fair in all their dealings. We wish them the same success in other fields that have had here:

Sweetest sunshine, bright and beautiful morning stars, lovely sunsets and delightful weather, have been the order of the day nearly ever since the New Year dawned upon us.

The Literary Society met at the F. W. Baptist church, on Wednesday evening, and although they did not organize, they had some very good exercises, and appointed another meeting for this week. The outlook is rather favorable for quite a society. The organization was deferred for a few weeks.

A Farmers' Club was organized on Friday evening of last week at the house of W. H. Harris. It is to be known as the Farmers' Club of Woodstock. There were nineteen joined on the night of organization, and many more will doubtless join in the near future. The constitution and by-laws of the Cambridge Club was read by Mr. John Gahagan, and they proceeded to organize, by electing Mr. Willson Neeley as President, and Mrs. Angie Parsons, Vice President; Loss Parsons, Secretary; George Bartlett, Treasurer; Mrs. Lida Harris, Chaplain; Executive Com. for one year—Mrs. George Bartlett, Mrs. Josephine Joslin and Theodore Joslin: For 2 years—W. H. Harris, Mrs. W. Taylor, and Mrs. George Smith. Mrs. Joslin was chosen Club reporter. The result of a few moments consultation of the executive committee, was a beautifully arranged program of literary exercises to be given at the first meeting of the Club to be held at Mr. Loss Parsons' on Saturday the 17th inst. They adjourned at the seasonable hour of 12 P. M.; all felt that they had a good time, and it was good for them to be there.

MACON CHIT CHAT.

Ice houses pretty much all filled.

The purchasing of binder twine and other supplies through the Grange will be discussed. All members are requested to be present.

Miss Nettie Bard, daughter of Mrs. Ann Bard and grand-daughter of Jno. Frost, Sr., and who has been violently ill for a number of weeks, is very low at this writing.

Mrs. Brad Way, who lives about three miles west of Macon village is also near the point of death, having suffered a stroke of paralysis a few weeks ago, from which she cannot recover.

The Prohibition-democrats in this vicinity, felt deeply chagrined at the "howling drunk" which the Evening News afforded its readers in describing the inauguration ceremonies at Lansing. One thing is consoling, however, the legislature cannot possibly act any worse than its immediate and inglorious predecessor.

The Macon Grange will meet in regular session Jan. 23rd, at 1 o'clock p. m. The following program will be presented:

Music by the Choir.
Recitation—Fannie Miller.
Inst. Duet—Metta Miller and Emma Bailey.

Declamation—Rob. Bailey.
Song—Josie Clarkson.

Logs, logs, logs! Everybody and his uncle getting out timber. The Tecumseh Handle Factoy; Gus Slayton; Jno. Temple; Irv. Osborne and the Tecumseh Table Factory have made the lumber business in this section active and remunerative. Farmers who have young hickory, basswood, red and white oak trees find that they possess a source for money that they hadn't dreamed of before. The lumber business is in the air and pretty much everybody has caught it. Following upon the heels of a poor wheat crop it is doubly cheering.

From irritation to inflammation, and from inflammation to chronic catarrh is the route; but Old Saul's Catarrh Cure is a safe and effectual cure for diseases of the nasal passages. Price only 25 cents. Sold by all dealers.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, JAN. 15.

They are having plenty of red hot politics in New Hampshire and Nebraska now.

The new legislature have decided to finish their work and adjourn in four months. A tip-top resolution, if they will hold out to the end.

Rumor says that Senator Hoar will make a serious effort to take up the Force bill again after the silver bill is disposed of. Why attempt to resurrect a corpse?

The election of Wachtel and Brant as Speaker and Clerk of the House at Lansing were both admirable selections. The new Democratic legislature starts out finely.

The Free Press says: The alumni of the Michigan University in Detroit, alone, should be able to raise enough money to meet the generous offer of Mr. Waterman and to do it in three days.

The Republicans stacked the cards in New Hampshire and will control the legislature of that state. The result in Kansas and Illinois is still trembling in the balance. Illinois is likely to see a long and bitter contest.

The scheme by which the Force bill was shelved last week was a very shrewd piece of parliamentary tactics. It will be a cold day when that un-American measure passes both houses and becomes a law.

Mr. Joshua W. Waterman of Detroit offers $20,000 to the University of Michigan for a gymnasium, provided the same amount shall be raised from other sources within three months. This should spur the friends of a gymnasium to a combined effort to raise the required bonus.

The Harvester Trust has busted, caused by the withdrawal of the McCormick and Deering companies. It was a silly business blunder, organizing it in the first place. An effort may be made to revive it, but it is very doubtful. Public sentiment is becoming too strong to tolerate such combines any longer.

The vote in the U. S. Senate by which the Force bill was laid aside and the Silver bill placed on the calendar, again demonstrated the political coalition between the West and South. This is a most encouraging omen. The West and South have been fighting each other too long. Their political interests are identical. Why should they not act together?

Tom Applegate of the Adrian Times went over to Lansing to see the democrats organize for business and wrote home to his paper "They're a queer looking lot," and "it's lonesome here for a republican." The editor should bear in mind that appearances are often deceiving. These "queer" looking fellows sometimes astonish the world; and they don't all belong to one party by any means.—Toledo Bee.

The supremacy of New York as the great trade and financial center of the United States is aptly shown in the clearing house statements. Although there are two other cities with over one million inhabitants each, and several over half a million, the clearings of the city of New York during 1890 were 63 per cent. of the entire United States. Clearly New York is, and probably always will be, the great trade metropolis of the western hemisphere.

The New York World is receiving many compliments upon its new business home and it richly deserves them all. The growth of that paper during the past seven years, since Joseph Pulitzer purchased it, is the marvel of modern journalism. The World begins the new year, safely and gorgeously housed in the most magnificent newspaper building on the globe. May it long continue in the grand work of political reform.

The Detroit Journal says: The alumni of the University of Michigan have now a chance to show of what stuff they are made; whether they feel the affection and gratitude that the graduates of other colleges have showered upon their alma maters in scholarships, professorships, observatories, dormatories, foundations, prizes, libraries, laboratories, athletic grounds, boating outfits and many another need of a great and growing institution. Although now the largest in numbers of any in the United States, surpassed by few in the world, the University of Michigan has been least remembered.

GOV. WINANS'S MESSAGE.

The inaugural message of Gov-elect Winans, presented to the legislature last week, is a practical common sense document, which will challenge the attention of the citizens of Michigan. He begins by briefly reminding the legislative bodies of the magnitude of the trust imposed upon them by the people and urging them to give their best thought and energies to the faithful discharge of their duties. He speaks in complimentary terms of the recommendations of the retiring Governor, and then proceeds to a brief examination of the State institutions. He regrets that he could not visit all of them before his induction into office. He found them vigorous in growth and their wants beyond their means. Most of them could make good use of more than they ask, but he thinks the estimates have been made in a spirit of economy, and in view of the popular feeling against increased public expenditures. The Regents of the University have requested $18,000 less than they asked for two years ago and $5,000 less than was then granted. While visiting that institution he was convinced that utility was the aim in all expenditures, and that every dollar granted the University will be carefully and judiciously used. He then gives a brief resume of the condition and wants of the other state institutions, including the Normal School and Agricultural College, the Asylums, Prisons and Reformatories. He recommends that all the penal institutions be placed under the control of a single board.

He takes strong ground in favor of a thorough revision of the election law and favors the Australian system almost in its entirety. On this point we quote his language in full:

"All are agreed as to the desirability of ballot reform, and our new election law is generally approved as a step in the right direction. The booth feature gives every voter an opportunity to be alone with his ballot, and absolute secrecy is the best guarantee of purity in elections. A practical test of our law has shown that some amendments are needed to render it entirely efficient and satisfactory. I suggest the following,

1. Let the law apply to all elections.
2. Let the distribution or using of ballots outside the booths be prohibited under the severest penalties.
3. Let the tickets be printed by the county clerks under the supervision of the party committees, and be delivered by the county clerks to the inspectors of elections. Let the ballots be paid for by the state in all State elections, and by the townships and cities in township and municipal elections.
4. A more expeditious method of counting should be adopted.
5. I favor the Australian system, or some modification which would render unnecessary the use of slips or pasters."

The subject of wagon roads is briefly touched upon and he recommends a change in the highway laws. Good wagon roads all the year round would add more to the value of farms and profit a larger number of people than any any other work for which public money is expended. The work laid out on the highways is largely wasted and yields no final improvement. The establishment of a general system of road making which would gradually result in permanent good roads throughout the state would be a wise and beneficent reform.

Under the head of taxation, the governor calls attention to the need of a thorough revision of the law, for the purpose of equalizing the assessment of all classes of property. Taxes have steadily increased, while the ability to pay, at least by farmers, the largest class of taxpayers, has diminished. Too much property is exempt. There is no good reason why railroad, mining, telegraph and telephone companies and other associations for private purposes should be exempt from taxation, the policy of exempting any property whatever being doubtful. A return to the county system of collecting taxes would be less expensive and cumbersome and more efficient than the present system. He calls especial attention to the question of the taxation of mortgages. Under the present law the owner of mortgaged land pays a tax on what he does not own, and the holder of the mortgage either escapes taxation or virtually pays again on the same property. The taxation question is in his mind the most important of the day. "The time has come when our people demand that unnecessary taxation must cease. State taxes must not increase. Let every request for public aid be sternly denied unless it can be shown that the money is needed for public purposes."

In the matter of the State boards he recommends a rigorous system of economy. He thinks they could be reduced in number without impairing their efficiency. There are now fifteen ex-officio and thirty official boards, the latter comprising more than one hundred members. Aside from the question of expense he thinks the public interest would be better served by abolishing many of these boards. He favors one board for all prisons and reformatories and one for all educational institutions except the University and Agricultural College. He recommends that the State Board of Health, which costs fifteen thousand dollars per year, be abolished. He would also abolish the offices of game warden and insurance policy commissioner. He claims that Michigan should be well represented at the World's Fair, and concludes with an earnest desire to cooperate with the legislature in expediting their work and promoting the public good.

The messages of Gov. Luce and Gov. Winans delivered to the Legislature last week were both very creditable documents. Gov. Luce retires from office with an excellent record behind him and Gov. Winans begins his term with the brighest prospects.

THE FORCE BILL DEAD.

By a sudden movement the Democratic senators and a few western Republicans, who are in favor of the free coinage of silver, practically killed the force bill last Monday. A caucus had been called to meet that night, and it was fully anticipated that it would order the bill to be put through, at any cost, and accept Hoar's continuous session programme and Aldrich's gag law, in order to carry out its decision. This meant a long struggle which the silver men did not want. A few of them got together and concluded to settle the question before the caucus met. Senator George of Mississippi had the floor on Monday and, by mere accident, Senator Harris, a Democrat, was occupying the chair during the temporary absence of Vice-President Morton. It was at this juncture that Senator George yielded the floor to Senator Stewart for the purpose of making a motion. Mr. Stewart at once moved that the senate proceed to the consideration of the bill known as the finance bill, and in an instant it dawned on those present that something remarkable was about to happen. Poor old Hoar of Massachusetts got white and red by turns and sputtered like a tallow candle in a draught. He undertook to insist that Mr. George could not yield the floor temporarily for such a purpose, but the chair promptly overruled him and put the question on the motion of the senator from Nevada. Upon a demand for a yea and nay vote the clerk began calling the roll. The voting proceeded on party lines until Mr. Jones of Nevada was called. He voted for the motion and was shortly followed by McConnell and Shoup, the two new Idaho senators, who had just been sworn in, and by Senators Stanford, Stewart, Teller, Washburn and Wolcott on the Republican side. One of the amusing things was that Mr. Hoar had been specially anxious to have the Idaho senators sworn in to assist him in his fight for the force bill, but their silver proclivities led them to assist in burying his pet measure. Vice-President Morton, who returned to the chamber during the roll call, announced that the motion to take up the finance bill was carried by 34 to 29. Poor old Hoar seemed dazed and stunned and finally sought seclusion in a cloak room.

The vote taken practically kills the force bill by putting it beyond reach during the present session, after which it will necessarily fall to the ground. It is at the foot of the calendar with hundreds of bills ahead of it, and one—that which the senate voted to take up—is a measure that will excite much discussion and sharp controversy, and which, by the way, will divide Republican senators into eastern and western factions. There remains less than eight weeks of the session. All of the appropriation bills are yet to be acted on. We may look for some further movements by Mr. Hoar, but he can by no possibility get the bill back into the position it occupied before the fatal vote of last Monday.

Thus fortunately perishes one of the most dangerous measures ever submitted to Congress—a measure which on the false pretence that it proposed to prevent the southern states from practically disfranchising the negroes, struck a deadly blow at the rights of voters everywhere, and threatened to establish partisan election boards, appointed for life and supported by an appropriation running for fifteen years. The bill was simply infamous. It was probably the most shameful attempt by a defeated minority to perpetuate its power ever made under any constitutional government, and the fact that a majority of the house passed it, and that a majority of the Republicans of the senate were willing to pass it, demonstrates conclusively that it is necessary to the preservation of our liberties, to say nothing of progress toward more perfect freedom, that the Republican party shall be stamped out in order that some party, less reckless and not dominated by the bitter memories and dangerous precedents of the civil war period, shall take its place.—N. Y. Standard.

IT TAKES TWO TO TRADE.

The high protection Bourbons never learn anything. After all that has been said they are still printing extracts from those European papers that lament over the passage of McKinley's bill, and holding up these evidences of European chagrin as if they were proof positive that McKinleyism must be a good thing for this country. Whatever injures Europe must benefit America; that is their reasoning.

The man who reasons that way is lost in an intellectual fog. It is necessary to toot the foghorn of common sense to show him where he stands. The fact is that our own national folly may hurt Europeans by cutting off their trade, but it must at the same time hurt our own people by cutting off their trade. Trade is not one-sided. Both sides must make a profit or there wouldn't be any trade, since trade rests on mutual consent. Of course when trade is destroyed the Europeans grumble at losing their profit, but that is no proof whatever that the stoppage of trade is a good thing for America.

If this country should ruin itself by war, idleness, improvidence or tariffs, or if it should be annihilated by pestilence and famine, that would be a bad thing for European merchants, because it would deprive them of a good customer; but it wouldn't be a good thing for this country—not by a large majority. Whatever encourages trade promotes mutual profit and prosperity; whatever prohibits trade entails mutual loss.—Boston Globe.

PROTECTION OR FREE TRADE.

Henry George's book, entitled "Protection or Free Trade, is an authority on that subject. Every voter in Lenawee County, whatever his political views may be, should read it. W. J. Atkinson publishes a card in The Standard, proposing to issue a half million edition of this book, to be sold at ten cents per copy. We append a portion of the circular and commend the enterprise to our readers:

One way in which this edition can be made a success is for clubs to subscribe (say) for ten thousand copies and then sell them either at the full retail price (twenty-five cents) or at some reduction from it; thus aiding the cause and filling their treasuries at the same time. The subscription blanks themselves may be used as an entering wedge to introduce the whole subject. Very few men will refuse to avail themselves of the chance of getting such a book for ten cents, and having paid for it, reading and conversion naturally follow. As the books will be read on an average by at least six persons each, we can count on at least one protectionist convert to each book issued. Would not five hundred thousand converts be cheap at ten cents apiece? Subscriptions and pledges of assistance are coming in encouragingly, but it is only by our united efforts that the edition can be made a success. Remember, these copies will be "unabridged," printed and bound in the best manner, and will cost but ten cents each to advance subscribers. Copies will be sent direct to subscribers, to any list of names furnished with subscriptions, or to lists numbering millions of names in selected states, as ordered. Ten cents per copy includes the entire cost of mailing, wrapping, addressing and postage, as well as the book itself. Subscription blanks, circulars, etc., can be had by addressing W. J. ATKINSON, 12 Union Square, New York.

MARVELOUS ENDURANCE.

The vast amount of labor performed by the heart in keeping all portions of the body supplied with blood is not generally known. It beats 100,000 times and forces the blood at the rate of 168 miles a day, which is 3,000,000,000 times and 5,150,880 miles in a life time. No wonder there are so many HEART FAILURES. The first symptoms are shortness of breath when exercising, pain in the side or stomach, fluttering choking in throat, oppression, then follow weak, hungry or smothering spells, swolen ankles, etc. Dr. Franklen Miles' NEW HEART CURE is the only relirable remedy. PEARLINE IS THE FRIEND OF THE WORKINGMAN

With Pearline, he can make his face and hands as white as a woman's.

His wife can make his finest linen or coarsest overalls as clean and sweet as the linen of a gentleman of leisure.

She can keep the home as clean and sweet as any palace; and more besides, it saves her one-half the time required by ordinary soap; and by doing away with most of the rubbing it does away with the worst of the wear and tear on the woman, the clothes—in fact Pearline makes a paying saving all around; it's economical no matter how you look at it.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers are offering imitations which they claim to be Pearline, or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—they are not, and besides are dangerous. 159 JAMES PYLE, New York.

A CITY LUXURY.

Just as the city looks to the country for most of the luxuries used on its tables, so the country must turn to the city for those convenlences which are justly termed luxuries for the hard-working housewife. City housekeepers have learned to realize that to save time is to lengthen life.

SAPOLIO!

is one of the best known city luxuries and each time a cake is used an hour is saved. On floors, tables and painted work it acts like a charm. For scouring pots, pans and metals it has no equal. IF YOUR STOREKEEPER DOES NOT KEEP IT YOU SHOULD INSIST UPON HIS DOING SO, as it always gives satisfaction and its immense sale all over the United States makes it an almost necessary article to any well-supplied store. Everything shines after its use, and even the children delight in using it in their attempts to help around the house.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

TAXING LAND VALUES.

[Henry George in N. Y. Standard.]

A very common objection to the proposition to concentrate all taxes on land values is that the land owner would add the increased tax on the value of his land to the rent that must be paid by his tenants. It is this notion that increased taxation of land values would fall upon the users, not upon the owners of the land, that more perhaps than any thing else prevents men from seeing the far-reaching and beneficent effects of doing away with the taxes that now fall upon labor or the products of labor and taking for public use those values which attach to land by reason of the growth and progress of society.

The taxes levied upon land values, or, to use the political-economic term, taxes levied upon rent, do not fall upon the user of land, and can not be transferred by the landlord to the tenant, is conceded by all economists of reputation. However much they may dispute as to other things, there is no dispute upon this point. Whatever dimsy reasons any of them may have deemed it expedient to give why the tax on rent should not be more resorted to, they all admit that the taxation of rent merely diminishes the profits of the land owner, can not be shifted on the user of land, can not add to prices, or check production. Not to multiply authorities, it will be sufficient to quote John Stuart Mill. He says (section 2, chapter 3, book 5, "Principles of Political Economy"):

A tax on rent falls wholly on the landlord. There are no means by which he can shift the burden upon any one else. It does not affect the value or price of agricultural produce, for this is determined by the cost of production in the most unfavorable circumstances, and in those circumstances, as we have so often demonstrated, no rent is paid. A tax on rent, therefore, has no effect other than its obvious one. It merely takes so much from the landlord and transfers it to the State.

The reason of this will be clear to every one who has grasped the accepted theory of rent—that theory to which the name of Ricardo has been given, and which, as John Stuart Mill says, has but to be understood to be proved. And it will be clear to every one who will consider a moment, even if he has never before thought of the cause and nature of rent. The rent of land represents a return to ownership over and above the return which is sufficient to induce use—it is a premium paid for permission to use. To take, in taxation, part or the whole of this premium, in no way affects the incentive to use or the return to use; in no way, diminishes the amount of land there is to use, or makes it more difficult to obtain it for use. Thus there is no way in which a tax upon rent or land values can be transferred to the user. Whatever the State may demand of this premium simply diminishes the net amount which ownership can get for its use, or the price which it can demand as purchase money, which is, of course, rent, or the expectation of rent, capitalized.

Here, for instance, is a piece of land that has a value—let it be where it may. Its rent, or value, is the highest price that any one will give for it—it is a premium which the man who wants to use the land must pay to the man who owns the land for permission to use it. Now, if a tax be levied on that rent or value, this in no wise adds to the willingness of any one to pay more for the land than before; nor does it in any way add to the ability of the owner to demand more. To suppose, in fact, that such a tax could be thrown by land owners upon tenants, is to suppose that the owners of land do not now get for their land all it will bring, is to suppose that, simply whenever they want to, they can put up prices as they please.

This is, of course, absurd. There would be no limit whatever to prices, did the fixing of them rest entirely with the seller. To the price which will be given and received for anything, two wants or wills must concur—the want or will of the buyer, and the want or will of the seller. The one wants to give as little as he can, the other to get as much as he can, and the point at which the exchange will take place is the point where those two desires come to a balance or effect a compromise. In other words, price is determined by the equation of supply and demand. And, evidently, taxation can not affect price unless it affects the relative power of one or the other of the elements of this equation. The mere wish of the seller to get more, the mere desire of the buyer to pay less, can neither raise nor lower prices. Nothing will lower prices unless it either increases supply or decreases demand. Now, the taxation of land values, which is simply the taking by the State of a part of the premium which the land owner can get for the permission to use land, neither increases the demand for land nor decreases the supply of land, and therefore can not increase the price which the land owner can get from the user. Thus it is impossible for land owners to throw such taxation on land users by raising rents. Other things being unaltered, rents would be no higher than before, while the selling price of land, which is determined by net rent, would be much diminished. Whoever purchased land outright would have to pay less to the seller, because he would therefore be called on to pay more to the State.

But, while the taxation of land values can not raise rents, it would especially in a country like this, where there is so much valuable land unused, tend strongly to lower them. In all our cities and through all the country, there is much land which is not used, or not put to its best use, because it is held at high prices by men who do not want to or who can not use it themselves, but who are holding it in expectation of profiting by the increased value which the growth of population will give to it in future. Now, the effect of the taxation of land values would be to compel these men to seek tenants or purchasers. Land upon which there is no taxation even a poor man can easily hold for higher prices, for land eats nothing. But put heavy taxation upon it, and even a rich man will be driven to seek purchasers or tenants, and to get them he will have to put down the price he asks, instead of putting it up; for it is by asking less, not by asking more, that those who have any thing they are forced to dispose of must seek customers. Rather than continue to pay heavy taxes upon land yielding him nothing, and from the future increase in value, of which he could have no expectation or profit, since increase in value would mean increased taxes, he would be glad to give it away or to let it revert to the State. Thus the dogs in the manger, who all over the country are withholding land that they can not use themselves from those who would be glad to use it, would be forced to let go their grasp. To tax land values up to anywhere near their full amount would be to utterly destroy speculative values, and to diminish all rents into which this speculative element enters. And, how groundless is it to think that landlords who have tenants could shift a tax on land values upon their tenants, can be readily seen from the effect upon landlords who have no tenants. It is when tenants seek for land, not when landlords seek for tenants, that rent goes up.

To put the matter in a form in which it can be easily understood let us take two cases. The one, a country where the available land is all in use and the competition of tenants has carried rents to a point at which the tenant pays the landlord all he can possibly earn save just enough to barely live. The other, a country where all the available land is not in use and the rent that the landlord can get from the tenant is limited by the terms on which the tenant can get access to unused land. How, in either case, if a tax were imposed upon land values (or rent) could the landlord compel the tenant to pay it?

It may be well to call attention to the fact that a tax on land values is not a tax on land. They are very different things, and the difference should be noted because a confusion of thought as to them may lead to the assumption that a tax on land values would fall on the user. A tax upon land—that is to say, a tax on all land of so much per acre or so much per foot—would fall on the user, barring such effect as it might have on speculation. For such a tax, falling equally on all land—on the poorest and least advantageously situated as fully as on the richest and best situated land, would become a condition imposed on the use of any land, from which there could be no escape, and thus the owners of rentable land could add it to their rents. Its operation would be anologous to that of a tax on a producible commodity, and it would in effect reduce the supply of land that could be used, since no land could then be used that would not yield sufficient to pay the tax. But a tax on economic rent or land values would not fall on all land; it would fall only on valuable land, and on that in proportion to its value. It would thus not have to be paid upon the poorest land in use (which always determines rent), and so would not become a condition of use, or restrict the amount of land that could be profitably used, and so the land owners on whom it fell could not shift it on the users of land. This distinction, as to nature and effects, between a tax on land and a tax on land values, it is necessary to bear in mind.

It is also necessary to bear in mind that the value of land is something totally distinct from the value of improvements. It is a value which arises not from the exertion of any particular individual, but from the growth and progress of the community. A tax on land values, therefore, never lessens the reward of exertion or accumulation. It simply takes for the whole community that value which the whole community creates.

While it is not true that a tax on land values or rent falls on the user, and thus distributes itself through increased prices, it is true that the greater number of taxes by which our public revenues are raised do. Thus, speaking generally, taxes upon capital fall, not upon the owners of capital, but upon the users of capital, and are by them transferred to the consumers of whatever the capital is used to produce; taxes upon buildings or building materials must ultimately be paid in increased building rents or prices by the occupiers of buildings; imposts upon production or duties upon imports must finally fall upon the consumers of the commodities. This fact is far from being popularly appreciated, for, if it were, the masses would never consent to the system by which the greater part of our revenues are raised. But, nevertheless, it is the vague apprehension of this that leads by confusion of ideas to the notion that a tax on land values must add to rents. This notion will disappear if it be considered how it is that any tax given to the person first called on to pay it the power of shifting it upon others by an increase of price. The general principle is this: A tax upon any thing or upon the methods or means of production of any thing, the price of which is kept down by the ability to produce increased supplies, will, by increasing the cost of production, check the supply and thus add to the price of the thing, and ultimately fall on the consumer. But a tax upon any thing upon which the supply is fixed or monopolized, and of which the cost of production is not therefore a determining element, since it has no effect in checking supply, does not increase prices, and falls entirely on the owner.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Of the 365,000 acres of land in Marin County, Cal., 229,000 are owned by ten men in tracts ranging from 74,000 down to 4,000 acres. There are but 102 land owners in the county, exclusive of owners of town lots. And still we go to the old world for examples of land monopoly!—Vincennes, Ind., News.

The secret of successful taxation is to levy it upon a few objects that can not be carried away or hidden.—Philadelphia Record.

GOD'S CARE OF ELIJAH.

LESSON III, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JAN. 18.

Text of the Lesson, I Kings xvii, 1-16. Commit Verses, 2-5—Golden Text, Ps. xxxiv, 10—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

1. "And Elijah the Tishbite, who was of the inhabitants of Gilead, said unto Ahab."

Sixty years have passed since the kingdom was divided. Six kings have reigned over the ten tribes (Jeroboam, Nadab, Baasha, Elah, Zimri and Omri), each seeming to excel his predecessor in wickedness (xvi, 25, 30), and all walking in the ways of Jeroboam, who made Israel to sin (xiv, 16; xv, 26, 30, 34; xvi, 19, 26), and now we have Ahab, the seventh, the worst of all, the perfection of wickedness (xvi, 33).

"As the Lord God of Israel liveth, before whom I stand, there shall not be dew nor rain these years, but according to my word."

2. "And the word of the Lord came unto him, saying."

There is nothing under the sun like "the word of the Lord." It is pure, sure and unchanging like the Lord Himself. "Forever, O Lord, thy word is settled in heaven." "The word of our God shall stand forever." His name is called the word of God (Ps. cxix, 89; Isa. xl, 8; Rev. xix, 13). Let us be filled with His word and wholly subject to it.

3. "Hide thyself by the brook Cherith, that is before Jordan."

"Get thee hence" teaches us that one who would live close to God must not tarry long with those who know Him not; just long enough to testify for Him and then be gone.

4. "Thou shalt drink of the brook; and I have commanded the ravens to feed thee there."

5. "So he went and did according unto the word of the Lord."

Here is one man who is obedient; he questions not, but simply obeys. He is subject to the word of the Lord.

6. "And the ravens brought him bread and flesh in the morning, and bread and flesh in the evening; and he drank of the brook."

He could sing the song of Hab. iii, 17, 18, and say, "Though vineyard, field and flock all fail, yet I will rejoice in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my salvation!"

7. "And it came to pass, after awhile, that the brook dried up, because there had been no rain in the land."

The source of this brook was not unfailing; it was dependent upon the clouds, which empty their contents upon the earth. Elijah, however, depended neither upon the brook nor upon the clouds, but upon Him who is far above all.

8. "And the word of the Lord came unto him."

God does not forget those who trust in Him, nor is He ever too late with His providing. Elijah saw the brook drying up day by day, but so did his God whom he served. Just enough of the necessaries of this life, and one day's supply at a time, keeps one very close to God, while an abundance is apt to lead us to forget Him.

9. "Arise, get thee to Zarephath, * * * behold I have commanded a widow woman there to sustain thee."

Young says that "Zarephath signifies "place of refining;" and if Cherith signifies "cutting,' as the word would seem to indicate, we can see the processes by which the Lord was fitting His servant for the great day on Carmel. Without the cutting and refining of Cherith and Zarephath he never would have been able to stand alone for God as he afterward did on Carmel.

10. "When he came to the gate of the city, behold the widow woman was there gathering of sticks."

It was quite a journey from Cherith to Zarephath, but the journey is not noticed. Observe the silence of Scripture concerning such matters.

11. "Bring me, I pray thee, a morsel of bread in thine hand."

As he came near to the city and saw this poor woman the Spirit must have whispered, "This is she."

12. "As the Lord thy God liveth, I have not a cake, but an handful of meal in a barrel, and a little oil in a cruse."

Behold the larder that is to sustain the prophet in this widow's home. By the brook he had bread and flesh twice a day; but now there is no flesh, and only enough meal to make one last cake for the woman and her son, after which they expect to die.

13. "And Elijah said unto her, Fear not; go and do as thou hast said."

He wavers not, he trembles not, he is not moved; "his heart is fixed, trusting in the Lord;" "he waits only upon God; his expectation is from Him" (Ps. cxii, 7; lxii, 5, 6). God, who could direct ravens where to find bread and flesh, can as easily supply the need in this case. If ever a woman had cause to fear to give away her last morsel surely this woman had; but the command comes strong and clear: "Fear not, * * * Make me a little cake first." If we would grow strong in faith let us consider well the "Fear nots" of Scripture from the first ones in Gen. xv, 1; xxi, 17, to the last in Revelation, and see how God, even our own God, is above all circumstances of time or place; and how abiding in His love will cast out all fear (I John iv, 18).

14. "Thus saith the Lord God of Israel, the barrel of meal shall not waste, neither shall the cruse of oil fail, until the day the Lord sendeth rain upon the earth."

It would seem from this that God had told Elijah how he would provide in this case, viz., by a miraculous increase of the meal and oil from day to day; and this is told the widow for her encouragement, for she has not been living at Cherith, and has not learned the secret of peace when cut off from seen resources. This meal and oil would make unleavened bread, symbol of the putting away of all evil (I Cor. v, 7, 8), for we cannot know the power of God unless we walk with him in sincerity and truth.

15. "And she went and did according to the saying of Elijah; and she, and he, and her house did eat many days (Margin: "A full year")."

Here again is obedience and consequent blessing. It was a poor time to take in a boarder, with not enough in the house for present company. It seemed to the disciples a poor time to have 5,000 hungry men around when five loaves and two fishes were all that the disciples had for themselves. But they learned, and this widow learned, that "There is that scattereth and yet increaseth" (Prov. xi, 24). Many are poor because they keep their little all for themselves.

16. "The barrel of meal wasted not, neither did the cruse of oil fail, according to the word of the Lord, which He spake by Elijah."

This is the fourth time that we have met in this lesson the expression, "the word of the Lord." We called attention to it in the second verse, urging full subjection.

How plain to my mind are the scenes of my childhood,
As my recollection recalls them to view,
The soap-kettle hung on the poles of green basswood,
The Smoke and the Smell that my infancy knew!
But those days of Soap and consequent anguish,
Have long since departed, we pray and we hope;
The use of the stuff 'gan to wane and to languish
As soon as they offered us

A DYSPEPTIC'S ARGUMENT
is a growl, and that growl marks the limit of argument with him. The best way to get him to try a medicine would be to advise against it—but notice how different his tone after using Burdock Blood Bitters.
"I have suffered with Dyspepsia for the last two years. Not long ago I commenced taking B. B. B. I am now on the second bottle and feel like a new man. G. KNOX, 12 Sherwood Ave., Binghamton, N. Y."
REPEATED TESTS WITH UNIFORM SUCCESS prove the fact that Burdock Blood Bitters will cure dyspepsia. The reason is plain, it tones the stomach to natural action and keeps the sluice ways of the system free from clogging impurities.
"I have been troubled with dyspepsia and heart disease for nine years, and found no relief until I tried Burdock Blood Bitters. Now I am well after taking two bottles. MRS. ETTIE FRAZIER, Bowne, Mich."

THE FIGURE "9."
The figure 9 in our dates will make a long stay. No man or woman now living will ever date a document without using the figure 9. It stands in the third place in 1890, where it will remain 100 years and then move up to second place in 1900, where it will rest for one hundred years.
There is another "9" which has also come to stay. It is unlike the figure 9 in our dates in the respect that it has already moved up to first place, where it will permanently remain. It is called the "No. 9" High Arm Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine.
The "No. 9" was endorsed for first place by the experts of Europe at the Paris Exposition of 1889, where, after a severe contest with the leading machines of the world, it was awarded the only Grand Prize given to family sewing machines, all others on exhibit having received lower awards of gold medals, etc. The French Government also recognized its superiority by the decoration of Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, President of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor.
The "No. 9" is not an old machine improved upon, but is an entirely new machine, and the Grand Prize at Paris was awarded it as the grandest advance in sewing machine mechanism of the age. Those who buy it can rest assured, therefore, of having the very latest and best.

DR. ERASMUS' MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.
It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.
The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.
WHAT IT CURES.
All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.
It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.
Over 40 Years.
This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.
Prices 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

THE HERALD FOR 1891.

The HERALD is still in the ring, fully prepared to fill its accustomed place during the year of grace 1891. The 15th day of November last completed a cycle of sixteen years under its present management, and Providence permitting, the "old reliable" is likely to sail right along under the same pilot for sixteen years to come.

It is needless to inform the public what to expect in our columns during the ensuing twelve months. The general policy of the paper is well known and its record has been made. First and foremost, it will aim to be a first-class local newspaper, to act as a faithful chronicler of all local happenings of importance within the territory of its circulation. In this respect it will continue to lead all competitors.

Recognizing the stringency of the times caused by excessive taxation, we shall endeavor to accommodate the necessities of our patrons by placing our rates at the lowest possibl point, and our terms for 1891 have been adjusted with that end in view.

OFFER NO. ONE.

We have made arrangements with that wide-awake illustrated farm magazine, The American Farmer, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., and read by nearly 200,000 farmers, by which that great publication will be mailed direct to the address of any of our subscribers who will pay up all arrearages and a year in advance. The subscription price of the American Farmer is $1.00 per year. It costs you nothing. The two papers at our full rate of $1.50 per year.

OFFER NO. TWO.

The Great Divide is the title of a new monthly magazine published at Denver, Colorado, which has already taken a position among the best periodicals of this country. Our Club offer with the Great Divide is the most liberal one ever extended to our patrons. The Magazine for one year, the HERALD for one year and the Gemstone Cabinet for a premium will be given for $2.00. A sample copy of the magazine and a specimen of the Gemstone Cabinet can be seen at this office.

OFFER NO. THREE.

We offer reduced rates for the HERALD alone when payment is made strictly in advance. We earnestly urge upon our patrons the benefits of this plan. Call at our office in January, pay for your paper one year in advance, and thus secure the lowest cash rates. By so doing you will help yourself and help us at the same time. We will furnish the HERALD alone

CHRISTMAS.

It was indeed a "Merry Christmas" to the Kniffen family, gathered in the old home, including children, grand-children and great-grand-children, comprising four generations, to the number of 66. Miss Flota Smith was noticeably absent, spending the winter with her aunt in Sioux City, Iowa, and two of Mr. Lyman Soule's children were also absent. But few families can be found as conveniently located in y county that, with a little effort and expense, would find it possible to old an annual family reunion, reaching into four generations, to the number of 69.

Fifty years ago, or nearly, this locality in the township of Ridgeway became the home of Isaac L. and Eliza Kniffen. Then the trials and hardships of a wild-wood life were to be ventured upon by husband and wife. It was a hand-to-hand struggle, but they succeeded by means of industry, economy and patience, with a push and zeal that knew no failure. As the result, a family is found to-day comfortably housed and well-to do.

We have heard it said, "Isaac L. Kniffen was a wonderful man;" and and in his death both church and community lost a friend.

Aside from the family, there were present the pastor, wife and two boys, also Mr. and Mrs. Fred Morrell, daughter and grand-daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Hause, of Tecumseh; Mrs. Eliza Kniffen's only sister, Mrs. Amy Berger, of Tecumseh; and last, but not least, to the interest of the gathering, was Mrs. Eunice Fowle, a sister-in-law to Mrs. Kniffen, who came (though aged and somewhat feeble) all the way from her home at Watkins, N. Y., expressly to enjoy a meeting with the family in their Christmas reunion.

All together enjoyed a sumptuous chicken pie dinner, after which the company was arranged in due form in the front yard, where Mr. Elmer Hause, by the use of a camera, took a negative. Now the time came when all were admonished to take seats in the large parlor, as some preparation had been made for a literary entertainment.

Joining the north and east corners of the parlor was hanging a banner, bearing the words in large, white letters, "Merry Christmas," with here and there a star placed, which quite naturally became a reminder to one somewhat acquainted with the Bible, when it was said "behold, there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem, saying, Where is he that is born king of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him."

The large room was more than filled. A grandson, Mr. Lee Soule, served as chairman to announce the order of program. First to open the exercises was Mrs. Eliza Kniffen, who read a Scripture lesson, after which the eldest son, Charles Kniffen, led in prayer. Then all joined in singing that good old home hymn, while Mrs. Sullivan Smith, of Ridgeway, presided at the organ. To close the introductory exercises, pastor James Wright gave a few words of welcome. Then followed the pleasing exercises, in which the children of the first, second and third generations of the family took a part, which consisted of recitations, declamations and readings, with music, both instrumental and vocal. At the conclusion of the program Mr. Elmer Hause made some timely remarks, suited to the occasion, using the words on the banner,—in transposing the letters, forming words suitable for the present gathering to think upon.

At the hour of four o'clock formal action was taken, when Lyman Soule was made temporary chairman, and a permanent organization was then perfected, to be named, "Kniffen Family Christmas Reunion," and the officers and necessary committees were provided, in order to procure and preserve a history of the family and to conduct at each reunion a literary entertainment.

Adjournment came, with desire that they might meet one and all again in 1891, on Christmas Day, in the same place.

A GEM OF ART.

The Detroit Journal Year Book for 1891, just issued, is indeed a gem of art. The cover is of rich blue and gold, beautiful in design, the engravings of State institutions, and public men are exquisite, the latter including members of the supreme court, leading G. A. R. and other society officers, etc. All the leading topics are clearly and concisely treated in alphabetical order, besides the full 1890 census and complete election and other statistics.

The book is handsomely printed on plate paper, has 150 pages, and no home is complete without a copy. Every subscriber to The Detroit ournal gets one free of charge. The price for extra copies is 25 cts., by mail 30 cts. Send 30 cents in two cent stamps to The Detroit Journal, Detroit, Mich., and receive a copy of this valuable work by return mail.

"He is well paid that is well satisfied. This is what a happy man up-town said when he threw away his empty bottle after he had cured his cold with Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, the favorite.

THE TOWNSHIP INSTITUTE.

The series of township teachers institutes, which Prof. E. A. Wilson purposes holding about the county during the present year, was very successfully inaugurated last Saturday at the Central School Building here in Tecumseh.

Promptly at 10:30 A. M., Supt. Kellogg called the Institute to order and opened the exercises with a short talk to the teachers giving them some excellent advice.

He then announced the subject, "Classification and organization" by Prof. Wilson. The speaker went over the ground carefully, showing the necessity of gradation and classification in district schools. It gives a new impetus to school work and inspires both teachers and pupils. The grading system has been introduced into all the schools of this county. Teachers are taking hold of the work very enthusiastically and excellent results are already apparent. It brings the district schools into closer relation with the High School, and does away with the "turning back" process, giving the pupil credit for what he does, thus encouraging him to advance further than he otherwise would. Geo. A. Walter, Secretary of the Massachusetts Board of Education, says, that one year in six is saved even by an imperfect grading.

Next came a very interesting class service in primary reading, conducted by Miss Edna McClue. The class took a selection not seen before and did very creditable work. Teachers make frequent mistakes in the pronunciation and use of "a" and "the."

This closed the forenoon's program when a recess was taken until 1:30 P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

After calling the Institute to order Prof. Kellogg gave some answers from the question box and explained the best method of avoiding mistakes in teaching.

S. C. Stacy then read an essay entitled, "The Relation of Teacher to District Officers" which seemed to be well received. At its conclusion several questions were propounded to him of a legal character, which he answered to the best of his information.

Mr. C. H. Bramble followed with an interesting talk on the subject of "General Culture." He brought out the fact that teachers were not practical enough in teaching many branches. He had known pupils to complete Arithmetic and yet not be able to compute the common sums arising in every day life. He advised that more attention be given to practical work and that more of science teaching be inaugurated.

A musical exercise conducted by a little girl from the North Branch, brought out the fact that music can be taught even by persons who do not know how to sing. The exercise given was very praise-worthy.

Miss Jennie Price made some excellent remarks on "Literary Exercises in Primary Schools," showing what to take up and how to teach classical literature in such a manner as to be both interesting and useful in school-work.

Supt. Kellogg then examined the contents of the question box, which filled. He read and answered many of the questions himself and referred some of them to others, many district officers and teachers present participating. This was probably the most interesting feature of the days exercises. About one hundred teachers and officers were present besides, a number of visitors, and all pronounced the Institute an unqualified success throughout. The plan of holding township institutes was heartily commended as an educational factor. All the persons appointed to take part were present, except Prof. Daniels of Clinton and Prof. Walker of Adrian, who were necessarily detained. Socially, as well as educationally, the Institute was a very entertaining and profitable meeting. The exercises closed at 4 P. M.

MRS. CHARLOTTE STACY SMITH.

The following obituary notice is clipped from the Christian Leader.

At Columbus, Warren County, Pa. on December 27, Mrs Charlotte Smith passed away, in the seventy-first year of her age. Mrs. Smith was the daughter of the late Rev. Nathaniel Stacy, one of the earliest pioneers of Universalism. It was she who made a home for Father Stacy during his final years and attended him through his last illness. Mrs. Smith was born in Hamilton, Madison county, N. Y., July 28, 1820, and came with her parents to Columbus, Pa., in 1830. In February, 1842, she married Ozro A. Smith, who survives her, and to whom she bore eight children; three only are now living. Mrs. Smith made an extensive acquaintance in denominational circles throughout the land, not only by entertaining her father's hosts of friends, but also from often accompanying him in his itinerancy, and adding zest and fervor to his meetings by her powerful and well-trained soprano voice. While about her usual household avocations on Sturday morning, December 27, she was stricken with apoplexy, and died five hours later. A good woman has gone.

It is a great misfortune for the young and middle aged to be gray. To overcome this and appear young, use Hall's Hair Renewer, a reliable panacea.

THE MENDELSSOHN CONCERT.

The Concert given at the Opera House last Saturday evening, by the Mendelssohn Quintette Club, was a musical entertainment of rare excellence, and was listened to by a very appreciative audience. The club is now in the 41st year of its existence and during all that period has been led by the present leader—Mr. Isidor Schnitzler. As a violin virtuoso, he ranks among the first in the land. Their selections were all of a most difficult and classical character, but they were splendid and were all honored with a recall. The Clarinet Solo by Mr. Thomas Ryan, the Flute solo by Mr. Paul Henneberg and the Cello solo by Mr. Paul Jennison, all disclosed the highest type of musical culture. Miss Marie Barnard, the Prima Donna, has a strong, beautifully modulated voice which has been thoroughly trained. Her singing captivated the audience, and she was twice recalled after her second solo. The entire program was a model of excellence. We understand that the club was procured by Miss Mary Anderson, who assumed the entire risk and expense of the affair. Although the audience was fair in numbers, we fear that its financial success was scarcely equal to its musical excellence. Miss Anderson is entitled to much credit for her enterprise in giving our citizens such an entertainment.

NORMAL NOTES.

Everyone is back and settled down to business again. A few stayed in "Ypsi" and "boned" during the vacation. All report a pleasant time and think the vacation was much too short.

The second "Public" of the year, at which will be represented a council of the Greek and Roman Gods on Mount Olympus, takes place Jan. 30th, in Normal Hall.

The Normal choir of 130 members are receiving daily drill under Prof. Pease, for the annual concert, which is to come off some time in February.

There are three weeks more of this term and the senior class are being classified as fast as possible for their last term's work.

Senior class rhetoricals commence Jan. 21st and they will be a weekly occurrence for the remainder of the year.

The last act which the retiring board of education did to perpetuate its name was to dismiss, with no mentioned reasons, Prof. Bellows from the Normal faculty—a man who has given twenty-five years of life in hard labor to fit teachers for the public schools of the State; a man who has done more, perhaps, than anyone else to place this School where it stands to-day among the institutions of the State; a man loved and reverenced by every student of the Normal School. Thus is honest labor and true worth often rewarded. Deep indignation is felt among the students at this act and a petition to the State Board to withdraw this dismissal is talked of.

ANOTHER PIONEER GONE.

Last Friday morning, after an illness of about ten days, Wm. Cadmus, of Macon, passed away peacefully into the unknown.

He was the oldest man in the township, being 92 years and 7 months old. He was one of the few survivors of that sturdy band of pioneers that settled here nearly sixty years ago, and did his share in transforming the wilderness of that time into what we see before us to-day. He was a quiet and peaceable citizen, a good friend, and an obliging neighbor. He was very active for a man of his years and retained his reasoning powers much better than most people that live to such an advanced age. In his later years he enjoyed very much the relating of scenes and incidents in connection with the early settlement of the County. He was a Democrat of the Jackson school. Of late years he refrained from going to elections, saying it was of no use, but his keenness of observation enabled him to see a chance to win at the recent election, and "Uncle Billy," as he was familiarly known and called, was on hand to go, and enjoyed the result as well as any in the land. The immediate cause of his death was paralysis.

THE FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

The Executive Committee which was appointed at a preliminary meeting on the 3d. inst., met at the HERALD office last Saturday pursuant to call. Eleven of the thirteen organizations expected to take part in the program were represented. The committee was called to order by Alex. Richard and B. F. DePuy was chosen Secretary. This temporary organization was made permanent.

The officers of the institute were then chosen as follows:

President—Alex. Richard.
Secretary—Miss Eunice Davidson.
Vice Presidents—The Presidents of the different clubs represented.

The question of date was then considered and the 19th of February was the day selected as the most convenient one. The financial committee reported that they had secured the Opera House for that date. The exercises will be divided into three sessions, morning, afternoon, and evening.

For the purpose of completing the program, the Executive Committee will meet at the HERALD office on Saturday next, Jan. 17th, at one o'clock P. M. A full attendance of all the members is absolutely necessary at that time.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

The two classes in Natural Philosophy have been consolidated into one.

Rev. Mr. Arnold and others gave us a call last Thursday morning.

The Lyceum will hold their next debate on Friday evening, Jan. 16th. Question: Resolved, that railroads should be under the control of the National Government.

Aff.—Agnes Woodward, Arthur Strong, Anna Harding.

Neg.—Albertine Brewer, Harry McClure, Edith Ingersoll.

There will also be other exercises in addition to the debate.

The Shakespeare class will hold their next debate Friday evening, Jan. 23d.

The Civil Government class are now studying State government. N. P.

A WORD TO OUR PATRONS.

Many of our subscribers pay their subscription promptly in advance during the month of January, secure reduced rates and save money by so doing, and have the satisfaction of reading their own newspaper, rather than a borrowed one, or one for which they owe. We would respectfully commend their example to all our patrons. Try that plan this year and thus help yourselves and help us at the same time. Examine our offers and club list for 1891 and avail yourselves of the privileges therein presented.

The Scientific American, published by the great patent agency of Munn & Co., New York, is the most practically useful publication of its kind in the country. Indeed, it occupies a field distinctively its own. Not alone for the machinist, manufacturer, or scientist but it is a journal for popular perusal. It is the standard authority on scientific and mechanical subjects. It is placed at a very low rate of subscription, $3 per annum, which places it within the reach of all. Clubbed with the HERALD at reduced rates.

Heesen Bros. foundry is getting nicely started. They are already casting a good quality of kettles.

The law firm of Millard, Wood & Bird, of Adrian, has been changed to Wood & Bird, Mr. Millard, the senior partner retiring.

We have just placed on sale at one quarter-off original price, 30 pair Grey and White Blankets, slightly soiled; 30 comfortables, at Anderson & Co's.

L. M. Lovett of Oak Park, Ill., sends his subscription in good season. He says: "I have traveled the rocky road and been in the,— well, I don't know what, since leaving Tecumseh.

Mrs. A. M. Henry and two children, of Lansing, are spending a few weeks with friends and relatives in Tecumseh. Mr. Henry, who was here last week, has returned home.

A new floor has been laid in the south machine room of Brewer's foundry, thus making a more stable foundation for the heavy machinery used. This enterprising firm is always making improvements of some kind.

At the M. E. church last Monday evening, Dr Metta Howard gave a very interesting lecture on Corea. She has been a missionary in that far off land and her personal experiences were listened to with the keenest interest by the audience.

Emma C. Thursby, Clara Louise Kellogg, Madame Albani, Campanini and Maud Powell will each have an article, giving some vocal helps and musical hints to girls and women with musical aspirations, in the February number of The Ladies' Home Journal.

The Detroit Tribune will send Cooper's Leatherstocking Tales with the Weekly Tribune for one year at the extremely low price of $1,20. The HERALD and Tribune, together with this premium, will be taken for $2,25. Pass in your names at once before this offer gets cold.

John W. Benedict has served as trustee of the Baptist church for twenty-seven years, a long record of faithful service. At the annual business meeting he positively declined a re-election and G. B. Garlinghouse was chosen in his place. John Fisher was also re-elected trustee.

We begin this week a brief synopsis of the single tax system. The papers were written by Henry George, the great single tax apostle, and were first published in the N. Y. Standard. They give an excellent outline of the single tax theory within a reasonable compass, and will be completed in three or four numbers.

Mrs. Henry Brown of this village, gives the following total of one year's baking for a family of seven: Bread loaves, 450: Pies 239; loaves of Cake 256; Biscuits 767; Johnnycakes 24; Puddings 84; Small cakes 788; Cookies 371; Tarts 183; Friedcakes 441; Pancakes 5,767. They evidently use buckwheat to some extent in this family.

The next meeting of the Northern Lenawee Club will be held at J. F. N. Bowen's, Friday evening, Jan. 23d., with the following program:

Music—Miss Bruce and Mrs. Remington.
History of the life of Longfellow—Mrs. S. P. Sheldon.
Roll call—each member to respond with a quotation from Longfellow.
Music.
Dec.—O. P. Remington.
Election of Officers.

The twenty-fifth volume of the Magazine of American History is opened with a most attractive January number. The varied contributions to this periodical are always timely, chosen with consummate taste and discretion. The leading illustrated paper for the month, from the pen of the editor, is entitled, "John Ericsson, the Builder of the Monitor," and one of the very best portraits extant of the great inventor, to whose genius our country owes so much, forms the frontispiece to the new volume.

The Farmers' Union will meet at the residence of B. F. DePuy, Friday evening, Jan. 16th. Program:

Music.
Rec.—Fern DePuy.
Reading—Mary Eaton.
Chip Basket—Fred Brown.
Music—Tom VanDuser and Fern.
Rec.—Mary Welliver.
Reading—Mrs. M. Smeltzer.
Dec.—Clifford Hendershot.
Ques.—Does the present political unrest of our country need a special remedy? If so, what? Speakers—Dr. Loree, Alex. Richards, E. L. Russell, Dr. Howell.

E. Cora DePuy was honored with cards of invitation to the Annual Banquet of the Illinois Woman's Press Association at the Palmer House, Chicago, Jan. 8th, 1891. The Illinois Woman's Press Association is the largest and most influential one except the National, in the United States and numbers many literary women who have attained a world-wide reputation. Its Annual Banquet at the Palmer House is one of the leading social events of the city, only people of well known literary reputation being invited.

This is pretty good winter weather

Mrs. M. Adele Hazlett has returned to her Addison home.

B. F. DePuy, wife and daughter, visited Adrian last Monday.

Prosecuting Attorney Wood was in town yesterday on legal business.

Remnant Sale of Black Silk and Black Goods, this week, at Anderson & Co's.

The large ice houses at Devils Lake and Addison have been filled with a crop of excellent ice.

A number of young people from Clinton attended the Mendelssohn Concert last Saturday evening.

The program committee for the Farmers' Institute will meet at the HERALD office next Saturday afternoon at one o'clock.

Mrs. Permelia Rector, widow of the late John Rector, died at her home north of the village on the 8th inst., at the advanced age of 76 years. She had been in feeble health for several months and her demise was not unexpected.

Guy M. Belton, an old Tecumseh boy, is President of the Newport Development Company at Newport, Tenn. It has a capital stock of $270,000 and is organized to promote public improvements. Mr. Belton is evidently rushing things down there.

A young man by the name of Waters, living southeast of Prattville had his right arm terribly mangled from the discharge of a gun while hunting, last week Wednesday. He was sitting on a log, when the piece was discharged in some way, the load mutilating his forearm and wounding him near the shoulder also.

There is good reason to suppose that Prosecuting Wood, of Lenawee county, stands a good show to be quartermaster general of the state troops. The situation pays somewhere in the neighborhood of $1.000 per year, and needs a man of Capt. Wood's qualifications to fill it. We sincerely hope to see Capt. Wood the next quartermaster general.—Adrian Times.

The new book "From Manger to Throne" by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, is now published. It is Dr. Talmage's monumental work. It evidently cost many years of research and is written in the author's brilliant style. From a hasty examination of the work, we believe it is destined to rank among the classics of the English language. It deserves an immence sale.

L. T. L. Program for next meeting:

Devotional exercises.

Gov. Winans has appointed Chas. R. Whitman of Ann Arbor, as State Railroad Commissioner.

"Fond of Dancing?" You would reply "Yes" to this question, of course, if you had already mastered that delightful art. No reason why you should not. Every detail of dancing the "Modern Society Dances" is so clearly described in the article on that subject by Mr. Dodworth, New York's greatest dancing teacher, and all the steps and motions of the newest dances so fully illustrated in Demorest's Family Magazine for February, that a child can learn to dance without a master. A course at dancing-school is expensive, but you can become a proficient dancer, with no outlay, by practicing as directed in these illustrated instructions It was while dancing that Juliet won the love of her Romeo although they later parted in sorrow, as shown in the exquisite full-page gravure of "Romeo and Juliet."

Miss Mary Gray is visiting friends in Adrian this week.

D. T. Hall visited Detroit yesterday on a business trip.

Miss Jennie Root took a trip to the City of the Straits yesterday.

Thanks to Jud. DePuy for a fine Caligraph calendar for the current year.

Mrs. Yates, of Lake Ridge, drew the music box at Montague's Novelty Store.

J. H. Smith was called to Cambridge yesterday to attend the funeral of his grandfather.

The surrounding towns were all well represented at the Teachers' Institute last Saturday.

Supervisor James was at Adrian most of last week attending a session of the Board of Supervisors.

Harper's Bazar is the gem among all the ladies magazines. Read the full prospectus on the eighth page.

The old red mill property at Adrian was burned Tuesday night. The loss will aggregate about ten thousand dollars.

The Christian Endeavor Society, connected with the Presbyterian Church, now has a membership of over one hundred.

Geo. S. Tiffany has secured a patent on an improved brick or tile table, which he can doubtless put to a practical use in his store.

We are indebted to the Postmaster General for the annual report of his Department for the last fiscal year. It will be handy to have in the house.

Among the illustrated weeklies, the head of the procession is accorded to Harper's Weekly, by common consent. Reference is made to the Prospectus which appears elsewhere. Clubbed with the HERALD at the lowest rates.

Miss Mary Burridge has been engaged as teacher in the Seventh Grade, and Miss Millspaugh, formerly in that grade, has been transferred to the North Branch, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Miss Martin.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. Church will have the regular monthly tea meeting in the Church parlors on Wednesday, the 21st. Business meeting at 4 p. m. Supper served from 5½ to 6½, by Mrs. Smeltzer's Com. All are invited.

Dept. Henry W. Stevens has been re-appointed to that position by Sheriff Baldwin. No better man could be selected to take care of the interests of the people in this corner of Old Lenawee. Capt. Stevens has made an excellent record in this position.

DIED.—In Macon, January 4th, 1891, Caroline, wife of the late Thomas Maynard, aged eighty years and five months. The deceased came to Macon in 1850, from Otsego County, N. Y., with her family. She leaves two children—a son and a daughter—to mourn her loss.

The Little Trixie Company gave a fine entertainment at the Opera House last Thursday evening. It was mirth provoking from start to finish and in fact one of the best theatrical plays that has been put on the boards here this winter. We hope Little Trixie will come again.

We call attention to the prospectus in another column of the North American Review, the Nestor of the Magazines. As an exponent of advanced thought in literature, science and politics, it has held the lead for three-quarters of a century, and it will be better than ever this year.

Yesterday afternoon, about 5 o'clock, the family relatives of Stephen Whittier "happened around" at his house to remind him that it was his birthday. They were all welcomed, the extra slips were adjusted in the extension table, and a jolly little company sat down to a six o'clock tea. The evening was then passed in social chat to the delight of all.

Cards have been received announcing the marriage on December 23rd. last at Artesia, Cal., of Miss Lulu R. Monaghan to Mr. Ambrose R. Wolcott. The parties will be at home after Jan. 5th. No further particulars of the affair are at hand. Miss Monaghan's old Tecumseh friends will extend to them their warmest congratulations with the hope that she has made a wise and happy choice.

—Brown's Cough and Bronchitis Syrup for sale at Avery & Ellis', successors to W. F. Anderson; and at C. A. Wright & Co's Drug Store.

—MADE TO ORDER—Mdme Williamson's Combination Health Corset, the most perfect fitting corset made. It gives a grace of carriage and symmetry of figure which cannot possibly be attained by wearing the ordinary corset. Orders left with Mrs. M. E. Hause, at her residence near Union School building Tecumseh, will receive prompt attention.

—Parties thinking about Life Insurance should call upon M. P. Brown for circulars of the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association.

The latest discovered metal, lighter than hard wood and stronger than steel. The Michigan Stove Co., after a series of scientific experiments, are enabled to make an admixture of this wonderful metal with their regular high grade iron, with the result of producing smooth castings, additional strength, and preventing cracking; thereby rendering stoves made of this admixture more durable than WROUGHT IRON or STEEL. The "GARLAND," which are the product of this Co., are the only stoves made having that advantage. Remember, when in need of a Cooking Stove or Range that your local dealer is not only here to-day, but you can put your hand upon him next week also.

CRESCENT OF BLUE SHUTS IN THE HOSTILE CAMP.

Official Reports From Many of the Agencies Where Danger Was Reported, Says There is No Reason for Fear.

PINE RIDGE, S. D., Jan. 11.—Up to an early hour the hostiles had not moved from their camp. It is probable, however, that a large party of Ogallalas are now on their way to the agency. As soon as the camp breaks up the Crescent-shaped wall of soldiers will move up another peg, and as the army bulletin issued at noon grimly reads: "Act as circumstances may dictate. Should the Indians continue in this direction and show a purpose to surrender," the bulletin continues, "The troops will not attack them, but if any of the renegades attempt to get away or succeed in piercing the blue wall they will be shot without ceremony or pursued until caught alive or killed." General Miles says every measure will be taken by the military to force the Indians to submission and avert serious trouble to the settlements.

A detachment of the seventh cavalry, under command of Lieutenant Nicholson is guarding the road to Rushville. The heaviest guard yet thrown out about the Agency is on duty tonight. Scouts report that criers are out in the hostile village calling to the people not to surrender their arms tomorrow.

Indian Commissioner's Report.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—The Commissioner of Indian Affairs has received a dispatch from Agent McLaughlin, at Fort Yates, N. D., stating that the report that Indians were leaving the Stand-Rock Agency is entirely unfounded and that none have left since the battle in which Sitting Bull was killed. Three hundred and seventy two men, women and children are now absent of whom two hundred and twenty-seven are prisoners at Fort Sully. On the third instant General Miles telegraphed the Post Commander that seventy-two Standing Rock Indians were made prisoners at Pine Ridge Agency, leaving only seventy-three unaccounted for, of whom forty were absent before the stampede. Newspaper reports that the Indians at Standing Rock are restless and unsettled are absurd. The Standing Rock Indians are under control, loyal to the government and can be depended upon, the agent says, to remain so, as all dissatisfaction has been effectually eradicated with the departure and subjugation of Sitting Bull's followers.

The Indian Bureau has also received a dispatch from Agent Waugh at Devil's Lake, N. D., stating that there is no truth in the report that the Turtle Mountain Indians threaten trouble. The monthly report of the agent at the Cheyenne River agency states that there is and has been no trouble among those Indians, reports to the contrary notwithstanding.

In response to a telegram from the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, who inquired of Elaine Goodale, supervisor of education at the Pine Ridge agency, how many students and parents of school children are among the hostiles, the superviser says that it is impossible to ascertain just who the hostiles are, but in a general way it is safe to say that those who have participated in the ghost dance and subsequent disturbances, are of the wilder heathen element among the Sioux. A great majority of the Christian and educated Indians have remained loyal at the sacrifice of time and property and at the risk of their lives.

Lieutenant Casey Killed.

PINE RIDGE, S. D., Jan. 9.—Late last night General Miles received official information of the killing, near the hostile camp, of Lieutenant Casey, of the Twenty-second Infantry, who had ventured too near the savages. He was shot through the head. General Brooke, who sent this startling information, also reports heavy firing in the direction of the hostile camp, and it is supposed that the Indians have attacked a division of the troops or fired upon a passing train. Lieutenant Casey was one of the brightest young officers of the army.

The Indians who are now in rebellion represent all the reservations in Dakota. There are many Cheyennes among them, and scouts say that bands of Arapahoes have joined the hostile forces. Two troops of the First Infantry from California have left Rushville for Pine Ridge. They will arrive here today.

Yesterday was beef issue day, and over 4,000 Indians took a hand in the slaughter of the one hundred and five steers which were issued. Many of the hostiles came to get their meat, and when they received their share they galloped back to the village with their Winchesters slung over the pommels of their saddles.

THEY WILL SURRENDER.

A Scout Says the Indians Have Started for the Agency.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—A special to the Tribune from Pine Ridge, S. D., says At a late hour Saturday evening a scout brought in word that the hostile camp had started for the agency. The soldiers are pressing the hostiles close to prevent escape.

Colonel Corbin has received official information that the hostiles will be camped at the Catholic mission Sunday morning.

"Barring accidents," said Colonel Corbin, "the entire camp will be here Sunday night. With them they have forty wounded. The danger that we now have to apprehend is that a shot fired by some bucks may excite the others. The matter of disarmament will not yet be touched upon by the military authorities."

A FRENCH DUEL.

That Results in Sending an Artist to America.

PARIS, Jan. 9.—August Franzen, a Swedish painter with some reputation in water colors, has left Paris for America. Franzen was the hero of a love affair with the daughter of a former leader of the commune and ex-minister to Sweden. A duel was the result, in which Franzen, ignorant of swordsmanship, rushed upon his antagonist and wounded him severely, but not fatally.

Stacks of Dollars

Piling Up in the National Treasury.

MORE MONEY DAILY TAKEN IN THAN PAID OUT.

The McKinley Bill Will Probably Have the Effect of Increasing the Revenues—Brooklyn Abandons Their Recount—Demand—Other News From Washington.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—The treasury surplus is again fast piling up and at the close of business yesterday was $18,000,000. Since the first of the year despite the heavy payments on account of pensions and interest the receipts have largely exceeded the expenditures and as a result the surplus daily increases. The fact that money is easier in New York and elsewhere has much to do in swelling the surplus, as merchants are taking out goods from the custom houses, which heretofore they have not done. The receipts from customs duties have increased more largely in proportion than the receipts from internal revenue sources. Since the beginning of the fiscal year the treasury department has purchased more than $92,000,000 of four and four and a half per cent. bonds and if the surplus continues to increase it is not improbable that Secretary Windom will find the usual outlet for money in the further purchase of bonds. The effect of the McKinley tariff bill on the revenues is not yet clearly shown, but it now appears that it will have the effect of increasing them.

Mr. Morton's Dinner.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Vice President and Mrs. Morton last night gave their first dinner of the season in honor of President and Mrs. Harrison and the cabinet. The dinner was followed by the largest and most brilliant reception of the season. The vice president's mansion was elaborately decorated with flowers and growing plants in honor of the event. The guests at the reception included the members of the senate, justices of the supreme court and their families, most of the members of the diplomatic corps with their families, General Schofield and many others prominent in social and public life.

The White House Remodeled.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Mr. Scanford has introduced in the Senate a bill (accompanied by an elaborate architectural design) for the erection of an extension of the executive mansion. It provides "that the secretary of state, the secretary of the treasury, and the secretary of war, constituting a commission, be authorized and directed to cause to be erected adjacent to the present executive mansion, and connecting therewith an extension of said mansion in accordance with accompanying plan proposed by Mrs. Caroline Scott Harrison, to embrace the present mansion as a private executive mansion, enlarged by the addition of an executive office or official wing on the west and a public wing or gallery of pictures, historic relics and art treasures on the east. Both counterparts of the original structure in design and connected therewith by collonades and hallways, and on the south by a connecting range of iron and glass structures of symmetrical design, forming executive conservatories and winter gardens; the whole architectural group forming an inner park or garden, at a cost not to exceed $250,000."

QUAY'S SUBSTITUTE

For the Lodge Bill is Offered in the Senate.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Senator Quay has introduced his substitute for the election bill. It is in general terms about the same as the bill now being considered in the Senate with the additional clause authorizing the suspension of the habeas corpus and giving the president power to use troops as a posse comitatus to enforce order at the polls and the provisions of the bill if necessary.

ENGLAND'S SCHEME

To Force a Definition of the Behring Sea Position of This Country.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—A motion was made in the Supreme Court by James H. Choate, of New York, representing the Canadian government, for a writ of prohibition, declaring that the District Court of Alaska has no jurisdiction in the case of the sealing schooner Laymond, siezed by United States authorities in Alaska, the vessel having been taken outside the customary three marine leagues. This motion creates quite a surprise in congressional and diplomatic circles as a coup d' etat on the part of Great Britain which brings the entire question of jurisdiction of the United States in the Behring sea before the highest legal tribunal in the United States and thus force that court to define the position of this country on this important question.

IT IS DYNAMITE.

President Harrison Makes an Unfortunate Appointment.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—The nomination by the president of ex-Senator N. P. Hill, of Colorado, to be a member of the international money commission created some excitement in the western delegation in the Senate. The nomination was shown to Senator Teller and Senator Wolcott as soon as it was brought in. Mr. Hill, it will be remembered opposed the election of Mr. Wolcott to the Senate and the two are not on speaking terms. Mr. Wolcott on seeing the nomination lost no time but started immediately to make a canvass of the Senate against Mr. Hill. When the nomination comes up there is likely to be a very lively fight over it. To a reporter of the United Press who spoke to him about the nomination, Mr. Wolcott said: "I have only this to say, that the nomination of Hill to be followed, as the president has assured us it will be, by the veto of a free coinage bill, stamps Harrison as Colorado's "favorite son."

Fatal Carelessness.

NASHVILLE, TENN., Jan. 12.—While carelessly handling a revolver in his room at the home of his grandmother, Mrs. J. R. Brown, Preston R. Perkins accidentally shot and killed himself. The ball entered his side near the heart, and probably passed through that organ, as death followed immediately.

Treasurer Woodruff, of the Neighboring State of Tennessee, Comes Out $100,000 Short in His Accounts.

MEMPHIS, TENN., Jan. 13.—A sensation has been caused here by the report that Treasurer Woodruff will not be able to account to his successor for public funds supposed to be in his possession. His shortage is said to amount to over a hundred thousand dollars. Political and business circles are greatly excited, as the utmost confidence has been placed in his integrity.

HORRIBLE CRUELTY.

Heartless Father Suspected of Beating His Son to Death.

CLARKSBURG, W. VA., Jan. 12.—Gossip has been busy during the past week regarding another mysterious death in the family of Gordon Lee, a negro, living in the western portion of town, and today a warrant was issued for his arrest on suspicion of murder. Lee called an undertaker last Saturday to measure the body of his boy, aged ten years, who, he claimed, had died from whooping cough. He refused to admit any person to his house, and kept the undertaker waiting until he dressed the body. The attention of the authorities was called to the case, and the overseer of the poor called to offer the assistance of the county toward the burial. Lee got angry, refused any help, and threatened to "get even" with any one who interfered with him. He finally changed his story regarding the death, and told the coroner the child was burned to death. The coroner neglected to act in the matter, and the body was buried without examination. The day before Lee announced the death of his child he was seen in apparently good condition. The day the announcement of his death was made a man named Reed heard Lee beating the child terribly. The past night the colored people got together and resolved to lynch Lee unless some action was taken by the authorities. The matter was brought to the attention of Prosecuting Attorney Clifford, and he directed an investigation. The body will be taken up and post mortemed immediately. There have been numerous deaths in Lee's family recently under suspicious circumstances. He always refused to employ a physician in case of sickness, and had buried all the bodies himself. Every death has been sudden. The authorities now express the opinion that the last case, at least, is murder.

$10,000 TO SAVE A HORSE.

French's Amusement and Circus Company is Burnt Out.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—Fire this morning destroyed a building near State and Sixteenth streets, recently vacated by Libby, McNeil & Libby, packers, and occupied as winter quarters by the L. H. French amusement and circus company. Eight show wagons and sixteen valuable horses were burned. The loss is estimated at $40,000, half covered by insurance. The proprietor, Mr. French, offered $10,000 to the firemen, if they rescued a favorite horse, highly valued as a performer. They tore up a large section of the sidewalk in their efforts to save it, and attempted to lift the horse through an aperature, but the intense heat drove them back and the animal slowly roasted to death.

A Heartless Stepfather.

RICHMOND, IND., Jan. 12.—The evening papers everlastingly roast John C. Morgan, a well-to-do resident of West Richmond, on the authority of J. W. Tingle, township trustee. Some time ago he, a widower with three children, married Mrs. Hiers, a widow with one child three and one-half years old. Yesterday he applied to the trustees to have her child admitted to the Orphans' home. Today he set the child out of doors, saying to the helpless mother, "I told you when I married you I would not support it, and I won't." This she denies. The populace is indignant, and the end is not yet.

After Twenty-four Years.

RUSHVILLE, IND., Jan. 12.—After a search of twenty-four years, Joseph Wolf, of this place, has found his brother Henry, who had not been heard from since 1868. Henry left home, joined the army, and no word had been received in the long interval. His address was finally secured through the pension bureau, which was Independence, Ind. Joe went over last week, and the long separated brothers ate dinner together. Another brother has been unheard of for seventeen years.

An Awful Warning.

MANSFIELD, O., Jan. 12.—Wilson B. Hill, a former prominent citizen of Lexington, this county, recently became violently insane. Today he was taken to the Toledo asylum. He had frequently driven his family from the house and threatened to kill them. A remarkable fact connected with his insanity is that about a year ago he quit using both tobacco and liquor, which resulted in a severe nervous attack, the result of the latter being his insanity.

Diplomat Weds a Wealthy Widow.

WABASH, IND., Jan. 12.—Hon. Hiram Z. Leonard, of Logansport, United States consul to Sherbrooke, Ontario, and Miss Sarah T. Eby, a wealthy widow residing near Roaan, this county, were married at the home of Mrs. Eby. They left at once after the ceremony for Sherbrooke. Mr Leonard will be remembered as the Greenback candidate for governor of Indiana a few years ago.

REMARKABLE CURES

Mrs. Michael Curtain, Plainfield, Ill. makes the statement that she caught cold, which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physicin, but grew worse. He told her she was a hopeless victim of cosumption and that no medicine could cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption; she bought a bottle and to her delight found herself benefited from first dose. She continued its use and taking ten bottles, found herself sound and well, now does her own housework and is as well as she ever was.—Free trial bottles of this Great Discovery at J. J. THE FARMERS' PAGE.

PATRON'S COMMERCIAL UNION.

Among the corporations reported by the secretary of State last week was "The Patrons' Commercial Union of Michigan." The authorized capital is $100,000, of which we understand nearly $10,000 is already paid in. This is a purely farmers' co-operative combination, the members being limited to the Patrons of Industry in good standing. Each member is required to pay in one dollar to the capital stock, and twenty cents a year to the expense account. The object is to make contracts:

1st. For the purchase of all kinds of farm implements and supplies, which will be shipped to members at wholesale prices, freight only added.

2nd. To protect the farmer in selling his produce by contracting with reliable commission houses in the principal market cities, and obtaining the most favorable rates of transportation by rail or water.

3rd. To act as a loan agency to refund high rate interest-bearing mortgages at the lowest possible figure in blocks, thus freeing the farmer from the extortions of local money loaners.

This Union, while a branch of the Patron organization, is entirely seperate from the parent order, which is also incorporated, and hence may be termed the business end of the fraternal scheme. It is in charge of a board of nine directors, all prominent in the order, and its officers and business agent under heavy bonds. The capital is permanently invested to guarantee the safety of its contracts, and no loopholes are discoverable why it is not safe, feasible and beneficial. Col. Charles V. DeLand, the president, is an old and well known resident of Michigan, and the other members of the Board all have a state reputation. The head office is at Lansing, and D. A. Reynolds, who is also publisher of the Patrons' Guide, is General Business Manager. The Union has already made several large contracts, and is prepared to furnish its share holders with many classes of agricultural implements, at from 30 to 60 per cent discount from the usual prices. We are informed that the contracts made by this order last year saved its membership over $300,000 in purchasing goods. In the light of this statement it would seem the benefits of the Union would induce every Patron to invest his dollar at once. Negotiations are now pending with large wholesale houses to supply groceries, hardware and all kinds of material and goods farmers use, upon the same plan.

The farmers can see in the success of this Union the beginning of the release of our farmers from the clutch of trusts and syndicates, and as their friend we cheerfully chronicle the new departure in their business methods, and shall watch its progress with sharp and increasing interest.—Mich. Farmer.

THE FARMERS' MOVEMENT.

A PLAN TO RESTRICT SALES.

The Maora Lodge of the Farmers Mutual Benefit Association announced yesterday the adoption of the following resolution:

Believing that the farmers' products are far below the average cost of production, and believing that the agriculturists can through their organizations control the markets; therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of this meeting that State and national organizations of the Farmers' Mutual Benefit Association, Grange, and Alliance be requested to fix the day and date for taking all the cattle, hogs, and grain off the market in this month for twenty days.

DEMANDS OF THE WISCONSIN GRANGE.

The annual meeting of the State Grange has adjourned after completing its business. The following was adopted:

Resolved, That the rate of interest be reduced in proportion to the net profit on agricultural products not to exceed 5 per cent., and that more stringent laws be enacted against usury.

Resolved, That we demand of our incoming Legislature the passage of the bill known as the Taylor bill, for the purpose of regulating commerce within the limits of the State.

STATE INSTITUTES.

Several correspondents have written the Farmer as to when and where the Institutes held under the auspices of the State Board of Agriculture were to be held this winter. We can only reply that so far we have been unable to find out. Not a word has been received at this office from those who have the arrangement of those Institutes in regard to the time or place of holding them. Perhaps the State Board don't wish people generally to know what it is doing, preferring to "work in a mysterious way its wonders to perform." We can only, therefore, refer our correspondents to the Secretary of the State Board, who is located at the Agricultural College, for information. Perhaps he will kindly take sufficient time from his onerous duties to answer them. Meanwhile we would say to our correspondents that a little exertion and self-reliance will give them Institutes just as interesting and as valuable in an educational way as though held under the auspices of the State Board. Two of the most successful we attended last year—those at Concord and Saline—were got up by the farmers in the neighborhood—Mich. Farmer.

MAKING TIN-PLATES.

How Tin-Plates Are Made in Wales—A Laborious and Unwholesome Manufacture Minutely Described—What McKinley Asks the Country to Undertake—Paying $15,000,000 to Get Welshmen to Come to America and Earn $3,700,000 in Wages.

As the American people are now to be compelled by law either to make their own tin-plates or else to pay a very high price for them by reason of the McKinley tariff law, it is interesting to know just what is the process of tin-plate manufacture. What is known as tin-plate is composed of sheets of steel with a thin coating of tin, the latter being only about five per cent of the weight of the finished product.

The first step in the manufacture is to prepare the steel sheets. These are made from open-hearth steel for the best quality of tin-plates, or from low-carbon Bessemer steel for the cheaper qualities. A bar of steel fifteen inches long, seven inches wide, from one-half to five-eighths of an inch thick, and weighing nineteen pounds, is rolled into sixteen sheets measuring 14x20 inches. This bar is first heated red hot and then put through the chilled rolls, after which it is reheated and rolled to a thinness which will permit it to be easily doubled. After it is doubled it is heated again, rolled three times in succession, and doubled at the same time till the mass is eight sheets in thickness. This mass is then sheared through the middle, and girls with hatchets separate the sheets from each other.

The sheets are now ready for the pickling house. Here they are put into a cradle, or cage, which is lifted by hydraulic power and lowered into a tank containing dilute sulphuric acid, the whole mass being made to revolve in the acid for some time. The cage is then dipped into fresh water and again revolved in order to remove all the acid. When taken out the sheets are found to be bright and clean, and are now ready for the annealing process. They are shut up in iron annealing pots at a bright-red heat for twelve to sixteen hours.

After being taken out they are passed three or four times between cold rolls, which are highly polished, and must be set with the utmost accuracy. The sheets are now annealed again at a lower temperature, and are once more pickled in a weaker acid. After a final washing they are gone over carefully, one at a time, and such sheets as need it are scoured with sand, the worker using a pad of hemp.

But all this is only half of the process; we have as yet only steel sheets. These are now taken to the tin house and are placed in a trough of clear water to await the tinman. He takes up the sheets separately and puts them in a pot containing palm oil, in which they are soaked for a short time. The sheets are now placed in a large iron pot containing molten tin, on which a covering of palm oil floats. The tinman removes the sheets from this first pot and passes them over to the "wasman," who immerses them in a second pot of molten tin. After they have soaked awhile he raises them singly with tongs, as he requires them, brushes off both surfaces and gives each sheet a final dip in another pot of molten tin. The sheets are then run through rolls which work in a large pot of palm oil. A boy passes the sheets one at a time to a girl who rubs them a moment in bran to remove the grease. Another girl finishes this part of the work, and the sheets then go to the assorting room.

Here the good plates are selected and assorted according to quality, and defective plates rejected. They are then counted by young women and made up into bundles and piles for packing into boxes. The boxers now take charge of these piles and pack them into elm boxes holding 108 pounds. The final process is to brand the boxes, and they are then ready for shipment.

The tinning process here described is that known as the "palm-oil process," by which the best tin-plates are made. Another process is known as the "acid-flux process" in which the pots of molten tin are covered with a mixture of zinc, hydrochlorate and water, in place of the palm-oil. This process does not produce such good tin-plates as the "palm-oil process."

An American manufacturer who has seen the whole process in Wales, where practically all the tin-plates used in the world are made, describes the work as being extremely unhealthy in some parts of the process. "In the pickling rooms," he says, "the employes all lose their teeth and are otherwise so scarified as scarcely to appear human. The other part of the work is not specially unhealthy, but, owing to the rank odor of the oil used, is very unpleasant and filthy."

The Welsh people have long been engaged in the manufacture of tin-plate, and so expert have they become that only 25,000 or 30,000 persons, at least half of whom are boys and girls, are required to produce the world's supply. As another evidence of their skill it may be stated that the price of these plates has been greatly lowered within the past ten or fifteen years. In 1874 tin-plates sold in England as high as 6 cents a pound; but according to the Treasury reports our tin-plates as entered at the custom houses in 1889 were valued, exclusive of duty, at 2.8 cents a pound. The imports for 1890 came in at about 3 cents. Under the McKinley duty of 2.2 cents a pound our importers will be compelled to pay 5 cents a pound or more.

In order to see just what this McKinley duty means it is necessary to deal with our total tin-plate importations. During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1890, we imported 679,838,625 pounds at a cost, exclusive of duty, of $20,921,220. The duty on this, under the old rate of one cent per pound, was $6,798,000. Under the McKinley duty of 2.2 cents the duty on the same amount will be $14,956,000.

What is to be the gain to the country for this increased taxation? Even if we should ever succeed in making all the tin-plates that we need, the number of additional laborers who will thus find employment will not be large enough to justify this great addition to the people's taxes. The greatest quantity of tin-plates we have ever consumed in one year was 21,222,653 pounds in 1889. The number of laborers needed to make this quantity, on the basis which prevails in Wales, would be as follows: 6,384 men, 2,464 boys, 3,472 girls; total, 12,320. If we average this labor at $600 a year, which is certainly a high figure considering the large number of boys and girls in the total, the yearly wages paid in the entire tin-plate industry would be $3,696,000. We are thus asked by our high tariff makers to tax ourselves $14,956,000 a year in order that 12,000 laborers may receive $3,696,000! Could human folly go further?

But we have at present no laborers who are trained in executing the more difficult processes in tin-plate making. In answer to this the protectionists assure us that the Welsh laborers are ready to flock to this country to work in the McKinley tin-plate mills. This is but a further step in human folly. We are to pay almost double price for our tin-plates in order to get Welshman to come here and make them for us! As a simple business question would it not be far more sensible to let these same men make them for us in Wales at three cents a pound rather than come to America and make them for us here at five cents a pound?

SHERMAN'S SOPHISTRY.

He Voted For the Tariff Bill in the Senate and After the Waterloo at the Polls Can Not Blame Dealers For Raising Prices in Order to Make Money.

At the time when the McKinley tariff bill passed the Senate, Senator Sherman made a very remarkable speech warning the manufacturers not to take advantage of the new conditions that the bill created. Here is the press report of this part of his speech:

Mr. Sherman closed his speech with some words of warning and advice to the beneficiaries of the new tariff. He was earnest enough in his manner to indicate that he is not at all confident as to the outcome of the law. The great thing that stood in the way of the success of the bill, he said, was whether or not the manufacturers of this country would permit free competition in the American market. The danger was that the beneficiaries of the bill would combine and cheat the people out of the benefits of the law. They were now given reasonable and ample protection, and if they would resist the temptation attaching to great aggregations of capital to combine and advance prices, they might hope for a season of great prosperity.

But Mr. Sherman warned them that if they went into pools and combinations and made corners they would so offend the people that the protective tariff would disappear with great rapidity. He did hope, the Senator concluded, that the manufacturers would open the doors to fair competition and give its benefits to the people. If they do not, said Mr. Sherman, I shall be as ready to vote for the repeal of this law as I am now ready to vote for it.

Since elections Senator Sherman has been talking freely about the Republican Waterloo and the causes which produced it. In a recent interview he said:

I have no doubt that the new tariff act going into effect just before the election was bad for the Republican party. The tradesmen took advantage of the circumstance to raise the prices of their goods away beyond any necessity and beyond all reason. That, of course must have had an injurious effect on the authors and sponsors of the law. And I do not blame the tradesmen. They only followed the universal law of trade in taking advantage of every circumstance out of which they could make a little more money.

The laws of trade would not by any means deter them from putting up the prices until they themselves were compelled to pay higher prices. That the tradesmen of the country would do this might easily have been foreseen. I would myself do just as they have done. If I had a few building lots for sale I would take advantage of any occurrence, even of a Democratic victory, to enhance the market value of the lots and put up the price.

Here the Senator was talking common sense. He knows the simple law of trade that a man who has something to sell is not going to part with it without taking advantage of every possible circumstance favorable to higher prices. What, in the light of the words just quoted, shall be thought of the Senator's warning to the manufacturers not to shake down the McKinley plums into their laps? And what shall be thought of a Senator who, knowing the laws of trade, votes to give the manufacturers advantages which they are kindly to refrain from seizing? It is but another case of "hang your clothes on a hickory limb, but don't go near the water."

A CASE IN POINT.

How American Manufacturers Are Able to "Laugh and Grow Fat."

The New York Engineering News says the Jerusalem-Jaffa railway has just been equipped with three locomotives made at the Baldwin works in Philadelphia, which arrived at Jaffa September 22. "Thus the first locomotives used in this ancient land are made in the New World."

How does it happen that Philadelphia, which lies 3,000 miles further away from Palestine than England is, can place locomotives upon this Jerusalem-Jaffa railway in competition with English builders? The American Economist, the organ of the American Protective Tariff League, has recently printed a statement which is a sufficient answer to that question. The Economist says:

Sir James Kitson, the president of the Iron and Steel Institute, and the largest manufacturer of locomotives in England—he makes 150 a year—visited the Baldwin locomotive works in Philadelphia which will try to make 1000 locomotives this year, and exports more than Sir James makes. There he saw shops struggling with taxed raw material and paying workmen twice what he pays, but full of the best machinery known. If he will take back a ship load of American machinery and a few Americans to show him how to use it he can undersell all England.

That is to say, the organ of high protection boasts of the superiority of American over English ingenuity, and yet that we need the present duty on locomotives to protect us from England! Who says the age of miracles is past? Let him study the protectionist brain.

An Extreme Case of Protection.

Forger Smith, of New York, who succeeded in getting hold of other people's money to the tune of $300,000 or $400,000, needs a word of excuse. Has he not heard protectionist orators all his life defending protection on the very ground that it simply transfers money from one man's pocket to another's, and that the country is therefore no worse off by such an operation as the money remains in the country? That is sound protection doctrine.

HAPPY HOOSIERS.

Wm. Timmons, Postmaster of Idaville, Ind., writes: "Electric Bitters has done more for me than all other medicines combined, for that bad feeling arising from Kidney and Liver trouble." John Leslie, farmer and stockman, of same place, says, "Fins Electric Bitters to be the best Kidney and Liver medicine, made me feel like a new man." J. W. Gardner, hardware merchant, same town, says, Electric Bitters is just the thing for a man who is all run down and don't care whether he lives or dies; he found new strength, good appetite and felt just like he had a new lease of life. Only 50c. a bottle, at J. J. Orr's Drug Store.

A VALUABLE DISCOVERY.

Dr. Brown Sequard's elixir of youth may be an important discovery, but every one knows that Dr. Franklin Miles' New Heart Cure certainly is. It has given thousands afflicted serious heart disease a New Lease of Life. Druggists who can observe its effects on many customers everywhere speak very highly of it. Mr. John Weaver, Knightstown Ind., says: "I have sold much of Dr. Miles New Cure and have received many good reports." O. Monroe, of Dunkirk, N. Y., reports large sales. "And the best part of it is every bottle has given satisfaction." Sold and guaranteed by Baker & Hall.

A "SOVEREIGN" THAT COSTS ONE DOLLAR

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout N. Y., is known to be a certain cure for Nervousness, Debility, and the ills peculiar to women. This soverign remedy stimulates the Stomach, Kidneys, and Liver to a healthy action. For all troubles of the blood and urinary organs it has no equal, and bottle, which costs only one dollar, should be in every house.

BRONCHITIS

Is an inflammation of the bronchial tubes—the air-passages leading into the lungs. Few other complaints are so prevalent, or call for more prompt and energetic action. As neglect or delay may result seriously, effective remedies should always be at hand. Apply at once a mustard poultice to the upper part of the chest, and, for internal treatment, take frequent doses of

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

C. O. Lepper, Druggist, Fort Wayne, Ind., writes: "My little sister, four years of age, was so ill from bronchitis that we had almost given up hope of her recovery. Our family physician, a skilful man and of large experience, pronounced it useless to give her any more medicine, saying he had done all it was possible to do, and we must prepare for the worst. As a last resort, we determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and I can truly say, with most happy results. After taking a few doses she seemed to breathe easier, and, within a week, was out of danger. We continued giving the Pectoral until satisfied she was entirely well. This indisputable evidence of the great merit of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has given me unbounded confidence in the preparation, and I recommend it to my customers, knowing it cannot disappoint them."

"Ayer's Cherry Pectoral cured me of a bad cough and my partner of bronchitis. I know of numerous cases in which this preparation has proved very beneficial in families of so that the medicine is known among them as 'the consoler of the afflicted.'"—Jaime Rufus Vidal, San Cristobel, San Domingo.

"A short time ago, I was taken with a severe attack of bronchitis. The remedies ordinarily used in such cases failed to give me relief. Almost in despair of ever finding anything to cure me, I bought a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and was helped from the first dose. I had not finished one bottle before the disease left me, and my throat and lungs were as sound as ever."—Geo. B. Hunter, Altoona, Pa.

MRS. BEECHER'S STORY.

It is granted to but few women to be part of such an eventful life as has been that of the wife of Henry Ward Beecher. No man of this century had such a busy life, filled with so many honors and achievements; and to view such a career through the eyes of his life-long companion is a pleasure rarely given to the public. Mr. Beecher was a lover of the domestic fireside. "My home is my temple," he once said, and in that home he gathered round him what his nature loved best; birds, flowers, and dainty bits of china and costly gems. If he was great in public life, Mr. Beecher was greater in his home-life. In the one capacity he gave himself to the public; in the other he reserved himself for his family. In this latter light he will be viewed by his widow in a notable series of reminiscent papers in The Ladies' Home Journal, of Philadelphia, during 1891. The articles will cover the entire period of their marriage from their first year of married life, when the couple lived on $300 for twelve months, until the closing of Mr. Beecher's great career. Mrs. Beecher will tell of "Mr. Beecher as I Knew Him," and thousands will gladly listen to her interesting story.

You would not sell your life for a dollar. Why not save it for a dollar? That is the price of Dr. Craig's Original Kidney ane Liver Cure.

FROM SOUTH DAKOTA.

ONEIDA, Sully Co., S. D., Dec. 28, '90

DEAR SISTER:—Received your letter and will try and answer some of your questions.

Christmas was a beautiful day and we went up to Mr. Lakin's and ate roast turkey. The next day was a terror. The wind blew a gale and a big prairie fire swept down upon us like a train of cars. It burnt over both of our claims, but did no other damage. At one time there was fire on three sides of us. It started by a man's house catching fire by using a straw burner. He lost all he had but one cow. It was a terrible fire while it lasted.

I hardly know which would be the worst to have swoop down upon us—a prairie fire or a band of Indians. In either case it takes all the nerve a body's got and makes things lively for a while. Dakota is the place to try a person's mettle and tell the stuff he is made of.

We have been having the finest of winter weather—only two weeks of snow and two dull days to make that—the remainder one continuous sunshine.

Butter is worth 25c a pound; eggs from 30c to 35c; turkeys, live, 10c; dressed, 12½c.

You wished to know what we were going to do. Stay right here. Burch thinks Company C would make a big protection. Get those clerks and lawyers out in the Bad Lands, where it is almost impenetrable, and the Indians would pick them down like geese.

I will tell you what little I know about the Indians: Gilbert was over to Fort Bennett Monday and Thursday, and while there he saw Mr. NorSell. He is a half-breed. His father is French and his mother a squaw. He has one of the largest horse and cattle ranches on the Big Cheyenne; he is also interpreter at the Fort. Nearly all of last winter he was in Washington, D. C., acting as interpreter in regard to opening the reservation.

I think the Government mostly to blame for the trouble with the Indians, for they haven't done as they agreed to with them.

Mr. NorSell has been scouting for the last three weeks, having only three hours' sleep during the time, besides what little he got while riding. He went to the Bad Lands alone, without arms of any kind, and brought Bull Dose's band of 412 to Fort Bennett. He is the Chief and the one that first started the ghost dance. It was one of the worst tribes in the Bad Lands. Mr. NorSell made them stack their arms and set fire to them. The Indians wanted them burnt so the white men couldn't use them. The squaws were so frightened that they exchanged babies. The squaws and children had no shoes and their feet were raw and bleeding. He made the bucks walk and let the squaws and children ride. While he was bringing in Bull Dose's band Captain Hersh brought in some others. He says there were only seven of the Regulars killed at the time Sitting Bull was killed. We do not fear the Indians, for those that have not been brought to the Fort are in the Bad Lands, and must either surrender or starve, for they are surrounded. Knowing as we do what the eastern papers say in regard to the Indian trouble, can assure you that you get all there is of it.

Gilbert has a couple of washing machines to make for the Fort, and I have my New Year's dinner to prepare and must close for the present.

MRS. G. F. BURCH.

THE AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

The following extract is from a letter to a member of the Farmers' Union, by the secretary of the state board of agriculture, Henry G. Reynolds. The letter was read at the meeting held at Frank Davidsons when a question relating to the advantages of the Agricultural College was discussed. From the figures given it will be seen that the institution is one of great benefit to the state and has well repaid the the amount paid for its support:

"The Agricultural College has cost the state thus far $851,493 96. To show for this, the state has a farm building and apparatus worth $448,080 12, leaving $403,413 84 to be charged to the current running expenses of the institution for the last 33 years, an average of about $12,000 per year—a little over half a cent apiece per year for the inhabitants of the state.

For the last ten years we have averaged over 260 students; and 30 graduates per year, this year 369 and 32.

Ever since its organization the college has served as an Agricultural Experiment Station, and by its work on the apple worm, and other noxious insects, clawson wheat, ensilage and in many other directions has much more than repaid all that the state and nation together have paid for the college.

For the last five years monthly bulletins of matters of public value have been issued upon subjects of general interest to the agriculturalists.

One of the most useful articles that we know of is that famous household remedy for the baby, Dr Bull's Baby Syrup. It costs only 25 cts. a bottle.

Bear Lake, a progressive town of 1,000 people, in Manistee county, wants factories which can use up elm or beech timber, to locate there. Beech and maple are so plenty that cut up into stove wood it sells for 35 cents per cord delivered.

Secretary Soper will make a special effort to hasten the publication of the Michigan manual, and hopes to have it ready by March 1. This manual will contain the corrected figures of the United States census of the state and other matter of special value.

The C. & W. M. passenger train coming from Muskegon struck a hand car just outside of Muskegon and broke it all to pieces and broke the cow catcher off the engine. No one was injured. There were two men on the car, who were thrown twenty feet from the track.

An epidemic of insanity seems to be prevailing at Flushing. The insanity of James Andrews last week was followed by that of a brother this week. Cyrus Bacon and two brothers, all residents of Flushing, are the last victims of the epidemic. They are crazy on the subject of religion, due to the Free Methodist meetings in the neighborhood, so it is claimed.

At a late hour and among his closing official acts Governor Luce pardoned W. J. Schick, convicted of forgery in the circuit court for Mason county, and sentenced March 12, 1890, to two and one-half years at Ionia. He pardoned him because there are grave doubts of his guilt. The governor also pardoned Thos. Conklin from state prison, convicted of murder in the second degree in the circuit court for Delta county, and sentenced to twenty years imprisonment on Jan. 14, 1890. It was charged that Conklin had guilty knowledge of the crime only. He has now symptoms of insanity.

DIDN'T LIKE HER BEAU.

A Pugnacious Stepson Whips His Mother's "Feller."

NORTH VERNON, IND., Jan. 12.—Mrs. Sarah Johnson is a wealthy widow living one mile from this city, on a large farm. She has a step-son named Orlando Johnson living with her. Mr. Johnson is about thirty-four years of age. Mr. James Myers, of Ohio, has been paying his attention to Mrs. Johnson, and this is very unsatisfactory and disagreeable to her stepson. Last night Mr. Johnson returned home and found Mrs. Johnson entertaining Mr. Myers, and immediately expressed his disapprobation of her conduct in receiving company, and requested that she send Mr. Myers away.

This she refused to do, and Mr. Johnson came to town and filled up with whisky and returned home. Finding Mr. Myers still there, he broke out a window and entered the parlor, grabbed up a heavy chair and began to beat Myers, who had an arm badly broken and his head mashed and bruised. Mr. Myers has filed an affidavit against Johnson, charging him with assault and battery with intent to kill. Johnson was arrested and gave bond for his appearance, with his step-mother as security.

THE MODERN MOLOCH

FOUR MEN KILLED AT CROSSINGS IN CHICAGO.

Indignation at the Total Disregard of the Lives and Safety of the People, by the Railroad Companies.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—The record of deaths on railroad crossings in Chicago and suburbs was swelled last night and this morning by four. George Hartman, and employe of the Illinois Steel company, was killed at South Chicago; Alexander Reiter, a middle-aged laboring man, met a similar fate near Burnside; Thomas Sangen met his death on the St. Paul tracks, and William Coster, a brakeman, was fatally injured while coupling cars at the Union depot. Great indignation is expressed on all sides at the lack of means provided by railroad companies for the protection of travelers, and the authorities are condemned for their inattention to violations of ordinances regarding the erection of gates at crossings, and the maximum speed at which trains shall run.

SCHOFIELD SYMPATHIZES.

Much of the Indian Trouble Brought About by Uneven Administration of their Affairs.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—The New York Tribune's Washington special says: "General Schofield sympathizes to a certain extent with the Indians in their recent troubles. He says that much of the trouble is brought about by an uneven administration of their affairs. In saying this he does not for a moment criticise congress or the interior department, but merely alludes to the fact that in the appropriation of money from time to time for the Indians, the amounts vary, and so supplies for the Indians must vary also. If it had been possible to have $100,000 more for the Sioux this year there might have been no trouble. General Schofield says the enlisting of Indians as scouts in the army will in the end prevent future trouble. He says the Indians make good soldiers. They are natural warriors, and take a great pride in their occupation. When they once have a uniform on their backs they are willing to do any work the white soldiers are called upon to do. They are magnificent horsemen, and will form a basis for a fine native cavalry. When asked if he did not fear the results that first followed the employment of Sepoys by the British in India, he said the mistake there was in permitting native regiments to be officered by natives. He wouldn't make that mistake in enlisting Indians. They should always be officered by whites.

STONE CUTTERS LOCKED OUT.

Eight Hundred Journeymen Barred Out by Chicago Employers.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—Eight hundred journeymen stone cutters, employed in fifty-six stone yards, were locked out yesterday by the Stone Cutters' association, until the Stone Cutters' union recognizes the rules and regulations recently adopted by the Stone Cutters' association. The rule which the men object to most strongly is the following: "The union shall not be permitted to discipline the employer for any reason whatever."

This rule the men consider a blow at their union which, by constitution has a right to impose a fine ranging from $100 to $500 upon any employer employing a stone cutter at less than the scale, which is $4 for a day's work. The trouble will probably be settled by arbitration.

FATALLY SCALDED.

B. & O. Freight Wreck Near North Baltimore—One Fatality.

FOSTORIA, O., Jan. 12.—Two freight trains on the Baltimore & Ohio road collided near North Baltimore, fifteen miles west of this city Saturday afternoon. Train 42, going east, with Conductor Derr, left North Baltimore ahead of time, and crashed into train 37, going west, with Conductor Morton in charge. Fireman Hawkey, of Garrett, was caught between the engine and tender and was so badly scalded and mangled that he will die. The engineer of train 42 had his shoulder broken, and the engineer and fireman of 37 are also badly hurt. A dense fog prevailed at the time of the collision.

FIRE IN A HOTEL.

The Guests Panic Stricken—One Man Jumps.

BOSTON, Jan. 10.—Fire broke out in the office of the Crawford house, created a considerable panic among 125 guests, but all escaped safely except Arthur Meek, of Denver, who leaped from a second story window and was severely injured, both ankles were sprained and internal injuries are feared. Loss about ten thousand dollars.

A Bullet in His Mouth.

TERRE HAUTE, IND., Jan. 12.—Charles May, aged twenty-two, a young blacksmith, started out with a pistol in his pocket to kill his wife, whom he had married not a year ago, and who was living apart from him. She saw him coming and locked all the doors, so he could not get in. He then stood outside and, putting the revolver in his mouth, killed himself instantly.

Suspended.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—The suspension of E. Hornbostel was announced on the stock exchange. It is not important.

NINE PERSONS BURNED

In a Moscow Hotel—A Russian General Among Them.

MOSCOW, Jan. 10.—The Royal hotel in this city is burned. Nine persons were fatally injured during the fire. Among them was a Russian general.

BLEW OUT HIS BRAINS.

A Russian Gentleman of Rank a Victim of Monte Carlo.

MONTE CARLO, Jan. 11.—A Russian gentleman, name not given by the authorities, blew out his brains. A letter found on his body said the writer had lost 800,000 rubles at the gaming tables, and being utterly ruined, nothing was left for him but to take his own life.

HANDY WITH THE KNIFE.

A Drunken Peasant Murders Two and Stabs Nine.

MILAN, Jan. 11.—Luihi Cordega, a peasant, while drunk, murdered his father and a friend with him and stabbed nine other persons. Cordega then went to sleep, and on waking was almost without recollection of what he had done in his drunken frenzy. He narrowly escaped lynching.

NO DISCRIMINATION.

THE KANSAS SUPREME COURT DECIDES

That the Color Line Cannot Be Drawn In the Public Schools—An Injunction Granted the Colored People.

TOPEKA, KAS., Jan. 11.—The supreme court has decided that colored children could not be discriminated against in the public schools. In the case of Bertha and Lilly Knox, colored children, of Independence, Kansas, against the Board of Education, of that city, the court holds that the legislature not having granted to cities of the second class power to establish separate schools for white and colored children, the action of the board of education in attempting to exclude colored children from the schools and compel them to attend a separate school was illegal. A writ of injunction was therefore granted as prayed for.

ENGINEER KILLED.

Bad Wreck in New Mexico—Train Derailed.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Jan. 11.—Passenger train No. 2 was derailed by a broken rail at Walnut station. The engine, baggage and mail car, express car and one passenger coach left the track and partially overturned. Engineer George H. Houser jumped and was caught under the express car and killed. No one else was injured. Houser lived in Michigan City, Indiana, where his body will be shipped for burial.

CRUSHED TO DEATH.

There Was, in Fact, "Too Much Snow on the Roof."

ROME, Jan. 11.—A dispatch from Reggio, the capital of Reggionell, Emilelia, a fortified city of North Italy, about fourteen miles from Modena, brings the news that while a number of the officers of the garrison were being exercised in a military riding school, the roof suddenly crashed in, hurling huge beams of wood and showers of tiles into the tanbark arena. When the troops succeeded in removing the debris it was found that two officers were killed, six seriously injured and ten others slightly wounded. The accident is supposed to have been caused by the strain through the recent severe snow storm.

TWO LIVES LOST

By a Collision of Trains in the Chicago Stock Yards.

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—Two stockmen as yet unidentified, lost their lives at daybreak in a collision between the Illinois Central and Burlington stock trains, at Homan avenue crossing in this city. Engineer Hoffman, Fireman Jackson and Conductor Shielman, of the latter train, escaped a similar fate by jumping for their lives. It was a rear-end collision caused by carelessness or misunderstanding of the orders of Engineer Hoffman. The Burlington engine and two Illinois Central cars are totally wrecked.

Later.

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—The dead stockmen are identified by letters and bills of lading as R. W. French, of Warren, Ills., and J. B. Stout, of Peoria.

THE ICE KING.

Death Stalks in the Wake of the European Cold Wave.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—The weather continues intensely cold throughout the continent. Three unfortunates have been found frozen to death in the streets of Paris, and three children, lost in the woods in the Department of Nord, perished from cold.

From Hamburg comes the news that the lower Elbe is frozen over solid. Fleets of vessels are detained. Some provisioned for short voyages are frozen in and their crews are suffering for want of food. At the mouth of the river over twenty ships, unable to enter, are driven helpless under strong northeast winds among heavy floating ice. Great loss of life and property is feared. All north German ports are blocked with ice and navigation is suspended.

SCANTLING FALLS.

One Man Killed and Three Seriously Injured.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 10.—A special to the Times from Lancaster, Pa., says: The falling of a scantling at the new edifice of St. John's Lutheran church, in this city, was the cause of a frightful accident, which resulted in the death of one man and the serious if not fatal injury to three others. Five men were working on the scantling which surrounds the tower, at a heighth of about fifty feet from the ground, when the dumping of a stone weighing several hundred pounds caused the stays to give away and four of the men were precipitated headlong to the ground. They fell on a pile of stones beneath the scantling and the stones which fell with them fell upon the men. Christian Walker, of Columbia, boss mason, sustained a compound fracture of the skull and other injuries from which he died. Henry Redman had both legs broken and was internally injured, and James Swisher and Isaac McCutgeon were injured about the head, body and internally. Frank Shortlarge caught fast to the wall in the descent and escaped injury.

THE NESTOR OF THE MAGAZINES.

"According to Homer, NESTOR, the old warrior and the wise counsellor of the Greeks, had ruled over three generations of men, and was wise as the immortal gods."

THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

THE FARMERS' UNION.

The Most Brilliant Meeting of the Season, Held at the Residence of B. F. DePuy. An Interesting Program.

The Farmer's Union held its sixth meeting of the season at the residence of B. F. DePuy, last Friday evening, Jan. 16th, 1891, and to say that it was the most largely attended and enjoyable meeting of the season, is merely to say that the prediction of each individual member was happily fulfilled.

As early as 6 o'clock, members and invited guests began to arrive, and by the time the last carriage wheel had rolled up the graveled driveway over one hundred people had gathered to participate in the joyous occasion.

Promptly at 8 o'clock the President called the meeting to order and the following program was carried out:

Music—Mr. and Mrs. B. Poucher.
Recitation—Fern DePuy.
Reading—Mary Eaton.
Music—Mr. Tom. VanDuser and little daughter Fern.
Chip Basket—Emma Brown.
Reading—Mary Welliver.
Song—Mr. Ed. Spaulding.
Reading—John Boyce.
Recitation—Mrs. Ed. Spaulding.
Declamation—Clifford Hendershot.

The respective parts were ably sustained. The introductory music by Mr. and Mrs. Poucher served to arouse the spirits and awaken the interests to a degree that Miss Fern DePuy's recitation entitled, "The Principle of Temperance" was listened to with concentrated interest. The subject involved the ethical principles of the the great question, and was reviewed with firmness of conviction that would have reflected credit upon one much older and more accustomed to debate.

The select readings were all excellent; "The Gridiron" from Samuel Lover's Novels and Tales, by John Boyce, provoking much mirth and enjoyment. The "Chip Basket" was full of dry chips and kindled the fires of laughter in every heart.

Mrs. Ed. Spauldings recitation entitled, "Courting under Difficulties" was most thoroughly appreciated, demonstrating as it did, that culture of the elocutionary powers, after all, is the true way to fit one's self for public appearance as a speaker.

Clifford Hendershot's declamation entitled, "A Lament," was a masterly effort. His ready adaptation of scientific terms and logical definitions, evinced a fondness for mental culture which will eventually materialize, it is hoped, into personal benefit.

But the most beautiful entertainment of all was the singing of little Fern VanDuser, a veritable miniature musical prodigy. There is nothing so sweet in music as a child's voice and this little lady, only seven years old, can hold an audience of a hundred people spell bound. Her rendition at the close of the inimitable "I'm so Shy" was received with almost an ovation.

THE QUESTION.

After the literary program came the question, "Does the present political unrest of our country need a special remedy? If so what?"

Dr. Loree led the discussion by a few introductory remarks but soon warmed to the glow of the main thought. Political unrest, he held, was the inevitable result of natural causes. It was the outgrowth of the dissatisfaction existing among men in the old political parties who found that their sentiments were not represented by either of those factions. The great questions of reform of the day had unquestionably brought about this condition of unrest. It would be impossible for the old parties to effect restoration of quiet because men were wedded to partisanship instead of principle.

B. F. DePuy next took the floor. He conceded that a great political unrest existed among the farmers. Not only unrest but distress. We see our homesteads being mortgaged and our indebtedness increasing while the value of our farms is decreasing. Whatever the cause; "Whether the snake that made the the track, was going north or coming back" the trail is over all, and the remedy must be sought and applied. Equal distribution of capital and labor would adjust a balance and restore an equilibrium. Mr. DePuy summed up his views in the laconic opinion that if a great unrest existed among political factions, one needed a rest and the republican party was ostensibly taking it.

Dr. Howell was the next speaker. He asserted that the political unrest now upon the people, indicated a healthful condition of public sentiment. That it bespoke push, enterprise, a progression of art and the nobler pursuits. Unequal taxation was the source of much of the dissatisfaction. Law is a measure of individuals and special legislation would effect a remedy. An income tax would obviate much of the difficulty, while the abolition of national banks would enable the government to issue money direct to the people and thereby restore confidence. The speaker was firm in the conviction that the great political unrest was an unmistakable evidence of a heathful condition of the people.

Dr. Loree again took the floor and made the closing remarks. His arguments were supplemental to the original thought. The infamous tax laws on our statute books which turned a billion of dollars annually into the channels of vice and degradation, misery and death were the direct and paramount cause of the great political unrest of the country. History affords no instance where dominant parties ever effected a reform. Political affiliations forbid men the courage to assert their convictions, and hence a revolution of affairs must be wrought by a new body who seeks the greatest good to the greatest number.

The closing act of the meeting was the appointing of B. F. DePuy as the member of the legislative committee to recommend petitions.

Next meeting to be held at Mr. L. G. Lesters.

PROGRAM.

Music.
Select Reading—Mrs. R. Boyd.
Music—Mr. & Mrs. B. Poucher.
Declamation—Charlie McIntire.
Recitation—Sarah Comfort.
Music—Mrs. Blood and daughter.
Question—Resolved, That railroads, telegraph and telephone lines should be under the control of the National Government.
Affirmative—Robert Boyd, Alex. Richard, Frank Davidson.
Negative—W. S. Comfort, B. F. DePuy, L. G. Lester.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

H. J. Williams went to Adrian Tuesday on business.

J. Peters shipped a carload of elm lumber from here the first of the week.

Emeline Robison, of North Adrian, is visiting at Mrs. Gove's this week.

Secretary E. A. Wilson was at his parents,' on the sick list, the first of the week,

Willie Harrington and wife, of West Clinton, spent Sunday at Mrs. W. R. Wilson's.

Hattie Montgomery, of Tecumseh, was in the village Saturday, calling on friends.

Vie an nd Libbie Underwood, of Britton, were the guests of Mrs. Sarah Rappleye over the Sabbath.

Howard Macomber and May Bodine, of Manchester, made a flying visit to friends in the village Tuesday evening.

F. E. Pocklington, who went to Harvey last week, has invested in a village lot and is at work at his trade for 40c an hour.

Geo. Arner and wife, who have been at Bridgeport, Alabama, for the past year, arrived at their old home here Tuesday night.

There was a goodly number of the village friends in attendance at the Farmers' Union, held at the home of B. F. DePuy, on Friday evening.

The L. C. S. will be held at the home of Mrs. E. W. Rappleye on Friday evening of the present week. A very interesting and pleasing program is being prepared by the committee, consisting of literary and musical selections and an elocutionary drill by Mattie Rappleye's class in elocution. 10 cents pays the bill for the entire evening's amusement. It is hoped there will be a good attendance.

The attendance at the Reading Circle held at the Library on Wednesday evening of last week was good and an excellent program was furnished by the committee, and passed off very successfully. The musical part was exceptionally good and finely rendered. The vocal duet by Master Lawrence Rappleye and James Nelson was splendidly rendered, with Lawrence as accompanist. Miss Daisy Riggs furnished an instrumental solo that was grand and rendered very artistically, showing an unusually bright musical talent. We make special mention of these as they are young and beginners at the pianoforte. The next Circle will be held February 11th; Lee Soule and Flora Chase, committee to furnish the program.

One application of Salvation Oil well rubbed in cured me of rheumatism in the arm, of two months standing. I never intend to be without it.
H. B. KRAMER, Washington, D. C.

If you suffer with nasal catarrh, you need no one to describe your symptoms or suffering. We prescribe, however, Old Saul's Catarrh Cure, safe sure and pleasant and only 25 cents.

One of our most noted school-teachers went to Tecumseh on Saturday, the 10th inst., to attend the Teachers' Institute, but from a misplaced switch got into a saloon and becoming mixed up with the surroundings collided with a young man from an adjoining township, and it took 20 minutes to decide which had the right of way. Now we are not finding any fault with such occurrences, because they are a legitimate production of an institution established and maintained by nine-tenths of the voters of the land. Still there are many pertinent questions that will arise in the minds of the objectors: 1st.—Are saloons worthy of the patronage of teachers, preachers and statesmen, or selected leaders in moral, educational and political science? If not, why not? 2d.—Should not those who vote to license and build up such monopolistic institutions give them their personal and pecuniary patronage and support? If not, why not, and who should? 3d.—Should not an institution that costs the people ten times as much as their entire educational system, and that is becoming stronger and more powerful day by day, receive encouragement and support from the people? If not, why not, and what is the remedy?

BRITTON BUDGET.

Henry Millor spent last Sunday in Tecumseh.

John Britton was away two or three days last week, on a tour of enjoyment near Lake St. Clair.

Sullivan Exelby, of Detroit, was in our village a few days last week, visiting friends.

Chas. Dubois had one of his horses hurt while crossing the C. J. & M. railroad east of Britton. Dr. Smith not being in town at the time, Charlie attended to his own veterinary work.

The Wabash depot and surrounding buildings are being treated to a new coat of paint.

Geo. Gifford has moved to Ridgeway.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Brown were visiting friends in Monroe last week.

Mr. Parshall, our former night operator, stopped off at Britton for a few hours last Saturday evening.

Earnest Dubois returned home last week. He has been visiting friends at Hillsdale.

Geo. Exelby went to Adrian on business one day last week.

Most of our farmers are busy drawing coal wood. The roads are now in fine condition.

If your baby is suffering with those troubles that nearly always attend teething, don't delay, but use at once, Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup. Price 25 cents.

To keep the beard from turning gray, and thus prevent the appearance of age, use Buckingham's Dye for the Whiskers, the best dye made.

WOODSTOCK WARBLES.

Miss Zaidee Pelham is reported sick with pneumonia.

Mr. Chaney Smith has wholly recovered from his illness.

Miss Pearl Wicks, of Napoleon, is visiting at Kelley's Corners.

A number of the neighbors are hail fellows; they all have the LaGrippe.

There have been several cases of pneumonia here but none have proved fatal.

Everybody says what a beautiful winter. The prophets of last fall must have been dreaming.

Blanche Harris and Edith Bartlett who have both been troubled with disease are on the rapid road to health.

Secretary Wilson's registration book reached Dis. No. 2, last Tuesday. It will go into active operation this week. The rural districts do not hail it as any great treasure.

Miss McDougal, teacher of elocution in Hillsdale College, gave an exercise at the F. B, church Saturday evening. She rendered "The Death Bridge of the Tay—The Tell Tale," and many others to the delight of the audience.

The literary society at the F. W. B. church, Wednesday evening was quite a success. There was a goodly number of exercises and all of them reflect credit on the speakers and readers. The little ones are especially worthy of credit. You will seldom find little folks that can do better.

The Farmer's Club met at Mr. Loss Parsons', on Saturday. No persons in Woodstock ever opened their house to a more pleasant and intelligent company than did Mr. and Mrs. Parsons that day. There were six new members joined the Club. Mrs. Lovina Smith was unanimously made an honorary member. The program was an excellent one and carried out to the letter. The dinner was a rare production in the culinary line. They meet at Mr. Wilson Neely's in two weeks.

A remarkable accident happened at the ice house at Devils Lake, on Friday of last week. Mr. John Roof was throwing a piece of refuse ice from the upper window, when the hook did not loosen its hold upon the ice and it drew him from the window and he fell 26 feet upon pieces of broken ice, striking upon his head and shoulders. He arose and went at once to work again, not receiving the slightest injury to speak of. If another has fallen that distance without injury let us hear from him.

TIPTON TOPICS.

Miss Minnie Wiggins, of Adrian, spent last Sunday at C. Vedder's.

Uncle Harrison Daniels, who has been seriously ill, is slowly improving.

The M. E. Society will hold a cake and coffee social at the home of J. M. Burns next Friday eve and all are cordially invited to attend.

On Thursday eve, Jan. 15th, occured the marriage of Minnie B. Jenkins to Ernest E. Wisner. The bride is well known in this vicinity, and the groom is also an old Franklin boy. They started last Tuesday for their home in Nebraska, and the best wishes of success and happiness from their many friends go with them.

The election of P. of I. Association last Tuesday evening, resulted in the following:

Pres—S. N. Munger.
Sec'y—Orman Lamkin.
Treas.—Mrs. A. Cooley.
Guide—C. Vedder.
Sentinel—Joe. Platt.
Minerva—Mrs. N. A. Smith.
Demeter—Mrs. Eugene Camburn.

EAST RAISIN ECHOES.

A surprise party at Sue Billmeyer's last Friday night.

Mrs. L. M. Belden was called away last Saturday by a telegram to attend her mother, who is very sick.

A very young lady arrived at Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Roger's Sunday morning, and as she seemed to be in very destitute circumstances, they have decided to give her a permanent home.

On Thursday eve, next week, Jan. 29th, the Y. P. S. C. E., will give an entertainment at the Holloway hall, consisting of literary exercises and music by some of our best singers and an orchestra of fine instruments.

Two Papers for a Dollar a Year.

THE ST. LOUIS REPUBLIC is sending two papers every week, of not less than six pages each, to the subscribers to its weekly edition. As the subscription price remains one dollar a year, THE REPUBLIC is enjoying an unprecedented circulation boom. The cheapest semi-weekly anywhere else costs double the price. Readers of THE REPUBLIC get the news of the day half a week earlier than any weekly could bring it to them, and yet the price is as low as that of the cheapest weekly. Remember the price is only $1 a year. Sample copies or a premium catalogue of 48 pages sent on application. Address, THE REPUBLIC, St. Louis Mo.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, JAN. 22.

Thirty states of the Union now have Democratic governors.

Gen. Miles emerges from his Indian campaign with flying colors.

The administration should now try the policy of feeding the Indians and see how that works.

The nutmeg State is evidently flourishing. She has two governors, and both seem determined to stick.

The Force bill is a boomerang that will harm its authors more than its intended victims, but the radical leaders are not able to see it.

The crisis has passed in Nebraska and the State has settled down to business at the old stand with only one governor.

The fight over the force bill in the Senate culminated in an all night session last Friday, and the real solid fighting is yet to come.

The defeat of Senator Ingalls in Kansas seems to be assured. The retirement of this arrant demagogue to private life will be a great gain for honest politics.

The passage of the free coinage bill in the Senate last week was a great triumph for the people's cause. The Alliance between the West and South means business.

Colorado is bound to lead in all things. A shooting affray occurred last week, growing out of the legislative dead lock, in which one man was killed and others seriously wounded.

Natural gas is not an unmixed blessing after all. An explosion occurred at Findlay, Ohio, last week, which wrecked a building, killing two girls outright and maining several other persons.

The farmers are in revolt against the existing political conditions. There can be no question about that. The farmers move slowly, but when they do move they generally get there.

The Grand Rapids Democrat has greatly improved since its recent change in ownership. Isaac M. Weston is a hustler and he purposes putting the Democrat at the head of the list in Western Michigan.

The Farmers' Alliance is doing some good work this winter. They smashed the Bourbon Democracy in South Carolina, and the indications are most favorable that they will smash Bourbon Republicanism in Kansas.

The petitions sent to Congress from the people on the Force bill, are a sure indication of the drift of public sentiment. Up to last Saturday there had been 1,693 petitions received. Of these 1,684 petitions were against the bill and only nine in favor of it.

In spite of occasional setbacks the co-operative housekeeping scheme seems to be growing in favor. It threatens to accomplish one of the greatest revolutions of the age—the abolitions of the cook-stove and the operator thereof from large cities and large towns.

Balloting for U. S. Senator began last Tuesday in the legislatures of New York, New Hampshire, Kansas and Illinois. The Democrats will pocket the prize in New York, the Republicans in New Hampshire, the Alliance in Kansas. The result in Illinois is exceedingly doubtful.

The fight on the Force bill is again on in the Senate. The ablest leaders on both sides have locked horns for a big battle and it will be a battle of the giants. The outcome is uncertain, but the chances are against its passage, unless the Republicans shall resort to revolutionary measures.

The McKinley bill is not giving the laboring classes a very happy New Year. Twenty-three Northern blast furnaces have recently been shutdown. It seems to be time for Mr. William McKinley to come to the rescue. This result of his celebrated law throws nearly ten thousand men out of employment.

The Boston Globe says truly: "The change in votes this year from the Republican to the Democratic side is largely a permanent change, and not a spasmodic one. It rests upon deep-seated convictions, and if the Democratic party will maintain its present attitude and march steadily forward on the path of progress and reform, those votes and many others will have come to stay.

THE NEW YEAR AND REFORM.

The new year opens most auspiciously for the success of important reforms. The people are now reading more, thinking more, and acting more for themselves than in any past year of our national history.

Tariff Reform is now one of the absorbing issues of the Republic. The people, without compact organization, have won the most overwhelming victory over monopoly taxes and greed ever recorded in the annals of our political struggles, and the year 1891 will be a year of universal education and general organization of the masses against special legislation for landed classes.

Ballot Reform is just on the threshold of victory in every important State of the Union. It is already victor in a number of States; it has been strangled in a few localities and mocked by deceitful statutes, but the year 1891 will see it nearly universal, and those who have hindered it by imperfect methods will be compelled to bow to honest election returns.

Pension Reform is one of the newest of our popular issues, but it has taken deep root and the new year will record revolutionary advancement in the purpose of a patriotic people to shake off army deadbeats and pension sharks; to reduce the pension roll to a roll of honor; to limit pension appropriations within the resources of the Treasury, and to scourge the army thief naked throughout the land.

Civil Service Reform is another of the landmarks of enlightened progress that will have multiplied worshipers around its altar in the new year. It is hated by political masters and by political jobbers, but the people want honest government and many more scores of thousands will this yesr regard more than ever before government as a matter of business rather than of party. Welcome, thrice welcome, the rapidly approaching noonday of patriotic progress of 1891.—Philadelphia Times.

NO FEAR OF THE FARMERS!

Some of our Eastern friends seem to fear that the growing influence of the agricultural States and of the Farmers' Alliances threatens the stability of government and the security of business. They forget that this government was founded by farmers, and perhaps they never knew what is the fact, that the strength of the conservatism of the country is in its farming class.

The farmers are aroused and indignant, and they have reason to be. They will go into the campaign of 1892 two million strong, and the balance of power they hold will decide it. If Democratic leaders are wise, the decision will be of immediate benefit to the country, but it will be of ultimate benefit in any event. The farmers are not Radicals. At bottom they are Democrats, and good, conservative Democrats, patriotic, public-spirited and anxious to secure sound, safe and stable government, based on justice for all classes. It is true that an attempt has been made to commit them to the so-called "Sub-Treasury" scheme of class socialism, but they learned the principle from the national banking system and the recent Bullion Purchase bill. When it comes to issue, their common-sense will prefer rather to rid the government of a bad principle than, retaining it, to pervert it still further.

They want low tariff taxes and free coinage of the money metals, gold and silver; and certainly no one who believes that the natural laws of trade are better than any artificial system of trade restriction, can impeach them on these points with any hope of convicting them of radicalism or unsoundness. The worst Radicals among them who preach the Sub-Treasury socialism, demand nothing more than $1 per capita money circulation for every one per cent of tariff taxation. If financiers say that this is outrageous, then the reply is ready—"it is only so because your percentage of taxation imposed on us is outrageous."

As far as the railroads are concerned the farmers feel that they have reformed enough in that direction, at least until they have brought the general avarage of reform up to the standard of what they have done in bringing down railroad tariff rates. And the percentage rate of railroad tariff reduction since the first farmers' movement has been astonishingly great. If the government tariff had come down at the same rate there would be no need of a farmers' movement now.

That it exists is proof enough that it is needed. It has already done much good, and it will do more. It is the foe of the civil war sectionalism. It is bringing the agricultural States of the South and West together, and is retiring the Radicals of both sides from politics. It already has the scalps of some of the worst shakers of the "Bloody Shirt," and it will soon have more.

THE REPUBLIC hopes that every farmer among its readers will go into it, without making any secret or un-American pledges, and help turn out the broken-down hack politicians who have gone into it because they had nowhere else to go. When that is done, it can be kept on the lines of sound principle and just government. It is a Democratic movement, and it cannot fail in the end to work for the permanent good of the country. The country court house crowd will object, of course, but never mind that. "Be sure you're right, then go ahead," no matter who objects.—St. Louis Republic.

THE SILVER VICTORY.

The U. S. Senate last week by a decisive majority passed a bill for the free coinage of silver. This is the second time during the present Congress that the Senate has passed such a measure. This action, although not wholly unexpected, is nevertheless, a bill of far reaching importance. There has been a popular demand, for the past ten years, for an increase of the circulating medium. The people have long felt that a great wrong was inflicted upon them in the demonetization of silver, and the act just passed is simply an effort to right that wrong. When the process of contraction was going on for the purpose of resuming specie payments, the people acquiesced in the hardship caused by such contraction, because the resumption of specie payments seemed essential to the stability of business. But there is no good reason for continuing the policy of contraction after that time. The increase in the volume of currency has not kep pace with the increase of business, and hence a gradual contraction has resulted each year. The inevitable result of this policy has been to knock down prices, to deteriorate values and to rob the debtor classes.

The people of the West and South have finally become aroused and at the elections last November most emphatically showed their teeth. Although the McKinley bill had much to do with the late political revolution, it is also true that the silver question was one great cause of it. In some parts of the West it doubtless had more influence than the tariff. The financial legislation of the Republican party has been wholly in the interests of Wall Street. The people finally became tired of carrying the load and rebelled. The opponents of free silver coinage maintain that silver has deteriorated in price. But why has it? Was it not the act demonetizing the white metal which produced that effect? Will not the restoring of silver to its proper place as money again raise the price? At all events, the people have made up their minds, most emphatically and irrevocably, to try the experiment, and if the present Congress shall not obey their wishes in this regard, the next Congress surely will do so.

* * *

The debate on the bill was a very able one on both sides. Several strong speeches were made. Senator Ingalls of Kansas furnished the sensational features. He completely reversed his whole past record on the silver question. He has heard the echo from the Kansas prairies, and for the first time in his official life, he had the manliness to fight for the rights of his own constituents. But his eleventh hour repentance has probably come too late to save his own bacon. One passage of his speech was certainly a remarkable utterance for a Senator with his previous Wall Street record. Referring to the late election, he said: "It was neither a democratic victory nor a republican defeat. It was a great uprising, independent of and superior to both political parties. It was a crisis that may become a catastrophe. It was a peaceful revolution." Speaking of the free coinage of silver, he said: "I have not the slightest doubt that a great majority of the people, irrespective of party, are in favor of the free coinage of silver and have been so for the past fifteen years. They have been paltered with, in a double sense, and their will has been thwarted, defied and contemptuously trodden under foot. Warnings and admonitions have been plenty in this debate, but I will say to those who are arraying themselves against the deliberately expressed judgment of the American people—I will say to the Senate, to the House and to the Executive—that there will come a time when the people will not be trifled with on this subject. Some time the people will elect a House of Representatives, a Senate and a President who will carry out party pledges and execute the popular will. The political power of the nation has been transferred from the circumference to the center, and the people of that center are unanimously demanding free coinage of silver." No speech delivered in the Senate during the last ten years was more attentively listened to. It was not only a straw, but a big bundle of straws, to show that the free silver breeze is becoming a hurricane.

* * *

But will the bill become a law? That is a debatable question. Speaker Reed probably possesses the power, under his gag rules, to smother the bill in the House. But supposing he shall allow the bill to take its course freely. It would doubtless pass the House by a safe majority. In that event would the President veto it? The bill therefore has two chances to win. The first chance is favorable. The last election has had a very mollifying effect upon the Speaker. It is doubtful whether the Speaker will use his power either to prevent a report on the bill or to stiffle debate upon it. It is likely to reach a vote in the House, and if it does, it will pass. But it is likely also to encounter a Presidential veto. From the standpoint of the public welfare, a veto would be a national calamity. Viewed from a selfish party standpoint alone, it would be a big card for the Democracy. A Presidential veto of a free coinage bill would bury the Republican party out of sight forever.

PARTY LEADERS.

Lincoln, Sumner, Seward, Chase, Andrew, were in the highest sense leaders who stood for the character, the aims, and the ability of the party. A party with such representative leaders might be justly expected to conduct the greatest public affairs with the moral enthusiasm and support of their associates. They alone were the best arguments for the party. It was confidence in such men which largely wielded the party into a great and resistless force; for a party is measured by its leaders. The sole dependence of the Democratic party during the war were the character, not the opinions and sympathies, of Horatio Seymour. Its strongest popular argument now is Grover Cleveland. But when the Republican party looks at its more conspicuous and acknowledged leaders of to-day, it is, in plain English, and if frank private confession may be trusted, disgusted. Of course we are not saying that all prominent Republicans are of that kind. But to confine our remarks to this State, it is notorious that the real and efficient Republican leader in New York for some time has been Mr. Thomas C. Platt. He has been frankly acknowledged as such by the President, who has fulfilled his civil service reform pledges in New York by making Mr. Platt his chief counsellor in the distribution of patronage.

This leadership largely explains the result in this State in November. There were crowds of Republicans who cared more for hitting Platt and the President than for helping McKinley. There were a great number of such Republicans in the city who would not vote for Mr. Scott, the anti-Tammany candidate for Mayor, because they would not strengthen the p[illegible] Platt. Such leaders are costly [illegible] present condition of the party [illegible] York now shows.—Harper's Weekly.

THAT TIME HAS COME.

Says a Republican organ: "The senate is Republican and will inevitably be so for at least twelve years. Even were the house Democratic no Democratic or free trade tariff can be put through Congress. Democrats and everybody know it. So there is nothing practicable in what they are doing.' Well, that is brutally frank, anyway. Even though the Democrats should have a hundred majority in the house, every man of them elected on the tariff-reform issue, even though a tariff-reform candidate for the presidency should get every electoral vote, yet would the Republican senate set itself up against this overwhelming expression of the popular will and prevent any reform for at least twelve years. Is ours a government of, by, and for the people, or is it a government of the people by the senate for the licensed robbers? THE TIMES is inclined to think that a number of Plumbs may ripen in the senate when the people emphatically demand reform.—Chicago Times.

The New York World says: That the revolution of November is not going backward is proved by every test at special elections since that time. The latest evidence was afforded at the election held in the First Senate District of West Virginia on Saturday to fill a vacancy. The Democratic candidate swept the District by more than a thousand majority. There are none so deaf as those who will not hear—especially Bourbon politicians in office at Washington with long terms to serve. But their time will come.

The Clothes Pin is the finishing touch in washing. A fine piece of linen is hung over the line; the clothes pin is jammed down to hold it; the wind blows and a constant wrenching is going on until the article is taken down. A hole appears where the clothes pin was. It is difficult to see how you are going to get rid of the clothes pin; but there are things which make more holes than clothes pins; for instance, the rubbing up and down on a board—a necessity when an article is washed with common soap—will rub more holes into fine clothes or coarse, than can ever be charged to clothes pins. There is a way out of this dilemma,

Use Pearline.

You do not have to rub your clothes; soak them, boil them, rinse them, and the job is done. They will be cleaner, sweeter, whiter in half the time; colors will be brighter, flannels softer, and you have gotten rid of half the labor.

PEARLINE costs no more than common soap. Millions of women are using it. Five cents will buy enough PEARLINE to prove to you that every word we say is true, and if true, a great many times five cents would be cheap for it.

Beware of peddled imitations—Pearline is never peddled. 160 JAMES PYLE, New York.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

TAXING LAND VALUES.

[Henry George, in N. Y. Standard.]

The substitution of taxation upon the single item of land values for all the various taxes now imposed would be an enormous governmental and social economy. We should save the salaries and perquisites and official expenses of the horde of functionaries, national, State and municipal, who are now engaged in assessing and collecting all these other taxes, or in doing things directly or indirectly necessitated by the cumbrous system. We should get rid of them all, from those fee-paid local officials who in a single term expect a fortune, and those federal collectors whose places are deemed of more importance than the governorship of sovereign States, down to the officials who are busied in seeing whether cigar boxes are stamped, and peddlers are provided with licenses, or in searching the trunks and persons of passengers as they land. We should save the cost of trying and imprisoning offenders; we should save, too, the cost of all the devices—some of them very expensive—that are resorted to for evading the revenue laws, for it is obvious that all these expenses must ultimately be borne by consumers.

The tax upon land values is of all taxes that which combines the maximum of certainty with the maximum of expense. "Land lies out of doors;" it can not be hid or disguised, and its value is easily ascertained. Any competent real estate dealer can tell to a nicety the value per front foot of any lot on Broadway. But, to ascertain the value of the building on it, it will be necessary to get an expert to make an examination; while, if that building be filled with goods, it is impossible for any outsider to get at their value. A tax upon the value of land can be collected to the last cent by a tax collector sitting in his office. Deducting the very small percentage, which would be all that would be required to pay the expenses of the periodical assessment and the receipt of taxes, the people in their collective capacity would thus get the benefit of all that was paid in as taxes by the people as individuals.

But the saving that would result is by no means to be estimated by the reduction in the cost and direct incidents of collecting revenues. It is the great vice of taxes that distribute themselves in added prices that, beyond the official tax gatherers, they create a long line of virtual tax gatherers, and that each man in the line not only takes the tax, but his profit on the tax, and in many cases is enable to take a great deal more. How strongly the "whisky ring" opposed the reduction of the whisky tax and the match manufacturers the abolition of the tax on matches is well known. And so with all indirect taxes. The difficulty is not usually in imposing them, but in abolishing them. Let a bill be introduced in Congress to abolish the tax on any of the long list of things taxed, and strightway there will appear in the lobby some one to protest and log-roll against it, a sure proof that somebody besides the Government is making money from the tax—that is to say, that the tax is taking from the people at large a good deal more than the Government is getting from it. That this system, which engages great private interests in keeping up rather than in putting down taxation, fosters governmental extravagance and corruption is clear.

Now, by abolishing all other taxes in favor of the tax upon land values we should not only save very largely in the ways thus pointed out, but by the greater simplicity that would be given to government, we should save the political demoralization which the present system entails. It is "the money in politics" that makes our politics so corrupt, that puts honesty and patriotism at a disadvantage, and gives as traders and jobbers where we ought to have statesmen. That there is so much money in politics arises principally from the great number of officers which our present system of taxation necessitates, and from the great number of pecuniary interests which it concerns in the running of government. And beyond all this is the effect upon morals. Nearly all the taxes which we propose to abolish become, in one way or another, taxes upon conscience, and by setting a premium on bribery, forgery and fraud, foster political corruption and social demoralization.

Now, in view of the great economies which in all these various ways would result from the substitution of a tax on land values for all other taxes, is it not clear that the change would be of the greatest benefit, and would conduce largely to the general prosperity. Beside such "civil service reform" as this, the little picayune measure, good though it may be in itself, on which men like George William Curtis have been spending so much time and talent, is as a minnow to a whale.

The present system, which taxes buildings and improvements, capital in all its forms, and in most of our States in all its shadows, is a system of direct discouragement to production, a system which fines the man who creates wealth just in proportion as he creates wealth. Instead of acting on the principle that the man who makes two blades of grass grow where one grew before is a public benefactor, our system of taxation treats him as a public enemy. If a man clothe a barren waste with grain and fruit trees, if he drain a swamp or open a mine, if he put up a house where none stood before, or erect a factory, or turn wood or iron into a ship; if he get him a library with which to store and exercise his mind, or a telescope with which to sweep the heavens, or laboratory in which to seek out the laws of nature's combinations; if out of his savings he lay by a provision for his declining days; if by his energy and thrift he accumulate capital with which to assist and organize and provide the tools for industry—down comes the tax gatherer to make him pay for having done these things! Is not this as absurd as it is unjust? Is it not in direct contravention of the plainest dictates of enlightened public policy? Do we not all want more wealth? Why, then, should we tax and fine the production of wealth?

Some of the Southern States have recently passed laws exempting cotton manufactories from taxation for a term of years, and the result has been the erection of a number of cotton factories, for the capitalists who thus invest their money can calculate on dividing as profits what otherwise they would have had to pay as taxes. Are not these States wise in this? Do not these cotton factories create new industries, add to the wealth of the neighborhoods in which they are erected, and enrich the whole State? But if this be wise, would it not be still wiser to make the exemption permanent instead of for a term of years? And, if it be wise to exempt cotton factories, would it not be wiser still to exempt all sorts of factories, all forms of capital, all kinds of wealth—houses and goods, horses and cattle, railroads and telegraphs? Is not the State the richest that has the most of these things?

Why, then, should the State tax them? Is not the stupid system that does tax them too absurd for any rational defense? The people of New York want cheaper house rents. Is it not stupid, then, to put taxes on buildings, which necessarily will diminish the erection of buildings, and, unlike the tax on land values, must inevitably be collected from tenants in higher rents?

But the direct obstacles to production, which this system imposes, are not the worst. All the indirect taxes which pass from hand to hand, increasing the cost of commodities, are taxes against production, which increase as they go. This barbarous tariff of ours, that raises an artificial barrier around our coasts is more difficult for commerce to surmount than would be the Andes or the Himalayas, takes from the people much more than is received by the Government, and, by its action and reaction on prices, hampers every exertion of industry, from the building of a railroad to the shingling of a woodshed or the making of a shirt.

Now, it is clear that to abolish all the taxes that thus hamper industry, would be to vastly stimulate production and increase the general wealth. But this is only one side of it. To put taxation on the value of land would also be to remove obstacles to production. For the speculative value, which now attaches to land as soon as it becomes probable that it will be needed for use is a direct check to production. To get the vacant lot on which to put up a house, even on the outskirts of any one of our large cities costs as much as or more than ordinarily does the house. Before he can strike a plowshare into virgin soil, the farmer, unless he will go far beyond where his labor can be exerted to most advantage, is obliged to pay down a large part of his capital, to embarrass himself with a mortgage, or to agree to give up a large share of his produce as rent. The result is to fill the land with tramps; to crowd our centers even in the best of times with men who are willing to work, anxious to work, but unable to find opportunity to work—and thus to produce an unnatural competition, which in all occupations tends to force wages down to the minimum on which men can live, and which workingmen are driven to resist by what President Glackin, in his address to the Anti-Poverty Society on last Sunday night, styled the resort to brute force. The result is to crowd people together too closely in the cities, to scatter them too far apart in the country. To say nothing of the moral, social and intellectual disadvantages which result from this unnatural distribution of population, there is a great obstacle put in the way of improvement, a manifest waste of productive forces.

The measure we propose, which would utterly destroy the speculative value of land, and would reduce the selling value of land to but a nominal figure, would remove this obstacle and prevent this waste. No one would care to take up land that he could not use, or to hold land unless it was put to its most valuable use. The homes of our farmers would be closer together, the poorer classes of our cities would no longer be compelled to herd in tenement houses, and the capitalist who proposed to erect a factory would no longer have to pay out so much of his capital for a site. Instead of that, he would pay the annual rental value of the land in taxes, but this would be in lieu of all other taxation. Thus the effect of this measure would be to throw open to labor and capital the means of production while relieving production from taxation. And the result of thus opening to labor the natural opportunities for the employment of labor would be to set to work every man willing to work; to do away with that unnatural competition which comes from a glutted labor market. It would be to create a demand for commodities that would set every wheel of industry in motion, and stimulate the forces of production to their utmost.

Clearly this would be greatly to promote the general prosperity and greatly to add to the general wealth.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

CERTAIN services for society require an agent for their performance. To meet the expense of these things, funds have to be raised. To raise them by taxation of land values rather than by any other form of taxation would, the People thinks, minimize the discouragement to industry, inevitable from taxation in any form. This is why the People favors taxation of land values.—Providence People.

THE farmer who is told that the single tax on land values is designed to increase his burdens while lightening those of the bloated monopolists and aristocrats, ought to stop to ask why in thunder the bloated monopolists and aristocrats are not now howling for it. It is not the fashion for them to fight things that increase their power or lighten their burdens.—Vincennes, Ind. News.

THE land question, simmered down, is this: Did the Creator intend that all the children of His creation should have a footing upon the earth, or did he bequeath it to a few that they might levy tribute upon the balance of the people at will?—Omaha Truth.

THE PROPHETS OF BAAL.

LESSON IV, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JAN. 25.

Text of the Lesson, I Kings xviii, 25-39. Commit Verses, 38, 39—Golden Text, I Kings xviii, 21—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

25. "And Elijah said unto the prophets of Baal, Choose you one bullock for yourselves, and dress it first, for ye are many, and call on the name of your God, but put no fire under."

At Cherith (cutting) and Zarephath (refining) Elijah had been cut off from all human resources, and refined in the school of poverty and close communion with God, and thus qualified for the contest now before him. He who had been so much alone with God had no fear of King Ahab nor of the hundreds of prophets of Baal.

26. "Oh, Baal, hear us. But there was no voice nor any that answered."

Baal signifies lord or master, and is found in Num. xxii, 41, as the god of the Moabites. Israel worshiped Baal-peor, and 24,000 were slain by a plague (Num. xxv, 3, 9). In the days of the Judges they again and again forsook the Lord and worshiped Baal (Judg. ii, 11, 13; iii, 7; vi, 31; viii, 33; x, 6, 10); but this King Ahab had led them more astray than they had ever been before (I Kings xvi, 30-33).

27. "And it came to pass that at noon Elijah mocked them and said, Cry aloud, for he is a God."

28. "And they cried aloud, and cut themselves, after their manner * * * till the blood gushed out upon them."

Fancy hundreds of men leaping up and down (verse 26, margin), and shouting and cutting their bodies till the blood streamed from them, and all to make the god whom they worshiped hear them. Central Africa could not produce anything worse.

29. "There was neither voice nor any to answer, nor any that regarded."

30. "And Elijah said unto all the people, Come near unto me. And all the people came near unto him."

In calmness he had waited, his soul doubtless communing with his God, but now the decisive moment had come; 450 men had failed—what could this one man do? He was one of those of whom it is written, "One shall chase a thousand, and two put ten thousand to flight."

"And he repaired the altar of the Lord that was broken down."

One of the first acts of Noah on leaving the ark was to build an altar unto the Lord, and so also did Abram when he entered the land of Canaan (Gen. viii, 20; xii, 8). From the days of Adam and Abel the altar and the sacrifice were typical of Him who was to come as the great sinbearer.

31. "And Elijah took twelve stones, according to the number of the tribes of the sons of Jacob."

See twelve stones in the same connection in Ex. xxiv, 4; xxviii, 21; Josh. iv, 3, 8, 9, 20. Although the twelve tribes were divided into ten and two, making two nations, yet they were only one nation before God, and He has ever before Him the time when they shall be reunited under one king (Ezek. xxxvii, 21, 22). All Israel had at this time become idolaters, and hence the necessity of a testimony to the twelve tribes concerning the true God.

32. "And with the stones he built an altar in the name of the Lord."

33. "And he put the wood in order, and cut the bullock in pieces, and laid him on the wood."

A bullock was used both as a sin offering and as a burnt offering (Lev. i and iv), and in these chapters full instructions are found as to the manner of offering. The sin offering was a type of Christ bearing our sins; the burnt offering was a type of Christ offering himself without spot to God.

34, 35. "The water ran round about the altar, and he filled the trench also with water."

Once, twice, thrice was the sacrifice, and the wood and the altar drenched with water. There was to be no deception here, no fire hidden somewhere about, which might be secretly used.

36. "Lord God of Abraham, Isaac and of Israel, let it be known this day that thou art God in Israel and that I am thy servant."

By this title God revealed Himself to Moses at the burning bush and said, "This is my name forever, and this is my memorial unto all generations" (Ex. iii, 6, 15, 16). Observe that the prophet's whole aim is that God may be magnified.

"And that I have done all these things at thy word."

Then the altar and sacrifice and wood and water and answer by fire were no mere thoughts of Elijah, but simple commands of God which he had only to obey, trusting God for all results.

37. "Hear me, O Lord, hear me; that this people may know that Thou art the Lord God, and that Thou hast turned their heart back again."

"If we know that He hear us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we desired of Him" (I John v, 15). So that Elijah's one desire now was for God to hear him. "And this is the confidence that we have in Him, that, if we ask anything according to His will, He heareth us" (I John v, 14). Elijah having done just what God told him, must then have had the assurance in his heart that God heard him.

38. "Then the fire of the Lord fell."

Picture to yourself the multitude gazing on this lone man as he stands calmly before them beside his drenched and dripping altar and sacrifice and trench full of water, conscious of the presence and favor of the Lord God of Israel. He does not cry aloud nor leap up and down, but quietly looks up to heaven, and with his whole heart utters these few words (just thirty-four in the Hebrew) unto his God in the hearing of all the people.

"And consumed the burnt sacrifice, and the wood, and the stones, and the dust, and licked up the water that was in the trench."

Just as at the dedication of the tabernacle, and the temple, and the offerings of Gideon and David, supernatural fire consumed the sacrifice (Lev. ix, 24; II Chron. vii, 1; Judg. vi, 21; I Chron. xxi, 26), so it happened now. I have no doubt but the offering of Abel was accepted in the same way. But notice how this fire acts; it does not go from earth upward, but coming from heaven takes the nearest first, the sacrifice, then the wood and so on to the very water in the trench.

39. "And when all the people saw it they fell on their faces. And they said, The Lord He is the God; the Lord He is the God."

So well they might, for the God of Moses and Aaron, of Gideon and David and Solomon, God, who is a consuming fire (Deut. iv, 24; ix, 3), had again declared Himself by the unfailing but awful sign, telling them of the wrath that would fall on them unless they came to Him in true penitence and by way of true sacrifice, as He had appointed.

A DYSPEPTIC'S ARGUMENT
Is a growl, and that growl marks the limit of argument with him. The best way to get him to try a medicine would be to advise against it—but notice how different his tone after using Burdock Blood Bitters.
"I have suffered with Dyspepsia for the last two years. Not long ago I commenced taking B. B. B. I am now on the second bottle and feel like a new man. G. KNOX, 12 Sherwood Ave., Binghamton, N. Y."
REPEATED TESTS WITH UNIFORM SUCCESS prove the fact that Burdock Blood Bitters will cure dyspepsia. The reason is plain, it tones the stomach to natural action and keeps the sluice ways of the system free from clogging impurities.
"I have been troubled with dyspepsia and heart disease for nine years, and found no relief until I tried Burdock Blood Bitters. Now I am well after taking two bottles.

THE FIGURE "9."
The figure 9 in our dates will make a long stay. No man or woman now living will ever date a document without using the figure 9. It starts in the third place in 1890, where it will remain 100 years and then move up to second place in 1990, where it will rest for one hundred years.
There is another "9" which has also come to stay. It is unlike the figure 9 in our dates in the respect that it has already moved up to first place, where it will permanently remain. It is called the "No. 9" High Arm Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine.
The "No. 9" was endorsed for first place by the experts of Europe at the Paris Exposition of 1889, where, after a severe contest with the leading machines of the world, it was awarded the only Grand Prize given to family sewing machines, and others on exhibit having received lower award of gold medals, etc. The French Government also recognized its superiority by the decoration to Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, President of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor.
The "No. 9" is not an old machine improved upon, but is an entirely new machine, and the Grand Prize at Paris was awarded it as the grandest advance in sewing machine mechanism of the age. Those who buy it can rest assured, therefore, of having the very latest and best.

DR. ERASMUS' MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.
It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.
The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.
WHAT IT CURES.
All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.
It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.
Over 40 Years.
This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.
Prices 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

THE HERALD FOR 1891.

The HERALD is still in the ring, fully prepared to fill its accustomed place during the year of grace 1891. The 15th day of November last completed a cycle of sixteen years under its present management, and Providence permitting, the "old reliable" is likely to sail right along under the same pilot for sixteen years to come.

It is needless to inform the public what to expect in our columns during the ensuing twelve months. The general policy of the paper is well known and its record has been made. First and foremost, it will aim to be a first-class local newspaper, to act as a faithful chronicler of all local happenings of importance within the territory of its circulation. In this respect it will continue to lead all competitors.

Recognizing the stringency of the times caused by excessive taxation, we shall endeavor to accommodate the necessities of our patrons by placing our rates at the lowest possibl point, and our terms for 1891 have been adjusted with that end in view.

OFFER NO. ONE.

We have made arrangements with that wide-awake illustrated farm magazine, The American Farmer, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., and read by nearly 200,000 farmers, by which that great publication will be mailed direct to the address of any of our subscribers who will pay up all arrearages and a year in advance. The subscription price of the American Farmer is $1.00 per year. It costs you nothing. The two papers at our full rate of $1.50 per year.

OFFER NO. TWO.

The Great Divide is the title of a new monthly magazine published at Denver, Colorado, which has already taken a position among the best periodicals of this country. Our Club offer with the Great Divide is the most liberal one ever extended to our patrons. The Magazine for one year, the HERALD for one year and the Gemstone Cabinet for a premium will be given for $2.00. A sample copy of the magazine and a specimen of the Gemstone Cabinet can be seen at this office.

OFFER NO. THREE.

We offer reduced rates for the HERALD alone when payment is made strictly in advance. We earnestly urge upon our patrons the benefits of this plan. Call at our office in January, pay for your paper one year in advance, and thus secure the lowest cash rates. By so doing you will help yourself and help us at the same time. We will furnish the HERALD alone

THE BEAUTIFUL COUNTRY AROUND TECUMSEH, MICHIGAN.

Where the Famous Chief Had His Favorite Hunting Grounds—Notes of Aboriginal Life.

The following pen picture of the Raisin Valley in the vicinity of Tecumseh is clipped from a recent number of the Toledo Bee—It is well worth reading and preserving also. "But few persons who live along the main line of the Lake Shore railway are aware that within a few hours ride from Toledo there is a country great in historic fame and whose unequalled changing scenery is a welcome and pleasing surprise to the traveler. Twenty-eight miles northwest of this city the Jackson branch leaves the old road at Lenawee Junction. After the engine's first whistle at the country road crossing, the train follows the wonderful valley of the river Raisin, now winding among the hills, through meadow lands, past prosperous towns and villages, through inviting groves and fine farms whose magnificent houses speak volumes for the richness of the soil and the prosperity of the inhabitants.

The River Raisin, a narrow clear stream, reminds one of the "castle puzzle" in its wanderings among the hills, now lost from sight, then unexpectedly appearing from a tamarack forest, the dark limbs throwing shadows over many deep and silent pools and winding channel, then merrily running through a valley rich in nature's greatest productions. Along the track, at suitable intervals, are thrifty larch trees with an occasional chestnut, and between the fences the land is clean and inviting. From the junction to the city of Jackson the road passes through an unusually beautiful country, and while the land is unexcelled for productiveness, it can be purchased from $50 to $150 per acre with first-class improvements. The farmers are intelligent, industrious and interesting conversationalists.

The attractiveness of this valley does not lie alone in its picturesque appearance; it does not consist simply of the winding, clear stream, with old Indian trails of purple and gold which the setting sun throws upon its iridescent waters, nor in the white light the morning sun spreads over the hills, but that it was one time, many years ago, the home of the celebrated aboriginal warrior, Tecumseh. To-day there comes to the thoughtful stranger as he rides over the country, particularly in the neighborhood of the pretty town of Tecumseh, well named "The Gem of the Raisin Valley," a sort of a sad feeling, like a vision that comes in the night through the shadows of years that are past, and one can almost imagine the hill-sides covered with wandering tribes of Indians, the Valleys dotted with wigwams of the Shawnees, and the great Tecumseh striding among his people, the prowdest of warriors.

We had occasion to stop at Tecumseh and became acquainted with a few of her happy people. The town is situated upon the right and west bank of the Raisin, 40 feet above this river and commanding a panoramic view of the surrounding country, overlooking the famous camping grounds of Tecumseh and his brave tribe of Indians. Even in mid-winter when the tree tops lay asleep and the long lines of hillsides rising above the misty valleys are wrapped in a purple haze, the scene is enchanting.

Some little distance northeast from the Lilley House, upon a plateau surrounded by tall and ancient oak trees, the citizens point with considerable pride as being the camping ground and the home of Tecumseh and his followers. It was at this spot where the chieftian gathered his warriors together, encouraged them in their war dances and led them with cheering words to the Maumee and finally to Canada. To-day there remains but few gentlemen who remember the Shawnee Indians, but the history as told them by their fathers of Tecumseh is fresh in the memories of many of the inhabitants of the Raisin valley. After a stroll around the old camping ground and conversing with many of the farmers, we learned the following interesting history of the life and doings of Tecumseh:

The famous chief was one of three at a birth; one was a great "Prophet" who lived among the hills on Shawnee creek, in Montgomery county, Ohio, and who was defeated by Gen. Harrison at Tippecanoe, Nov. 7, 1811. The third never appeared in history.

Tecumseh means "Shooting Star," and he received this appellation from the following incident: When a young man he was sent on an important mission to Kentucky, for the purpose of soliciting the Creeks to unite with the Shawnees in battle. They refused, and in his wrath he said: "I will go straight to my tribe on the Raisin, and when I get there I will stamp my feet upon the ground and shake down your houses." A month later the Indians saw a comet in the sky and felt an earthquake. They believed that Tecumseh had kept his word, they followed his advice, but which resulted in their annihilation, and to all the Indians of the Ohio the Shawnee chieftian was known as Tecumseh, the shooting star. He was familiar with the forests and made frequent visits to southern Ohio and Kentucky. He was 5 feet 10 inches high, well formed for activity and the endurance of fatigue; his carriage was great and lofty, his motion quick, his visage stern, with an air of hautiness in his countenance, which arose from an elevated pride of soul. His eloquence was nervous, concise and impressive; his words were few, but always to the purpose. His dress was plain, he was never known to indulge in the gaudy decoration of his person, which was and is the general practice of the Indians. He could neither read, write, nor speak English. He is in every respect a "savage," the greatest, perhaps, since the days of Pontiac. He never gave nor accepted quarter. He was always opposed to the sale of the Indian lands. He was in almost every battle with the Americans, from the time of Harmer's defeat to that of the Thames. He was several times wounded and always in the hottest of the fire. His ruling passion seems to have been glory.

He was careless of wealth; although his plundering and subsidies amounted to a great sum, he preserved a little for himself. He was killed by Col. Johnson, of Gen. Harrison's staff, on the 5th of October, 1813, on the river Thames in Canada. When he fell he was in the forty-fourth year of his age, and he held the commission as brigadier general in the British army.

EARLY FISHING.

Inquiry was made among the residents along the banks of the river as to whether the stream was "fished out," the old places deserted, and if any fish are caught worthy of mention. We were informed that the Raisin still contains the black bass, the rock bass, pickerel, pike, perch, sunfish, catfish, suckers and the stately muskalonge. Many Toledoans remember the good-natured landlord, Charles Bidwell, who formerly owned the old American; we were surprised to see him sitting upon a store-box, basking in the sun and smiling at every turn he made with his knife upon a native pine stick.

After exchanging the courtesies of the season, and assuring him that Toledo was still growing very rapidly, he said: "By the way, John, you used to have a pretty good record as an angler. Now while I have no pretentions to being an expert, I had an experience this last fall that ought to be recognized among truthful fishermen."

Charles lowered his voice as he came closer to me and in all seriousness he told the following:

I like to follow the streams, particularly where they are so inviting as in this country, I love fishing—when they bite. I have often heard about the wonderful bass and pickerel caught in the Raisin, and last October I concluded to try my luck. With a fine rod and bucket of minnows I went to a deep hole below the hills, and after an hours fishing I had a fine string of bass and pickerel.

About four o'clock in the afternoon I put upon my hook the largest minnow I had, and made a cast in the middle of the stream. It had not mor'n touched the water when away she went like a streak lightning. I jerked and hooked the fish. I was surprised at the size and felt my inability to land him, He leaped into the air; I saw it was a pickerel. I had no time to study how to get him out, he had his own way about everything.

An idea came to me. I knew an old fisherman in town who had experience in landing large fish. I removed the line from the rod and tied the end to a tree, hastened to the town in search of my friend. Finding him we returned to the hole. The line was taut, and the old angler began to gently haul in hand over hand. Suddenly there was a fearful splash. "My goodness, Jake," I cried, "there is a fish on there as big as a sturgeon." I knew it was't the same fish I had hooked.

We waded in the river and played with him until nearly sundown, when we succeeded in beaching him. It was a muskalonge, and while I had gone to town for assistance, he saw the struggling pickerel, and took him; the pickerel weighed three pounds, the muskalonge 41½; the hook never touched the large fish, but the fins of the small one were fastened in the great jaws of the muskalonge; there was a catch of 45 pounds at one sitting. Can you beat that in ten-mile creek?"

I shook my head as I boarded the train at the street crossing for home, and yelled, "Charlie, you shall be recognized."

The funeral of Henry Smith was held at the M. E. church, Wednesday. Mr. Smith was born in Vermont in 1799. Early emigrated to New York and from thence to Michigan, and was a resident of Cambridge nearly fifty years. In all the relations of life he was guided by honor and integrity, commanding the esteem of all who were in any way associated with him. He lived cheered by the hopes and governed by the principles of the Christian religion. Four children survive him.

OBITUARY.

Mr. Henry Smith died at his home in Springville, on Monday Jan. 12th, aged 92 years and 7 months. The deceased was born in Vermont in 1799 and removed to the State of New York in his youth. Having married, in the year 1833 he came to the territory of Michigan and settled near Detroit. In 1836 he moved to Cambridge and settled upon a farm and has ever since made that township his home. Four children blessed his home, one son and three daughters, all of whom are still living. The son W. H. Smith, lives at Onsted; two daughters, both married, reside at Clayton; and one daughter presided over her father's home in Springville. The funeral which was held on Wednesday of last week, was largely attended by old neighbors and friends, and there was a plentiful supply of them, for the deceased was one of the pioneer settlers of that township. He had been a life-long Presbyterian, was a kind neighbor and most estimable citizen. J. H. & Chas. Smith of this village were his grandsons.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

WHEREAS, During the year 1890, the great Father in His all-wise Providence, has seen fit to remove from our midst by death Comrade Charles A. Pawson, a member of Beers Post, No. 140, G. A. R., Tecumseh, Mich. He is missed from our ranks and camp-fires, has gone on his last march, and answered the last roll call, and no longer joins with us as we sing our evening odes or offer our evening prayers, Be it therefore,

Resolved, That we express our heartfelt sorrow, and extend our sympathy, to those who loved him and mourn his departure. May his life be kept fresh on the pages of our memory and his name upon the records of the Post. Blessed be his memory, his friendship, patriotism and love for liberty. May his memory be ever enshrined within our hearts, until we all meet again in the Supreme Grand Army above.

The executive committee of the coming Farmers' Institute met at the HERALD office last Saturday afternoon. A programme was blocked out and nearly completed. A few additions will be made before it is ready for publication.

Dr. Bennett will be at the Lilley House on Wednesday, January 28th. They who believe there is no cure for them, who have been given up as hopeless cases by other physicians, those are the patients the doctor most desires to receive, because he knows it is within his ability to restore them to health. Consultations free in German and English.

Justice Burridge received a letter the other day from an heir of Musgrove Evans, living in Texas, inquiring about the old cemetery lot on Kilbuck st. The writer claimed ownership of the property on the ground that it was deeded to the village for a burial place only, and hence would revert to Evans' heirs when it was no longer used for that purpose. There are two or three snags in the path. The land was never owned by Musgrove Evans, but by Austin E. Wing. The title afterwards passed to General J. W. Brown, who sold it to VanVleet, who attempted by litigation to hold the same, and failed in his suit. The title, therefore, to this identical property has been adjudicated upon in the courts and decided in favor of the village.

The interior of the postoffice has been treated to a fresh coat of paint.

Geo. W. Stacy, of East Buffalo, spent a few days on the old farm last week.

Dr. J. F. Jenkins has been elect a member of the American Health Association.

If you have ever attended one of these contests, it is unnecessary to ask you to come again; if not, come and see what they are.

Last Friday evening, Frank Millsson of Isaac C. Mills of Macon closed his long struggle for life, aged 31 years. The last few years of his life were spent in Texas, where for a time he seemed to improve, and hopes were entertained for his recovery; but gradually he began to grow weaker, and in August returned to his old and much loved home. It was a great source of comfort to him, as well as his friends, that his last days could be spent with those with whom he so much loved. He was full of energy and ambition, and yet through all the long years of suffering and disappointment, he maintained that quiet, cheerful disposition which always characterized his life. Frank had very many warm friends, who will sadly miss his genial, pleasant face, and the kind tender sympathy which he always extended to those in sorrow, those loving him most who knew him best. His grief-stricken relatives have the deep sympathy of a large circle of friends in this their sad affliction. Funeral services were held at the home on Tuesday at one o'clock, and were attended by a large concourse of neighbors and friends.

MARVELOUS ENDURANCE.

The vast amount of labor performed by the heart in keeping all portions of the body supplied with blood is not generally known. It beats 100,000 times and forces the blood at the rate of 16½ miles a day, which is 3,000,000,000 times and 5,150,880 miles in a life time. No wonder there are so many HEART FAILURES. The first symptoms are shortness of breath when exercising, pain in the side or stomach, fluttering choking in throat, oppression, often follow weak, hungry or smothering spells, swollen ankles, etc. Dr. Franklin Miles' NEW HEART CURE is the only reliable remedy. The latest discovered metal, lighter than hard wood and stronger than steel. The Michigan Stove Co., after a series of scientific experiments, are enabled to make an admixture of this wonderful metal with their regular high grade iron, with the result of producing smooth castings, additional strength, and preventing cracking; thereby rendering stoves made of this admixture more durable than WROUGHT IRON or STEEL. The "GARLAND," which are the product of this Co., are the only stoves made having that advantage. Remember, when in need of a Cooking Stove or Range that your local dealer is not only here to-day, but you can put your hand upon him next week also.

FARWELL IS SHELVED.

Ex-Governor Oglesby Taken up by the Illinois Republicans.

R. J. OGLESBY.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., Jan. 16.—The Republican senatorial caucus nominated Ex-Governor Richard J. Oglesby for United States senator on the first formal ballot. Out of 100 votes cast he received 54 and Senator Farwell 30. The remaining six votes were scattering. The anti-Farwell forces controlled the caucus from beginning to end. The nomination was made unanimous. The Democrats will not hold a caucus to nominate a candidate for United States senator, as the position is assumed that General John M. Palmer was indorsed by the whole Democratic party of the state by the nomination of the state convention last June. Balloting will commence on the 20th inst.

REVOLUTION.

CONSTERNATION AT VALPARAISO AND IN THE CAPITAL.

Fears That the Insurgents Will Bombard the Place — Government Troops Dissatisfied — Insurgents Gaining Recruits.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—The latest news from Chili received at Buenos Ayres is favorable to a revolution. The insurgents openly parade their forces on land and are continually receiving additions to their ranks. Disaffection is more than ever manifest among the government troops. The bombardment of Valparaiso is momentarily expected. Consternation prevails there and in the capital.

Revolution Getting Worse.

BUENOS AYRES, Jan. 19.—The revolt in Chili is gaining headway. The insurgents appear to have abundance of means, and the issue between them and President Balmaceda is doubtful.

He's All Right.

VALPARAISO, Jan. 19.—It is reported that President Balmaceda has made preparations to secure his escape should the revolutionists succeed.

FATALLY STABBED.

A Columbus Man Found Dying in a Pool of Blood.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 16.—Steve Joyce was found weltering in a pool of his own blood in a Mt. Vernon avenue gutter, late Saturday night. "Charles Johnson cut me," he said to the officers who took him to the hospital. Beyond this little can be learned of the circumstances under which his wounds were received. Joyce was formerly employed by the Panhandle railroad. Johnson is a carpenter. Both men had been drinking Saturday night, and a negro says he overheard Johnson say: "Joyce, I have been laying for you for three years." They were then standing on the street where Joyce was found and were quarrelling and scuffling. Two cuts were found on Joyce's body, one over the heart and one in the right hand, as if it had been received while he was warding off a blow. No ill feeling is known to have existed existed between the men.

Joyce is at the hospital hovering between life and death. Johnson has not yet been found by the police.

A Horrible Accident.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 18.—Andrew Kenmire, foreman, James Newgent and John Mullier, laborers, were working with a large crane in Carnegie's Twenty-ninth street mill, hoisting a massive casting of several tons weight. When several feet from the ground, the chain broke. All three men were caught under the casting. Kenmire received injuries from which he died a few hours later. Newgent's feet were crushed and was otherwise seriously hurt. Mullier's thighs were crushed and received internal injuries. He will probably die. Kenmire leaves a widow and seven children.

GENERAL WALLACE'S NEPHEW

Kills Himself by Leaping from a Window.

ST. PAUL, MINN., Jan. 17.—Wallace Lathers, a nephew of General Lew Wallace, author of "Ben Hur," either fell or jumped from the third story of a building early this morning, and was killed almost instantly. He was aged 27, unmarried, and employed in the general offices of the Northern Pacific railway. It is believed a temporary aberration led him to commit suicide. He has a sister in Indianapolis.

Another Elevator Tragedy.

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 19.—Joseph Anderson, a fifteen-year-old boy, met with a distressing accident, which will doubtless cause his death. He was riding in an elevator when his foot was caught. Before the car could be stopped his entire leg up to the knee was crushed to a pulp. It was impossible to release the sufferer, without cutting away a part of the floor. The boy was conscious all the time, and his sufferings were terrible to witness. The leg had to be amputated and his spine was badly hurt.

Fatal Explosion.

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—Leaky gas pipes caused an explosion in a man-hole near the corner of Wabash avenue and Jackson street. The iron plate covering the man-hole was thrown high in the air and broke it to pieces, one of the pieces in falling struck a Mrs. Ross, a colored woman, and instantly killed her. Several other persons were slightly hurt.

Boyd Officially Recognized.

LINCOLN, NEB., Jan. 18.—The Senate, by a vote of 14 to 18, passed a resolution recognizing James E. Boyd as governor, without prejudice to power to contest. This is the first act in either branch of the legislature which recognized Boyd as governor.

Buckets of Blood

At the Door of the Colorado Legislature.

OFFICE SEEKERS TAKE POSSESSION OF THE CHAMBER.

And When the Authorities Try to Eject Them, Two Officers are Shot and Fatally Wounded.

DENVER, COL., Jan. 15.—The House of Representatives of Colorado is in disgrace, both to the state and to the Union. The assembly rooms have been crowded since yesterday with would-be appointers. Early this morning the militia was called upon the scene to quiet the wrangling masses. Police Inspector Hawley was shot by the Assistant Door-keeper McCoy while endeavoring to force his way into the hall. Police Officer Norris was also shot by another door-keeper, while endeavoring to arrest McCoy. Both men will probably die before sundown. Intense excitement prevails and sensational developments are expected.

He Isn't Scared.

DENVER, Jan. 19.—A number of telegrams have been sent from here to Senator Teller urging him to come at once to this city as his chances for re-election to the Senate are in danger. Senator Teller is now in Washington. There is little doubt, however, of Senator Teller's re-election. While there is a factional fight in the Republican ranks, it is believed will in no way interfere with the senator's chances, and that he will be elected, as every Republican member of both Houses will vote for him when the election takes place tomorrow. The Republican majority on joint ballot will be fifty.

BIG BANK FAILURE.

OTHER CRASHES IN THE BUSINESS WORLD FEARED.

The American National Bank of Kansas City Goes Under—Runs on Two Other Prominent Financial Institutions Caused by Rumors Affecting Their Standing.

KANSAS, CITY, Jan. 19.—The failure of the American national bank of this city is announced. Early in the day runs began on two prominent financial institutions here in consequence of rumors affecting their standing. The rumors and the reported failure have created a panic in commercial circles and other heavy crashes in the business world are feared.

MARINE HOSPITALS.

The Annual Report of Surgeon General Hamilton.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Supervising Surgeon General Hamilton, of the marine hospital service, has completed his report, showing the operations of the service for the past fiscal year. In the nineteen United States marine hospitals proper, and all the twenty other and smaller stations at which hospital relief is furnished, there were treated altogether 50,671 sailors, of which number 14,587 were treated in hospital, and 36,084 were treated in the dispensaries as out-patients. Of the 14,000 odd patients treated in hospital, it is of interest to note as an index of the nativity of the sailor employed on American registered vessels 6,916 of these were born in the United States, 1,655 were born in Norway and Sweden, 1,349 were born in Ireland, 775 in Germany and 552 in Canada. The various marine hospitals are reported as having been generally improved during the year and as being in excellent condition.

The report also contains the records of a number of surgical operations performed by the officers of the service during the year, with clinical notes upon medical cases, exhaustive papers upon the proper management of hospitals and a valuable collection of facts and statistics in the shape of necropsy reports, which are required to be made in every case possible.

HORRIBLE SCENE.

Natives of the New Hebrides Eat the Bodies of Dead Criminals.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—Further particulars from the commander of the British cruiser Royalist, tell of an extraordinary scene at New Hebrides, where three natives were executed by order of the commander for killing and eating a French trader and his son. Immediately after the execution a number of natives asked for the bodies, and the commander, supposing relatives wanted the remains for burial, gave them. The natives retired a short distance and immediately proceeded to cook and devour the bodies of the dead criminals, much to the horror of the British officers and men, who did not, however, feel justified in interfering.

LILLIAN OWEN DEAD.

Sol Smith Russell's Leading Lady Dies of Bright's Disease.

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—Lillian Owen, the beautiful and popular actress, died at the Lincoln Park sanitarium yesterday of Bright's disease. She was the leading lady in Sol Smith Russell's company, and expected to make her appearance in a Chicago theater in "The Poor Relation" within a few weeks. Her body will be sent to the home of her parents at San Francisco.

A CONDUCTOR'S NERVE.

He is Chloroformed, Knived and Slugged, Yet He Whips Two Highwaymen.

NEW PHILADELPHIA, O., Jan. 19.—Wm. Gerber, a conductor on the electric railroad, was held up by footpads. He was chloroformed, dragged to the track and laid on the rails so that the cars would kill him. He revived, jumped to his feet, and after a desperate battle in which he was cut by one of the highwaymen, succeeded in beating them off.

Instructing for Ingalls.

ATCHISON, KAS., Jan. 19.—A mass meeting of Republicans was held here, at which resolutions were adopted instructing State Senator Elliston, from this senatorial district, to votes for the re-election of Senator Ingalls. Mr. Elliston had announced his intention of voting against Mr. Ingalls.

Blown to Eternity

Natural Gas Tragedy in Findlay.

Marvin Hotel Building Wrecked

And Persons Blown Into the Street.

ONE GIRL IS KILLED AND MANY EMPLOYES INJURED.

The Tragedy Occurs Just Before the Dinner Hour, and Thus an Appalling Fatality Was Averted—The Victims Are Blown Clear Through the Windows.

FINDLAY, O., Jan. 19.—The long looked-for explosion of natural gas has come, and Hotel Marvin, Findlay's finest and largest hostelrie, is in ruins. Early yesterday morning gas was noticed escaping in the dining room of the hotel, and while the attaches were endeavoring to find the leak, a match was applied and instantly a stream of fire shot into the room enveloping one whole side in a mantle of flame and burning and scorching tables and linen. This primary explosion did not burn much and the fire was soon under control. Two plumbers now set to work to find and stop the leak. These workmen with Mr. Marvin, the proprietor, went into the basement under the dining room and spent several hours in endeavoring to find the leak. The place becoming foul, the workmen sawed a hole in the floor to let in fresh air. Just as the saw penetrated the wood at the top, a dining-room girl entered the apartment and threw a lighted match in the stove. The next instant there occurred an explosion that shook the city like an earthquake, and Hotel Marvin was a ruin. The roar of the explosion had scarce died away before the fire department was on hand. Little work could be done, the force of the explosion having extinguished the flames, but the firemen worked with a will towards rescuing the bodies from the debris and clearing away the wreckage. The whole side of the hotel was wrecked and scarcely a room in the house was left intact. The office and parlor were filled with people, who through divine interposition escaped injury. Ten minutes more and over a hundred people would have been in the dining room, and had the explosion occurred then, the loss of life would have been awful. Following is a corrected list of the dead and injured:

Dead—Kittie Walters, waitress; Ella Johnson, waitress.

Dangerously injured—Kate Rooney, waitress, burned about face and neck and internally injured, recovery hardly possibly; Frank Pounstone, clerk, burned about face and neck, critical condition; A. E. Marvin, owner of building, burned about head and inhaled gas, recovery doubtful.

Slightly injured—Albert French, porter, cut in neck and head; Frank Andrews, one of the proprietors of the hotel, burned about head and arms, and will lose right eye; Charles Graves, a plumber; Jack Cahill, plumber.

The hotel was the property of Anson E. Marvin and was leased by the Andrews Bros., of Meadville, Pa., who took possession but a few days ago. The damage will be $25,000 to the building and $10,000 on furniture. At 9 o'clock last night, a third explosion took place at the ruins, but the gas has been shut off from the main pipe and all danger is over.

CHICAGO MURDER.

A BLACKSMITH PUTS A BALL THROUGH HIS WIFE'S HEAD

And Then Tries to Kill a Policeman—Horrible Early Morning Tragedy in the Windy City.

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—Thomas Buckley, a blacksmith, living at 197 North Halstead street, shot and probably fatally injured his wife early in the morning. Shortly afterward a policeman visited the Buckley home and found Buckley in bed half clothed, and his wife sitting in a chair a short distance from the bed, apparently stupefied with drink. Buckley sprang at the officer and attempted to shoot him, but was knocked down and overpowered on the arrival of the other officers. Mrs. Buckley was found with a bullet hole in her head and was removed to the county hospital, where slight chances of recovery are given.

WILD AND WOOLLY.

Gunpowder Travesty Justice in a Dakota Court Room.

BISMARCK, N. D., Jan. 17.—Several weeks ago Editor Raymond, of Dawson, with his friends was assaulted and terribly beaten by a rival political faction. A number of them received serious injuries and one man will probably die yet from their effect. Raymond had two of his assailants, Deputy Sheriff Pettibone and Joe Coulter arrested and the case came up for trial. During its progress defendants friends rushed in with fire arms, drove the justice of the peace away and took possession of the court room. Excitement is at fever heat and bloodshed is feared.

Cut Off His Legs.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., Jan. 19.—Jesse R. Lyle, inspector of passenger trains for the Cincinnati, Southern and Texas Pacific railroad, was run over by a train in the Central depot in the presence of many spectators. He was struck by the pilot and tripped up and thrown under the wheels, which cut off both his legs at the ankle. He will almost certainly die of his hurts.

Youthful Murderers.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Jan. 19.—Whit Hicks and Rufus Avery, two colored youths, are in jail here charged with the abduction and murder of a colored girl named Anna May. It is charged that these boys, who are only in their teens, decoyed the girl, aged fifteen, to their room, and while there engaged in a fight, in which the girl was fatally hurt. She was found dead in the room.

SPECIMEN CASES.

S. H. Clifford New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, his Stomach was disordered, his Liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him.

Edward Shepherd, Harrisburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Catawba, O., had five large Fever sores on his leg, doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely. Sold by J. J. Orr Druggist.

A FAMILY JEWEL.

Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., the famous Surgeon and Physician, has sent us a copy of his Book, "How to Cure Kidney, Liver and Blood Disorders." Peculiar

Many peculiar points make Hood's Sarsaparilla superior to all other medicines. Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Peculiar in its strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's. Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is now more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly.

PENSION BUSINESS

The Doctor was a soldier and is a pensioner, and with his five years' experience as Examining Surgeon for Pensions, believes he can make it PAY YOU to come and see him.

He knows the RATE on every known disability

Knows what Diseases or Disabilities are the results of any other.

Knows (as every EXAMINING SURGEON will tell you) that many men do not draw what the law allows them, because their claims are not presented in proper shape.

Knows how to put your claim in such shape that you will get pay for ALL results of the disease or wound for which you are pensioned.

Knows all the recent decisions made by Commissioner and how to give you the advantage of them in dollars.

Knows that some recent rulings are of vital importance to many pensioners, if their claims are only properly presented.

Knows whether you are entitled to Rerating, and how to get it.

I charge just the legal fees because I earn them ALWAYS BRING YOUR CERTIFICATE WITH YOU.

If you want the benefit of a Pension while you live go and see Dr. Reynolds.

I can get you from $2 to $6 more per month under the new law than other agents.

To any person examined by the board, at Adrian, before Aug. 1, 1889, I have something of importance to tell you.

Come and let us examine you (no charge) and will tell you all about it. About one-third of all the soldiers examined while I was on the board were rated for disabilities not claimed. You had better come and see me about it.

Correspondence solicited, with stamp for reply 15 East Maumee-st., Adrian, Mich.

ATTENTION, Soldiers & Sailors,

Under the new pension law just passed by Congress all Soldiers and Sailors who served 90 days in the Rebellion, and who are disabled from any cause permanently, (need not have originated in the service,) are entitled to a pension of from $6 to $12. All soldiers' widows, minor children and dependent parents come under this law. Being located at the Capital near the U. S. Pension office, we can give our personal attention to your claim and thus ascertain any defect quickly and supply the same.

Write for blanks. Give full description of service and disabilities.

THE FARMERS' PAGE.

THE FARMERS' MOVEMENT.

WHAT THE ILLINOIS GRANGE WANTS.

The Illinois State Grange passed an additional resolution to those already published, declaring that the legal rate of interest ought to be reduced from 8 to 6 per cent., and advocating legislation to prevent bankers and others from collecting premiums in advance on loans.

PROTEST AGAINST GOVERNMENT LOANS.

The Michigan Grange is in open revolt against the National Grange on account of the stand taken by the national organization in endorsing the proposition for Government loans on real estate. Before adjourning the following report was adopted;

We regret that the National Grange, the Farmers' Alliance, and other organizations of farmers have endorsed the proposition in one form or another to make loans by the Government to the people. That the issuing of $1,000,000,000 of Treasury notes and loaning to the people either directly or indirectly at a low rate of interest, would lead to wide clamor for credit, every intelligent person must admit. That no system could be devised or its operation so guarded as to prevent partiality or favoritism in its distribution, first to personal friends of the loaning agent, and next to his political associates, every thoughtful man must foresee. That it would create a feeling of helpless dependency upon Government aid by those to whom it is designed to benefit, thereby relaxing their individual effort, destroying their energy and self-reliance, and rendering them helpless mendicants of Government charity, every observer of human nature must know. That it would lead to thriftless improvidence, relying upon Government aid or Government forbearance by those whom it seeks to benefit and prove a curse instead of a blessing, is so plainly evident that we are surprised that the National Grange should allow itself to be carried away by the clamor of those who hope for themselves public preferment by holding out a scheme so enticing to the ignorant or improvident debtor, and scheming speculator.

THE IOWA ALLIANCE.

The meeting of the Iowa State Grange and the Executive Committee of the State Farmers' Alliance closed yesterday. As a result of the joint conference the recommendation was adopted by the Grange that the general supply-house for farmers be established at the central point through which agricultural implements and other things needed by the farmers may be obtained at a cost of manufacture and transportation, the same to be controlled by the Executive Committee of the Grange and the Alliance. The resolutions adopted favor control by the Government of all railroad and telegraph lines in the country, the adoption of the Australian ballot system, and insist upon absolute fairness in the matter of finance.

ECONOMIES IN STATE LAWS.

The effects of the Alliance movement in Kansas are already beginning to be felt. Two years ago the Kansas State Senate appointed a committee to revise certain parts of existing State laws. This committee is composed of five Republicans. The Committee will hold its last meeting at Topeka, and will present its report to the Governor. Senator Murdock of the Committee says the report abolishes a dozen useless boards; consolidates half-a-dozen other boards; revises the laws regarding the control of the State Normal and State Agricultural Colleges and the Hutchinson Reformative School; decapitates Sam Crawford, the State Agent at Washington; cuts down the number of local district judges about one-fourth; cuts legal advertising, sheriff sales, county and State printing of all kinds 50 per cent.; provides for the Australian system of voting and the election of the State Board of Railway Commissioners; provides that the State furnish school books of a uniform text free; overhauls the system of taxation and assessment, and puts it on a bonafide basis; cuts down the fees and salaries of all county officers except coroners and commissioners; affects the fees of constables and justices of the peace. The report, says Senator Murdock, if adopted and enacted into law, will save the people of Kansas $800,000 in taxes annually. As all the Committee are Republicans, and as the report is simply a redemption of the pledges made in the recent Republican State platform, the Republican Senate cannot refuse to adopt it.

THE RESTLESS FARMER.

There is a kind of restlessness among many farmers which hinders success. I do not mean that uneasiness which arises from unjust discrimination of any kind against the farming class, nor that legitimate dissatisfaction which is the forerunner of real progress, but a certain unfixedness of purpose that fails to carry them through those brunts which are incidental to all occupations. The restless farmer above others is likely to be in debt, and hopelessly so. He makes haste to be rich, and that often by a course of injudiciousness. Especially when times are good he calculates that there is no risk in running in debt for a farm, as the net profits at the present rate will cancel it in a few years. How many are there groaning under such debts to-day? Or it may be that soon after the farm has been bought the owner has changed his fancy, because the farm has not met his hastily-formed expectations; and having turned his attention to some other scheme, he neglects his farm or sells it at a sacrifice. At first a tempting offer has no drawbacks to the restless farmer, but afterward that which once impressed him so favorably is forgotten, and he views only the elements of discouragement.

Naturally the restless farmer is quick to decide and quick to repent of his decisions. There was a rush of restless farmers to Oklahoma, and it would have been safe to predict the rush of that element away from that territory which followed. The restless farmer is bound to be gulled, since there is in him that element which prompts him to seek a fortune without the essential every-day toil and application of his steady farmer neighbor. The delusion of making much money without great expenditure of brain or muscle is a sort of phantasy which allures him on without concentrating his powers upon anything, and he is an exception if he does not in the end find life a failure.

That which affords especial satisfaction to a farmer is to have a farm and a home of his own. The acquirement of such a thing is often his life work in a worldly sense. Ordinarily one should not choose a farm without serious thought as regards its possibilities and impossibilities, and no whims nor vague suppositions should have weight against the light of cold facts. The restless farmer cannot build for himself a desirable house nor properly improve his farm for this takes years, and when accomplished the satisfaction to the owner is the legitimate reward, and is a heritage to succeeding generations. And this it is which strengthens the back-bone of the nation, for does not the straightforward, diligent farmer exert a better influence among men than half a dozen of his restless neighbors who know but little of application and concentration?

To the young man who expects to devote his existence to making the most of the soil there is nothing more timely than that homely phrase. "Be sure you are right, then go ahead." That is real advice if every word is emphasized. The difficulty with the restless farmer is that he thinks he is right at first, but pretty soon he concludes he was wrong, and in the meantime he never goes ahead. Be not a drudge, but beware of faltering as soon as the harness begins to chafe a little. There is not much satisfaction in restlessness.—National Stockman and farmer.

WHY THE FARMER IS OPPRESSED.

Shakespere said, "What fools we mortals be!" When we look at this expression from a point of financial and political welfare we must admit that at present there is no class of people to whom it is so applicable as the farmer.

Why? First, because almost every one imposes upon him on account of his simplicity in thought and action. Second, because he devotes his attention to the immediate causes of his humiliated condition, and excludes the remote and important causes. He fails to see that all other classes of people are so organized as to solicit and compel legislation in their behalf.

Of course you say the farmers are organized, as we have the Grange, the League and the Alliance. Now this is very true, and we have in these organizations a great many able men who are devoting time and money to the prosecution of the interests of the farmer. But the trouble is this: There are too many men in all these orders who can see no farther than that by being members they can buy sugar, coffee, etc., 2 or 3 cents per pound cheaper. This is very good as far as it goes, but it does not go far enough nor in the right direction. It will never benefit his condition. He must strike at the root and that means he must strike at legislation.

These organizations are good; extremely good—and the results of their efforts are beginning to be plainly noticeable. Were two-thirds of the farmers organized, and should they adhere strictly to the principle of some of the orders named, they would compel legislative bodies to recognize their cause. But too many of them, even after they become members of these orders, remain surrounded by an insurmountable wall of rotten politics. For instance, if a candidate is placed before the people, and who is endorsed by the order, does every member vote for him? Not by any means. "If he belongs to my party I'll vote for him. But if not—well that's another question. It would be humiliating for me to vote for a man in another party. Oh, no! My political newspaper says to vote a straight ticket."

Now here is where the farmer stands in his own light. The politicians keep his eyes so completely shut up with political lies that he can't support a man who is not endorsed by his own party. He would rather vote squarely against his own interests than to leave his party in a single instance. And these very men who will not vote for their own interests, but for some whisky-soaked politician instead, are the ones who grumble about hard times.

INDEFINITE.

Senator Vance and the Sub-Treasury—No Quibbling Permissible.

In the issue of the Progressive Farmer of the 8th inst. we find a letter from Senator Vance to E. C. Beddingfield.

Ever since the publication of Senator Vance's letter to Elias Carr, president of the State Alliance, until the publication of his letter (quoted above) to E. C. Beddingfield, we have been at a loss to define his true position with reference to the sub-treasury bill, the most important feature in our platform, and from which we confidently hope for the greatest measure of relief for the people.

At the first glance, on reading this letter, we tried to accept it as satisfactory, because we still hoped that the Senator was in sympathy with the Alliance and would support the sub-treasury bill, but when he says, "if that bill should be demonstrated to be constitutional, by any decision of the Supreme Court, or otherwise," we understand him to make the issue clear—to regard this statement as an insult to our intelligence; because, it can not properly be demonstrated by that tribunal that any bill is constitutional until after it shall have become a law. If Senator Vance can not gain his own consent to vote for this bill until after it becomes a law, it must follow that he will not advocate its passage and is not really in sympathy with his people's movement. What he means by "or otherwise," we are not able to say. If Senator Vance can not support the sub-treasury bill, which was carefully and deliberately formulated by a committee composed of intelligent, prudent men, and was freely discussed and finally passed in open convention of the National Council, how can we reasonably expect him, by co-operation with any friend of the measure in Congress, to put it in such possible shape as to make it conformable to his construction of the Constitution? He says in conclusion: "Surely nobody can misunderstand this." Agreed. It means opposition to the sub-treasury bill. The Senator's love for, and fear of violating, by his vote, the Constitution of the United States seems to be a great misfortune.

We have more than ever heard the inquiry made: "If we don't elect Vance, who can we get?" What a question, when more than one hundred men can be found, any one of whom would represent us in the United States Senate as successfully, and surely in more sympathy with this great movement of the farmers and laborers.—E. A. Thorne, in Progressive Farmer.

DEBT.

A Monster That Has Invaded Our Farms, Our Workshops and Our Firesides.

The issue is, to free labor from the bondage of debt. To do this we must repeal the infamous financial laws that created, fosters and increases the debt, and enact a just law and pay the debt. Debt is a creature of law. Where there is no law there is no debt. The Babylonian Government was destroyed by debt; Greece perished in debt; Rome went down under a debt she could not pay; debt was the cause of the French revolution; every acre of land under the dominion of Great Britain is mortgaged; every acre of land and city lot in this United States is mortgaged. All christendom is under a legal debt, and there is no law providing for the payment of this legalized robbery. Debt is a burden upon labor. Debt takes the farmer's corn, wheat and stock before he has produced them. To-day a laborer's wages are taken for interest, rent and taxes before he has completed his day's work.

The merchant's labor is all taken by transportation companies, rent and interest. The farmers are mortgaged; the productions of the farms must be taken to pay the interest on the debt. The merchant's store and goods are mortgaged; the profits taken from the consumer is to pay the interest on the debt. The railroads are mortgaged; the profits taken for transportation is used to pay the interest on the debt. Debt is the cause of 2,000,000 of people being out of employment and compelled to tramp in the United States to-day. We are a debt-mortgaged and bond-cursed nation. Labor has borne this burden; the chains are becoming more galling; the moans of the miserable, made so by oppression, are heard all over this land. As the debt increases labor demands freedom in more sterner tones. Where shall we go to for relief? Will we go to the old Democratic and Republican parties? No! We must go to the students of labor; go to the tillers of the soil; go to the shops, the mines and factories, and ask all who labor to come together in one grand political organization; then we can liberate labor from this bondage of debt. Then when the farmers are free from debt, and school, county, railroad, State, and National bonded debts are paid, then the labor problem will be solved, for the burden of labor will then be lifted, and he who toils will then have the benefits of his productions.—National Economist.

To Lead the Alliance in the House.

The Alliance people from the South look to Lydenham Alexander to be their leader on the floor of the next House. Mr. Alexander is a big farmer of North Carolina. His place is near Charlotte. He comes straight down from the Mecklenburg stock. His ancestors made a declaration of independence before the rest of the Colonies were ready. Among his kinsfolk he includes the Bayards and the Grahams. The honor of adoption of the famous sub-treasury scheme lies between Mr. Alexander and L. L. Polk. The president of the National Alliance and the Congressman-elect pooled their minds on "a way out" for the farmers. The sub-treasury idea was the result. Mr. Alexander was so thoroughly in earnest about the farmers' movement that when he went into it he sold a lot of National bank stock as a matter of conscience. He is 42 years old. This is the first office he has held. If the Alliance members conclude to caucus on their own account for the organization of the House they will probably give Mr. Alexander the honor of the Speakership nomination.—Washington Special.

THE PULPIT AND THE STAGE.

Rev. F. M. Shrout, Pastor United Brethren Church, Blue Mound, Kan., says: "I feel it my duty to tell what wonders Dr. King's New Discovery has done for me. My Lungs were badly diseased, and my parishioners thought I could live only a few weeks. I took five bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery and am sound and well, gaining 26 lbs. in weight."

Arthur Love, Manager Love's Funny Folks Combination, writes: "After a through trial and convincing evidence, I am confident Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, beats 'em all, and cures when everything else fails. Ayer's Sarsaparilla
The Best Blood Medicine

So say Leading Physicians and Druggists, and their opinion is indorsed by thousands cured by it of Scrofula, Eczema, Erysipelas, and other diseases of the blood.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla has won its reputation by years of valuable service to the community. It is the best."—R. S. Lang, Druggist, 212 Merrimack st., Lowell, Mass.

Dr. W. P. Wright, Paw Paw Ford, Tenn., says: "In my practice, I invariably prescribe Ayer's Sarsaparilla for chronic diseases of the blood."

Dr. R. R. Boyle, Third and Oxford sts., Philadelphia, Pa., writes: "For two years I have prescribed Ayer's Sarsaparilla in numerous instances, and I find it highly efficacious in the treatment of all disorders of the blood."

L. M. Robinson, Pharmacist, Sabina, O., certifies: "Ayer's Sarsaparilla has always been a great seller. My customers think there is no blood-purifier equal to it."

"For many years I was afflicted with scrofulous running sores, which, at last became so bad the doctors advised amputating one of my legs to save my life. I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla and soon saw an improvement. After using about two dozen bottles the sores were healed. I continue to take a few bottles of this medicine each year, for my blood, and am no longer troubled with sores. I have tried other reputed blood-purifiers, but none does so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—D. A. Robinson, Neal, Kansas.

J. T. Clark went to Brooklyn last Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ice returned home this week Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Safford returned to Flint the last of this week.

J. B. Hause attended the funeral of Frank Mills, at Macon, Tuesday.

Rev. Stalker has been holding meetings at Macon for the past two weeks.

Mrs. Fox, of Manchester, spent Tuesday with her brother, Will Katzner.

Invitations are out for a large pedro party at Mr. and Mrs. Frank Johnson's Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Niblack and Mr. and Mrs. Hendershot visited at Ham Niblack's the first of the week.

Miss Nellie Kishpaugh has been seriously ill for the past ten days. We hope to see her about soon.

The new lamps for the town hall arrived last Saturday. Now if we had a new hall we would be all right.

Mrs. Frank Woodward and Mrs. S. F. Marsteller are among the many who are suffering from severe colds.

Dr. and Mrs. Conklin, of Manchester, and Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Cook, of Tecumseh, attended the funeral here Sunday.

The social held at Mrs. Chas. Green's last Wednesday evening was well attended and a success, both socially and financially.

Henry Starrett returned home Wednesday after an absence of four years in California, where he went for his health. We are glad to hear that he has been generally benefited by his sojourn there.

Mrs. Laura VanDeMark, of Detroit, came last Thursday night to attend the funeral of her brother, David Brooks. Lewis Brooks, of North Adams, came Friday. They both return home this week.

Ed. Hutchinson, who has been boss weaver in the woolen mill for several years, has severed his connection with it and left for South Bend Saturday. His family is still here.

Dr. T. C. Adams celebrated his eighty fifth birthday last Saturday. We congratulate the doctor on his good health and hope he may see many returns of the day.

Maggie Sullivan, who has been at her brother's, Joe Jackson's, several months, was taken to the insane asylum at Kalamazoo last Monday. She was accompanied by Mrs. Ella Leek, Wesley Kevser and Dow Draper.

Rev. Reeves, of St. John's Church, commenced a series of five lectures last Sunday evening, on the history or continuity of the Church from Apostolic times. To those who desire to know more of early church history these lectures will no doubt prove very interesting.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Olmstead and two sons, of Orwell, N. Y., were the guests of Mrs. Chas. Nase Tuesday and Wednesday. Mrs. Olmstead is better known to people here as Ida Davis. They will visit Grand Rapids, Albion and Coldwater before they return home.

Dan O'Reilly circulated a petition Monday, and Tuesday he boarded the train for Lansing, where he presented the same to the Secretary of State, with his application for a clerkship in the department. His many friends hope he may be successful.

Friends of Misses Mary and Augusta Bruce may be glad to hear that each has succeeded in obtaining a position as teacher. Miss Mary Bruce left here last October for Ness City, Kansas, and about four weeks ago went to Seattle, Wash., where she is now teaching in the City school. Augusta Bruce is in Cottonville, Ala., and has a situation as teacher of drawing and needlework.

David Brooks died at his home Thursday at 7 p. m., after an illness of many weeks, during which time his friends believed there was a chance for his recovery, until within the last two weeks. In that time he has failed rapidly. He retained consciousness until the morning of the day he died, and the end was quiet and peaceful. His family have the sympathy of many friends in their affliction. The funeral was held Sunday at 2 p. m., at the house, Rev. Stalker officiating. The remains were borne to the vault, where the Masons took charge of the ceremony. Their beautiful and impressive burial service was read and the remains were deposited in the vault. Mr. Brooks was widely known and honored. He was an old member of the Mason's lodge here. 70 Masons, including some from Tecumseh and Manchester, were present to assist in administering the last rites. The deceased was sixty-seven years old.

Don't experiment with your health You may be sure of the quality of your medicine, even if you have to take much of your food upon trust. Ask your druggist for Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and no other. It is the standard blood-purifier, the most effective and economical.

No other preparation combines the positive economy, the peculiar merit and the medicinal power of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Death of a Youngstown Citizen at Pine Ridge—Who He Was.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Jan. 19.—Wm. McClintock, killed by the Indians at Pine Ridge agency, was the son of a wealthy farmer residing at Freedom, and a student at Hiram college. Last November a difference arising with his father, young McClintock went to Cleveland, enlisted in the Seventh cavalry and was sent at once to the frontier with other soldiers at Pine Ridge agency. He was detailed to bring some arms surrendered by the hostile Indians, and while in the performance of this duty was shot and killed by a treacherous redskin. Mr. McClintock has gone to bring the remains home for interment.

JOHN BULL'S LATEST.

WILL PROBABLY NOT PAN OUT AS HE EXPECTED IT WOULD.

A Prominent Lawyer Predicts That the Supreme Court Will Deem It a Matter for Executive Attention and Refuse to Consider It.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—The Tribune's Washington special says: A prominent lawyer, familiar with the practice of the Supreme Court and its traditions, said: "Nothing but ignorance on the part of the English ministers of our institutions would have led him to bring the Behring sea suit. There is nothing more permanently established in the traditions of our legal and legislative history than a separation of the three branches which go to make up our government. The question involved in this case is one of executive action, and you may be sure, as it is executive action under international law, the Supreme Court will sternly refuse to interfere. It requires no prophet to make the prediction that this case, so triumphantly presented as a master stroke by the English minister, will be pre-emptorily thrown out by the Supreme Court. The English minister has made this move to conceal a sense of defeat at the hands of Blaine at the state department. To a certain extent, the attempt to try the case at another tribunal is a confession of weakness. The British case, as presented at the Supreme Court, is nothing more nor less than a case of pettifogging. It is almost inconceivable that Lord Salisbury could have authorized such a procedure, and of course, it must have been authorized, or Sir Julian Pauncefote would not have presumed to present the case. The Supreme Court cannot go into the case. It is wholly outside of its province. It is one entirely for diplomatic negotiation."

Blaine the Soul of the Cabinet.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Representative Enloe, of Tennessee, introduced a resolution in the House calling attention to the action of the Canadian government in trying to carry the Behring sea controversy to the Supreme Court, and declaring that this action is in derogation of the dignity of the United States. The resolution provides further that a copy of the resolution shall be sent to the British government. General Hooker, a Democratic member of the House foreign affairs committee, speaking of the Supreme Court Behring sea move, said: "It is a singulaar move in diplomacy. If negotiations were pending, is a little discourteous to Mr. Blaine. But Mr. Blaine will come out all right. I have great confidence in him. I differ with him in politics, but have great confidence in his ability to manage anything he undertakes. He is the soul of the cabinet.

A Whack at the Supreme Court.

MONTREAL, Jan. 16.—The Gazette, the chief organ of the Dominion government, has inspired an article on the Supreme Court issue, in which it says that the last act in the controversy has already been suggested as the probable termination of a long vexed question. That it has taken the Washington cabinet by surprise is morally impossible; but it would not serve the president and his premier, who have adopted the tone of bluster and arrogance to come down from the high horse too suddenly, however, as much as in their perplexity they might desire the judgment of the Supreme Court, whose system of crooked diplomacy, which certain American politicians follow, is unworthy of the great power.

Provisions of the Financial Bill.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The bill for free coinage for the benefit of silver, passed by the Senate at midnight last night, has made its appearance in print. It provides that from the passage of this act the unit of value in the United States shall be the dollar, and the same may be coined 312½ grains standard silver or 25.8 grains of standard gold, and said coin shall be leagal tender for all debts public and private.

That hereafter any owner of silver or gold bullion may deposit same in any mint in the United States to be formed into standard dollars or bars for his benefit without charge, but it shall be lawful to refuse a deposit of less than $100, or of bullion so base as to be unsuitable for the operations of the mint. It also provides that the treasury department may issue coin certificates in exchange for dollars so coined, which shall be legal tender and redeemable in coin of standard value, and favors depositing the bullion for coinage in that it may receive these certificates for the same, if it is desired, such bullion to be subsequently coined.

Cut His Throat.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Jan. 19.—John Kurns, quarryman at Carbon, suicided by cutting his throat from ear to ear with a razor. He had been employed in the vicinity for ten years, and by thrift accumulated about $5,000. Recently he claimed relatives abroad had cast him off, and he began to grow melancholy. Entering his shanty near the quarry he gashed his throat with the razor in a horrible manner, and when found was in the throes of death. So far as known he has no relatives in this country.

Killed on the Road.

GREENSBURG, PA., Jan. 17.—Two unknown persons supposed to be tramps, were struck by a train at New Florence and instantly killed. About the same time James McFall, of Connellsville, was struck by the limited express east at Irwin and killed.

Sensational Suicide.

COVINGTON, O., Jan. 15.—Mrs. Amanda Hill committed suicide this morning at 6 o'clock by hanging. Death was caused by strangulation. It is a complicated case. The inquest has been postponed. It may prove a big case.

FOUL CLAIMED FOR DEMPSEY BUT NOT ALLOWED.

And the Australian Bears the Title of Middle-weight Champion of the World—One of the Largest and Most Notable Gatherings in the History of the Ring.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 16.—The gathering was one of the most notable in the history of the ring for the past two decades. Nine o'clock was the hour determined upon by the two men to enter the ring, but as early as five o'clock the four entrances to the amphitheatre were besieged by crowds that vociferously demanded admission to the building. A semblance of order was preserved by the efforts of a large force of police, but one hour later when the doors were thrown open there was a grand rush which for a few moments threatened to sweep police officers, ticket takers and ushers before it. Into the amphitheatre the waiting multitude poured like a raging torrent amid shouts, howls and cheers and counter cheers, which speedily made the place a veritable bedlam.

One hour after the first man had passed through there was not a vacant foot of pine board in the vast structure and the scene was a vivid reminder of the old English prints that depict the meetings of Sayers, Heenan, Jem Mace, George Goss and other heroes of the ring who did battle across the Atlantic in the days when prize fighting was regarded exemplary sport. The twenty-four foot ring with its posts almost as large in circumference as the trunks of a venerable oak, its hempen rope, strong enough to serve as a hawser, and its floor of sand packed and crushed until it could not be distinguished from asphalt, occupied the center of the ampitheatre at an elevation of two feet.

Outside of the ropes there was a passageway of six feet for the accommodation of the time-keepers, seconds and other officials. A five strand barbed wire fence with half dozen barbs to the foot divided the outer edge of the ring from the table reserved for the press. Back of the latter were the fifty private boxes which had been reserved for distinguished members of the sporting fraternity from far and near. Well in the rear of these again and rising tier by tier from the ground to the very joists of the rafters were benches allotted to the public on the principal of first come first choice. One hundred dollars was the price of a box and ten dollars that of a pine plank.

Bob Fitzsimmons, the Australian wonder, now bears the title of middle-weight champion of the world and when he left the rooms of the Olympic club to meet his wife who was awaiting him in his apartments on Royal street a certified check for $11,000 was presented to him. Today his backers will receive another check for $5,000 additional, making a total of $16,000 for his night's work. Dempsey has received his coup. He did his best, but he was not in it with the Australian. It was the best fight of its class and of the weight that the world has ever seen.

Fitzsimmons weighed 150¼ and Dempsey 147½.

At 9:30 the gong sounded and both men advanced to the middle of the ring and shook hands.

First round—Both men exchanged several body blows, Dempsey's under blows being very strong. Fitzsimmons was active on his feet. The round closed with no advantage to either man.

Second round—Same as first; both men exchanged body and face blows. Dempsey was more wary. Advantage with the Australian.

Third round—Fitzsimmons sent Jack to grass with a breast blow, following him all over the ring, punching him severely. Dempsey became groggy, and evaded punishment.

Fourth round—General exchange of blows. Dempsey's wind getting short. The round closed with honors even.

Fifth round—Dempsey was sent to his knees. He received the worst kind of punishment. Fitzsimmons in good form.

Sixth round—Heavy exchange of blows. Dempsey avoiding punishment. Fitzsimmons' best round.

Seventh round—Both men fought like tigers. Fitzsimmons struck Dempsey while they were clinched. The crowd cried "foul," but it was not allowed.

Eighth round—Same as last. Dempsey next door to helpless.

Ninth round—Dempsey was sent to the ropes.

Tenth round—Fitzsimmons twice sent Dempsey to the earth.

Eleventh round—Bob crowded Jack and landed two lefts. Jack fell on the ropes. Bob landed a terrific left and Dempsey staggered. Dempsey led for the stomach and Bob jumped away. Bob landed two terrific lefts and floored Dempsey. Bob knocked him down again, let him gain wind and landed a terrific right and left. This was Bob's round. The towel was thrown from Jack's corner in token of defeat, but it did not go.

Twelfth round—Fitzsimmons trotted to the center. He was smiling, as full of wind as in the sixth round and made no effort to work hard. He allowed himself to receive a few childish body blows and then with a left-hander in the jaw sent Dempsey on his back. He slowly arose and went down again from a left-handed touch in the ribs. Rising to his feet with difficulty, he tried to force his adversary into the center of the ring, but went down again in his effort. Fitzsimmons picked Dempsey up like a child, smoothed his hand over his head and held him in his arms for a second. Then he went over to his own corner and sat on the ropes. Dempsey tried to get at him but his seconds pulled him back as the gong sounded.

Thirteenth round—Dempsey staggered to the center of the ring. Little vitality was apparently left. He clinched at the first attempt of Fitzsimmons to strike. The Australian pushed him away, let out with a short arm which barely touched him, and he fell to the ground. Twice he essayed to rise, but rolled over and over like a man in dying agonies. Time was called and failing to respond the fight was awarded to the New Zealand wonder, while the audience cheered again and again.

The above report of the finance committee was, on motion, accepted and adopted.

The chairman of the committee on fire and fire limits reported that his committee had investigated the cost of fire hose and S. W. Bordine, chief of the fire department, supplemented the report by showing specimens of hose and giving prices from various firms. After some discussion it was moved by Mr. Smith that the fire committee, with the co-operation of the chief of the fire department, be instructed to purchase 500 feet of hose on such favorable terms as they might be able to obtain. The motion was carried.

REPORTS OF OFFICERS.

The sexton reported three adult interments for December and two lots sold, together with treasurer's receipt for $12 interment fees. Report accepted and adopted.

The sexton submitted the following report for the year 1890;—

Hold Treasurer's receipt for	183.00.
Sale of lots	508.00.

On motion the sexton's report was referred to the finance committee.

PETITIONS AND APPLICATIONS.

A petition was received from the school board of District No. 7, asking the council to enforce the ordinance relative to riding on trains. The petition was referred to the marshal with instructions to enforce said ordinance.

The following bills were received and referred to the finance committee:—

Robert Owens ½ day's street labor, $.62; Tecumseh Electric Co., street lighting for December, $145,00; Thos. Elliott, blacksmith work and supplies, $49,80: A. James, supplies, $42.36; C. A. Slayton, coal and lime, $4.78; T. R. Kyle, marshal, $4.00: L. M. Waldron, work on windmill $3.25.

On motion the election of a sexton for the ensuing year was deferred until the next regular meeting, Feb. 2, 1891.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The finance committee reported favorably on all the above bills as read except that to the Tecumseh Electric Co. which was referred back to the council without recommendation. On motion the report was accepted and orders directed drawn on the treasurer in accordance with said report.

On motion the bill of the Tecumseh Electric Co. was referred back to the company for correction.

The council then adjourned.

CHAS. F. FIELD, Recorder.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Splendid weather and fine wheeling.

Dr. Begel, of Holloway occupied the pulpit Sunday, in the absence of the pastor.

Born to Rev. and Mrs. Lowry, on Wednesday night a nine pound boy; all doing well.

Quite a number of the village friends attended the donation given Rev. James Wright, at Britton, last week Thursday night.

Prof. E. A. Wilson, who has been at his fathers sick for the past week with LaGrippe is improving.

Minnie Palmer, of Dundee, visited at Dr. R. H. Nelson's last week.

Ada Slayton, of Dundee, visited Belle Barlow, Saturday.

Frank Hall, of Dundee, called on friends in the village Thursday last.

Mrs. David McNair, of Tecumseh, called on friends Tuesday.

The open spring like winter produces numerous orange blossoms, in and about our village.

S. F. Marsteller and Chas. Kies of Clinton, were in the village on business, Monday.

Master Charlie Richards, of Dundee, visited his aunt Mrs. Sue Clark, over Sunday.

Vote Miller returned Saturday from a weeks stay at Jackson.

A. C. Arner went to Detroit on business Wednesday.

Hattie Platt, of Clinton, is the present guest of friends in the village.

Ella Jackson, of Tecumseh, spent Friday and Saturday with Kitty Clark.

Ethel Gripton, of Britton, is spending the present week with her Grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Barlow.

Dr. and Mrs. Woodard and daughter Edith, of Tecumseh, and a niece, Miss Georgie Woodard of Brooklyn N. Y. were Library callers Tuesday.

The Lotus Glee Club, the third entertainment of the Tecumseh entertainment course will be given a week from next week Tuesday night, Feb. 10th. '91.

There will be a small admission fee charged at the next reading circle, to be given Wednesday evening Feb. 11th, '91. Full particulars and program given in due time.

The next regular meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held at the home of Mrs. David Coryell, Feb. 5th. Grandma Coryell, will be present, to welcome all who come. The president desires all the members to be in attendance and bring their friends; an interesting program is being prepared by the Superintendent of the mother's meeting.

Prof. J. H. Pixley, of Grand Rapids, gave an entertainment in the audience room of the church, on Monday night, consisting of Songs, Recitations, and Select Readings. It being the third entertainment on the Epworth League course. Prof. Pixley, will be remembered by the older citizens in days gone by, when Pixley and Grannis gave concerts together. The Professor still retains his melodious voice with sweetness and purity, and is remarkable for one of his years. The frost of 70 winters has whitened his once brown locks. It is hoped some day he may make us another visit. Mr. Grannis is in Los Angeles California living in a pleasant home on one corner of an orange grove, and has given up concert work. We make mention of him as they were both so well known throughout this section.

There was a very large attendance at the L. C. S. held at Mrs E. W. Rappleye's on Friday night, when the following programe was very successfully carried out.

Singing—by Society.
Prayer—C M. Goye.
Recitation—Shadows on the Blinds—Nettie Bannister.
Rec.—His Mothers Song—Mary Nelson.
Banjo Solo—Floyd Smith.
Rec.—Startling Reve ations—Gertie Boyd.
Rec.— Rock of Ages—Mollie Rappleye.
Instrumental Duet—Miss Ella Jackson and Kitty Clark.
Rec.—The Elf Child—Mary Culbertson.
Physical Drill—by Mattie Rappleye's class in elocution.
Vocal Solo—D. W. Smith.

A very pleasant and enjoyable evening was spent by all. The society realized $8.00 as a reward for the program furnished by Miss Rappleye's class for which there are very grateful to her and to all who took part. The society are preparing a program for a public entertainment to be given at Cottage Hall on Friday evening of next week. The program with full particulars given next week.

BRITTON BUDGET.

John Britton went to Toledo on business, one day last week.

Charles Lister is on the sick list.

The donation last Thursday night was quite a success. Everybody turned out, and from $125 to $130 was collected for our worthy pastor. We hear he will be leaving us in the spring. Elder Wright is honored and beloved by all who know him, and it is with the deepest regret that we hear of his resignation.

J. E. Smith sold five spring pigs last week that weighed 1850 pounds. Who can beat this?

Oliver Henderson is very sick at the present writing.

Here we are again. "Ten Nights in a Barroom," drama in five acts, will be played by the Britton Dramatic Club, on Friday and Saturday even'gs., February 6th and 7th, at Exelby Hall, Britton.

Come and see this great temperance play. Good Music. Doors open at 7:30. Curtain rises at 8 o'clock. Admission 10 and 15 cents.

Mr. Thomas, our former night operator, passed through Britton last Sunday morning on his way to Milan.

Ben. Reynolds shipped a double deck load of hogs from here last Saturday.

Mr. Strong says J. M. Tagget would sit in the Hotel office during his leisure hours, if George would allow him the privilege of having the cook and chamber maid there to keep him company.

One of our merchants and his clerk, are coming out as great pedestrians, having marked the distance of half a mile in the marvelous short time of four minutes. The clerk was heard to remark that if they would allow him to put on his walking suit, he could reduce the record by at least half a minute, but as the people of Britton do not believe in dress of savages, the offer was declined.

Herbert Craushaw will be at his old post in the Hotel next Monday morning.

Our coal kilns are now in full blast, and our village is surrounded by a cloud of smoke.

We hear that John Britton missed a pig some time ago, and failing to hear of it after advertising and a dilligent search, mourned it as either stolen or dead. His days of mourning had hardly transpired, when he was again plunged in the deepest remorse and sorrow by finding the dried skin of his missing pet. How to dispose of the hide of poor piggy puzzled John somewhat, until Milo Ousterhout suggested that John should make him (Milo) a present of it. Mr. Britton is well known for his generosity, and our Milo had hardly expressed the wish before it was gratified. We were at a loss to know what use could be made of the poor porkers skin but were not long in finding out, for in a few days Mr. Ousterhout will be proudly walking the streets of Britton with a bran new pair of shoes, made by our shoemaker, John Bechtold, and John Britton's pig will not have died in vain. We learn these particulars through the kindness of Mr. Wm. Prindle who furnished us with full particulars. News coming from such an extensive stock buyer as W. P., cannot be doubted, therefore we take pleasure in sending it for publication.

The following bill and letter may shortly be received by a Britton young man, from the father of the girl he has been courting. The communication explains itself. "H. M.—Debtor to J. D.—To three months use of the parlor Saturday and Sunday evenings, $15 00; To oil and wood used for your comfort $5 00; To breaking rocking chair (what I paid for being mended) 75cts.; To suppers at various times, $7 50; To springs and upholstering damaged on lounge where you and Mary used to sit together, call it $3 00. Total, $31 25. Sir: I want you to particularly understand, that if Mary has done with you, I hav'nt, and wont have until you've paid for your pleasure. You can't come humbugging about my house two nights a week and using the parlor as if it were your own, without paying for the luxury, and the bill I have made out is very reasonable. But that's neither here nor there, and what I have got to say is, that you have got to pay for your fun; if you don't I shan't set my lawyer on you or garnishee your wages, but I'll thrash the life out of you! You hear me! J. D.

William Covil died at his home in Eastern Ridgeway, on Saturday, Jan. 24, 1891, at 1 o'clock p. m. He was born in Oneida County N. Y., March 6th, 1821, aged 69 years 10 months and 18 days. He was a son of George and Hannah Covil, who moved from York State to Lenawee County, Michigan, in March 1834 with their family, making William a resident of Ridgeway almost 57 years. He married for his wife, Sept. 5th, 1843, Hannah Jane Bramble; and to this union were born ten children; four are dead, six now living—three sons and three daughters; also, their mother surviving the husband at death. He also leaves three brothers and three sisters. Funeral services conducted by pastor James Wright, in the Christian church, at Britton, on Monday the 25th, at 2 o'clock p. m. Thus one of the oldest residents of Ridgeway has passed away.

A Card

On Thusday evening, Jan. 22nd, 91, the Christian church and friends, at Britton, gave to Elder James Wright, their generous donation of $122 25; and, it proved to be indeed a pleasant time to all. While we would not be forgetful to remember to Mr. Frank Davidson our compliments for his generous supply of an excellent article of celery for the tables, we were indeed gladdened by the presence of many who were in attendance, all of whom have our sincere thanks.

JAS. & MARY E. WRIGHT.

RAISIN RACKET.

Mr. Jesse Stretch is in quite feeble health at present.

If you see a nice mule team standing at your door, it is very likely to be an agent for the St. Louis Range Co., and to hear the story one would think that when he has one of these stoves he would never have to buy any more wood, but that the wood would keep burning over and over so that the first fire would last forever.

Henry House has killed some very nice fat hogs, but he has not sold them yet for the market does not at present seem very satisfactory.

The measles are getting pretty near the Seminary, and if they are not very careful they may have a measly time of it.

The Bridge builders of the L. S. & M. S. have been repairing the bridge across the Raisin, south of Sutton's; they finished last Wednesday, and they now think it in first class shape.

Rev. David Lewis has again returned to Ypsilanti, where they are having very successful revival meetings.

School at the Seminary is progressing finely; there is nearly 70 students in attendence. Some of the scholars found a little writing on the per cent. cards that they have sent to their papas, that said "for whispering," and then some figuring that was not one and two ciphers; but maybe the scholars will do better this term.

T. J. Sutton has opened his Silo, and reports it in very good condition.

Morris Nay found a dog Saturday afternoon on the road bridge south of the town house nearly dead, with two holes in his head and one-half of a pitchfork tine stuck in his back. The owner of the dog may find him at T. I. Sutton's, as at the last report the dog was doing well. The dog was a shepherd with tawny points. If you would not call this cruelty to animals, we would like to hear from some one that can beat it.

TIPTON TOPICS.

Wilbur Gibbs is visiting here again at present.

Mr. and Mrs. Berl VanNess visited at C. Vedder's last week.

Miss Lida Simmons is still very sick and seems to improve but very little.

A. J. Jenkins is confined to his bed, by what seems to be a form of Lagrippe.

W. J. Hampton is home from Montana.

Last Friday evening, the M. E. Society held a cake and coffee social at the home of Milton Burns. Long before 7 o'clock the spacious rooms were filled and all enjoyed themselves immensely. At 9 o'clock the house was called to order, and a short program was given and well appreciated. The crowd then dispersed, some to one part, some to another, while the young people sought the attic, and none enjoyed themselves better than they. At supper hour, between 140 and 150 were seated and partook of eatables. At a late hour all withdrew, wishing Mr. and Mrs. Burns many years of happiness in their beautiful home.

Attention! If you desire a fine head of hair of natural hue and free from dandruff, Hall's Hair Renewer is the best and safest preparation to accomplish it.

MACON MUSIC.

Beginning Feb. 1st, services will be held at the Reformed church, at Pennington's Corners, in the evening, for one month.

Mrs. M. V. Sickley has been spending several days in Tecumseh, taking painting lessons. That Mrs. Sickley is an artist in the true sense, is evidenced by the many works of art and fine specimens of taxidermy which adorn her home.

Mrs. Martha Betser has been ill a long time from lung disease. Scarcity of efficient help and long continued nursing of a sick wife and infant babe have combined in doubly afflicting Mr. Betser.

The funeral of Mr. Eli Collins took place from the old family residence on Sunday Jan. 25th, at one o'clock. Mr. Collins was one of the oldest settlers and survived his late wife but a few months. Reared a Quaker, the influences attending his early years were for the upbuilding of noble traits and sterling principles that made themselves felt in the community where his life of usefulness has been spent. Of the family of five brothers to whose thrift, integrity, enterprise and philanthropy the town of Macon largely owes its growth and prosperity, but one remains, Mr. Joseph Collins, of Raisin, Mich.

Nothing has occurred in this vicinity in a long time that has awaked so universal pain and regret as the sudden sickness and death of Mrs. Alex. Turner, of Tecumseh.

At the time she was stricken. Mrs. Turner was visiting at Jessie Collar's, it being the first of a series of visits she had prepared to make among her relatives end friends in this vicinity and at Milan, Mich.

On Friday, Jan. 16th, Dr. Morden was called to see Mr. Collar's youngest child, which was sick with a cold. He found a swelling on the little one's neck which needed lancing, and during the usual hurried preparations for such an operation, Mrs. Turner went into the kitchen to get some needed article. The next moment she fell and when the physician and Mrs. Collar reached her side, was in a state of unconsciousness from which she never rallied. The direct cause of the fall was undoubtedly a stroke of apoplexy, although it is believed that she struck her head against some hard substance, thereby intensifying the shock.

All that loving friends and medical aid could do was done for the sufferer. but she never recovered consiousness enough to recognize the faces of loved ones. A week later, Jan. 23rd, 1891, she fell asleep to wake in the glad presence of the fond husband who had preceded her but a few months before to that realm where partings are no more.

A brief service was held at Mr. Collar's residence Sunday morning. Many friends from Milan and Tecumseh and members of Beers Post G. A. R., assembled to pay a tribute of respect and escort the remains to Tecumseh, where the final last sad rites were held at the M. E. church.

On Saturday morning, Jan. 17th, while Isaac Hendershot was doctoring a sick horse, the animal reared, struck the medicine bottle and crushed into Mr. Hendershot's right hand, thereby lacerating the flesh terribly. Dr. E. E. Hendershot, of Britton, who happened to be in the neighborhood, was called and dressed the wounds.

Rumored that Sam Hatch is going to settle down and become a full fledged farmer. A more fortunate thing for the community could not happen. as Mr. Hatch is looked upon by his many warm friends as a man of most noble qualities of heart and mind. May he come to stay.

NORTH EAST FRANKLIN.

Patrick Commons was in the neighborhood Saturday, looking over his farm.

Cliff. Hampton, of Fowler, Indiana, is visiting his numerous relatives in this vicinity.

Mr. & Mrs. Freel. Davenport visited Mrs. D's sisters in North Adams, last week.

Hollis Taylor, who has been sick for two weeks, returned to his school in Wolfberg Monday.

Martha Miner, of Bridgewater, drove out to her sisters, Mrs. Abbie Hunt's, last week. Mrs. Hunt returned with her for a few day's visit at the old home.

Tried and True

Is the positive verdict of the people who take Hood's Sarsaparilla. When used according to directions the good effects of this excellent medicine are soon felt in nerve strength restored, that tired feeling driven off, a good appetite established, headache and dyspepsia relieved or cured and all the bad effects of impure blood overcome. For a good blood purifier, take Hood's Sarsaparilla.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, JAN. 29.

The nutmeg state is torn up from center to circumference. The old governor, whom nobody voted for and no one wanted, is holding over and proposes to stick.

The Adrian Times sneeringly says: "A streak of economy crops up in the House at Lansing." We hope a good many streaks will crop up before the session closes.

The Democrats of Indiana have honored themselves by honoring Senator Voorhees with a re-election for another term. He is one of the ablest members of the Senate on either side.

The plan of electing U. S. Senators by a direct vote of the people is being more and more discussed and is bound to become popular. The time is not far distant when Congress will be compelled to adopt a Constitutional amendment providing for this change.

The election of Gov. Hill of New York to the Senatorship is a happy settlement of a disturbing question. He thus abdicates his Presidential pretensions and will represent New York in the U. S. Senate much more creditably than either of her present Senators.

The Citizens' Alliance is the name of a new organization just formed in Kansas. It will bear the same relation to towns and cities that the Farmers' Alliance bears to the country. It shows that the people are "getting together" everywhere to fight the monopolists.

Speaker Reed now has the opportunity to "get even" with President Harrison and do the country a patriotic service at the same time. Will he block the silver bill in the House and thus give the silver Senators an excuse for killing the Force bill in the Senate? It looks that way now.

Gen. John M. Palmer went into the campaign in Illinois last fall on the platform that U. S. Senators should be chosen by the people, and he was victorious by a popular majority of 30,000. It would be a disgrace to the state if he should be defeated now by the stubbornness of three representatives who were chosen on that very issue.

The New York Tribune thinks that the French tariff, which now shuts the American hog out of France, "will be lowered after the present ultra-protectionist mania shall have disappeared from French minds." Pretty good free trade doctrine. And if America should tear down her own tariff wall, wouldn't the "ultra-protectionist mania" in France disappear?

The action of the tariff reminds the Southern Alliance Farmer of a rhyme with which an old negro used to describe the settlement which a storekeeper made with him when he divided their crop. The old darkey said: "Well, I jes' tell you, Mars' Harry; de ole boss he tuck down de book an' ciphered on it awhile, an' den he 'lowed:

Naught is a naught; figger is a figger—
All for de white man, none for de nigger."

In the death of George Bancroft America loses her most eminent historian. Born in the first year of the century, his life of over 90 years was one of wide usefulness and honor. He was a stanch Democrat of the Jeffersonian school and was the first eminent writer to give the history of this country based upon the principles on which the Government was founded. His work ranks as the standard history of the United States.

The Chicago Times is responsible for this:

Able young editors on various and sundry "kicking" republican newspapers continue to pour out from their ink-bottles a flood of good advice to their party on the subject of the force bill and closure and the tariff, but the ancient pachyderm seems to be a good deal like the hoary-headed sinner of the backwoods who when urged to "get religion" replied: "I han't never had no idee of ginnin' up my terbakker and likker, an' I reckon I'm tu old tu begin naow."

The marplots who are attempting to crowd the Force bill through Congress have struck a snag they hadn't counted on. The legislature of Alabama has postponed making an appropriation of $100,000 to represent that state at the Fair, until the Force bill shall be laid on the shelf. The Texas legislature has taken similar action. The McKinley tariff will injure the Fair very much in the line of foreign exhibits. The Force bill, if passed, will kill the enterprise as an American fair.

THE FRAUD AND FORCE BILL.

By the casting vote of Vice President Morton the Force bill was again brought before the Senate and after several days of futile effort to bring it to a vote, Senator Aldrich introduced his cloture resolution and the debate upon establishing gag law is now in progress. What the outcome may be is very problematical. The revolutionists who are forcing the Force bill find themselves in just as much of a dilemma as they were at first, for discussion can be continued until the expiration of the present Congress on the cloture rule itself. Speaker Reed boasted, during the last session, that the House of Representatives was no longer a deliberative body. For over a century the U. S. Senate has been a deliberative body. No bill has ever been crowded through that Chamber or come to a vote therein, until every Senator who desired the privilege, has discussed it to his heart's content. It has been supposed that the traditions surrounding that august assembly, founded as they are upon fair play, justice and liberty, would be too strong to be set at naught by any set of leaders in the interest of partisan legislation. In the name of popular rights, and of the Republic itself, every patriot will cherish the hope that the traditions of a century may be continued inviolate.

And why is the attempt made to adopt a gag rule that this iniquitous Force bill may become a law? The people spoke in thunder tones upon this issue at the last election. The solid South was more solid than ever before, and the Force bill was the principal cause of it. The great Democratic party, North as well as South, is a unit against it. The Republican business elements of the South are unanimous against it. The ablest Republican papers in the Northwest, such as the Chicago Tribune, the St. Paul Pioneer Press and the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, are emphatically against it. The Farmers' Alliance in the West is against it. The average popular sentiment throughout the country, regardless of party, is overwhelmingly against it. And yet we see a discredited party, beaten at the polls as no party was ever beaten before, attempting to use an accidental power, left in its hands after the election, to defy the expressed will of the people, to stifle debate and free discussion in the Senate, to usurp the rights of the states and to make a mockery of free elections. This wicked attempt of the radical leaders in Congress has no parallel in the legislative annals of the Republic.

* * *

What is the duty of the Democracy in the premises? There can be neither doubt nor hesitation of this point by any man who honestly believes in a government of the people, by the people and for the people. As an exchange wisely puts it: "To filibuster against this revolutionary measure, to block if necessary, the whole course of legislation, to suspend all other business, no matter how important, as long as there is danger of its passage, to procure its defeat by any policy calculated to divide the Republican vote in the Senate, is legitimate warfare under the circumstances, and a patriotic duty." If this controversy involved a measure of ordinary legislation, like a silver, tariff, subsidy or appropriation bill, the course of the Democratic Senators would be open to censure. But it involves the dearest right of the people, the right to control their own elections. In this controversy, the cause of the Democracy is the cause of the people. The Democratic phalanx in the U. S. Senate is now the only bulwark, which separates popular liberty from military despotism, which separates popular rule from the rule of the monopolies and trusts. The Senators who are waging war upon this iniquitous un-American measure are fighting against the theory that "every ballot should have a bayonet behind it," against the establishment of Bonapartism in this country, against making an American Ireland of the South. They are fighting for the Constitution of their fathers, for the purity and freedom of the ballot, for the salvation of the Republic itself. In a supreme struggle of this character "he who dallies is a dastard, and he who doubts is damned."

* * *

Since the above was in type the Senate has taken action, which has, temporarily at least, shelved the cloture rule. By a vote of 35 to 34, six Republicans voting with the Democrats, the cloture resolution was placed at the foot of the calendar and an appropriation bill was taken up for consideration. This action probably ends the Force bill, but not necessarily. The monster is scotched, but not killed. The few weeks remaining of the present session, with all the appropriation bills still unacted upon, render it very unlikely that the measure can ever be brought to a vote. Eternal vigilance, however, is the price of liberty, and the opponents of the Force and Fraud bill should not cease watching and fighting until the present Congress expires.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION.

The Christian Union, edited by Dr. Lyman Abbott, the successor of Henry Ward Beecher, has a secular department, in which questions of current interest are ably and fairly discussed from a non-partizan standpoint. A recent number contains an article upon the financial situation, which merits careful perusal. Such doctrines, enunciated in an Eastern journal, and almost within the shadow of Wall Street, furnish food for thought, to say the least.

"A journal which does not profess to be an expert in financial matters may well hesitate to express an opinion upon a subject on which experts themselves widely differ. We shall, nevertheless, hazard our own contribution toward the solution of this problem. Apart from local causes which directly led to this crisis, we discern three causes which render the commercial community constantly liable to commercial crises.

1. The business of the commercial world has immensely increased within the last quarter-century; the money of the commercial world has not increased in any such ratio. There is too little coin for our currency, and too little currency for our business. As a result there is an enormous credit system, the great transactions of the world being done by bits of paper. When anything occurs to disturb confidence, these bits of paper loose their value, and there comes at once a stringency in the money market. A partial remedy for this condition of affairs is the practical application of bimetallism. If all the commercial nations would agree to the free coinage of silver, absolutely interchangeable, in a certain fixed ratio, with gold, that agreement would keep gold and silver as money in that fixed ratio, and there would be a more substantial basis for the credit currency in which the business of the world must always be largely carried on. Whether the United States can establish bimetallism without the concurrence of Great Britain is at least a very doubtful question, but the recent commercial crisis indicates the importance of some National legislation which, preserving National credit, and recognizing the fact that all commercial nations are bound together in a commercial federation whether they will or no, shall yet provide a larger amount of currency in which to transact the business of the Nation.

2. Overtrading, and especially overspeculation, is a second great cause of commercial crises. Men are ambitious to enlarge their business, and in times of prosperity they go to the very verge of prudence, and when something happens to check confidence, find that they have gone beyond the verge. We once asked a successful business man what was the first condition of business success, and were surprised at his reply—"Caution." But it is certain that a greater caution in the business world though it might prevent the rapid accumulation of wealth, would also prevent sudden disaster. If there had been more caution in the house of Baring Brothers there would not have been such an over-investment in South American improvements.

3. The concentration of wealth in a few hands tends to produce disaster. The diffusion of wealth in many hands would tend to prevent it. It is true that a whole people are sometimes swept away by a financial fanaticism into acts of common folly, but more frequently disasters are produced by the misjudgment of the managers of some enormous fund, who risk it in a hazardous investment, the failure of which locks up money that is needed for the world's work, and so brings the world's work to a standstill.

One thing is very certain. Such a crisis as that through which we have been passing for the last three or four months is a conclusive demonstration that there is some serious defect in the present industrial organization. If a man's feet are cold and his head hot, and he himself shivering and burning by turns, the doctors may doubt what is the matter with him. One may think it is in the nerves, a second in the liver, a third in the blood, a fourth in infinitesimal bacilli; but he must be very ignorant or willful who insists that there is nothing the matter with the patient, and that he is in a normal and healthful condition. So long as the community is liable now to fevers of speculation and now to chills of all but bankruptcy, so long it is evident that there is something in the industrial situation which needs careful study and radical remedy.

OBSTRUCTION IS A DUTY.

The Hon. Roswell P. Flower struck twelve when he frankly admitted, in reply to a taunt from Mayor McKinley, that the sole object of the dilatory proceedings on the part of the minority in the House was to prevent the passage of the Force bill.

"We accept that issue," said Mr. Flower, "and stand upon it."

If the ordinary legislative business of Congress is blocked from now on until March 4; if every pending measure is made to await the result of the struggle now central in the Senate, but perhaps soon to be transferred again to the House; if public interests and private hopes and demands are alike pushed aside for a few weeks; if not an appropriation bill goes through before the adjournment of the Fifty-first Congress and an extra session of the Fifty-second Congress becomes necessary; if even worse things than this happen, the country will still have paid a low price for its escape from an imminent danger.

Democrats in the Senate and in the House are awake to the immeasurable importance of the principle at stake. They will do their duty, and part of their duty is to avail themselves of every known expedient to prevent final action on this self-perpetuating measure of partisanship until a new House comes in, honestly representative of the country's sentiment on the subject.

At such a time the name of obstructionist becomes an honorable and glorious title. It is not necessary to pick words or to disavow the motive of tactics of delay. Remember how Randall resisted and defeated the Force bill of 1875.—N. Y. Sun.

THE FAIR AND THE FORCE BILL.

The action of the Alabama Legislature in laying on the table a proposed appropriation for the World's Fair exhibit of that State for the reason that if the Force bill should pass it would be impossible to induce immigration to the South, and that in consequence a display of the resources of the State at the Fair would be unnecessary, attracted a good deal of attention in the Senate this afternoon. Senator Pugh of Alabama talked to the Illinois senators about it and suggested the advisability of Illinois entering her protest against the Force bill on account of the harm it was likely to do the world's Fair.

Senator Cullom, while not enthusiastic about the Force bill, and heartily wishing that it may be speedily passed or gotten out of the way of more important business, was not able to see that it had become his duty to go back on Mr. Hoar for the benefit of the World's Fair. Senator Farwell said he was willing to do whatever Cullom would agree to do, and was probably in earnest when he remarked that if the Force bill was really threatening to hurt the Fair, he would be willing to throw it, or anything else in which Harrison was interested, into the fire. It is an odd circumstance that the anti-force bill party needs just two more votes to make sure of knocking the measure out on a direct vote, and no one would be surprised if one of these votes were to come from Illinois. Happily, however, they will not be needed. The Force bill will die of its own poison before the end of the week.—Chicago Herald.

There Troubles—One Cause.

Weak bodies, feeble digestions, and shaky nerves are usually found in combination, but the principal trouble is with the stomach. Unless the food is thoroughly digested and assimilated the body cannot be nourished: and unless the Liver and Kidneys properly secrete the bile and throw off the waste matters that Nature does not need, the blood is poisoned and the nerves break down. The first step to take is to be careful to eat only the most easily digested food, avoid all habits inconsistent with health, and to use Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, which corrects the disordered digestive apparatus, converts the food into pure blood, and tranquilizes and strengthens the nerves.

The result is increasing vigor of the body, sound sleep, and a return of the mind to a clear and natural condition. Fever and Ague, Malaria, Rheumatism, and all Urinary Derangements rapidly improve under the same treatment.

Bright eyes and dull; near sighted; far sighted; anybody (except those who won't, and they are worse than blind) can see at a glance the advantages gained by using PEARLINE. We do not expect everyone will see it, but millions do, and the number increases every day.

Delicate women and strong, wonder at the amount of work they can do with the aid of PEARLINE—the time saved; the satisfactory results, and when they have used it for years they realize that everything that is washed or cleaned with PEARLINE lasts longer. This is very simple—PEARLINE does away with most of the rubbing—the greatest wear and tear that clothes are subjected to is the repeated rubbings necessary to keep them clean with ordinary soap. Your own interests should lead you to use it, if you do your own work and value your fine linens and flannels; the latter reason should surely convince any bright woman that it is to her interest to see that her servants use it. PEARLINE makes a saving all around.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers are offering imitations which they claim to be Pearline, or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—they are not.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

TAXING LAND VALUES.

[Henry George in N. Y. Standard.]

All taxes which increase prices are necessarily taxes in favor of monopoly, since the more capital it requires to go into any business, or to make any improvement, the smaller the number of those who can do so. And, besides this general characteristic of the taxes we would abolish, many of these taxes are specially designed to foster monopolies. It is, moreover, evident that when a large part of the produce of labor and capital of the community is taken in rent by those who do nothing to aid in production (for land owners as land owners in no wise aid production), there is not merely created an unnecessary and unnatural inequality in the distribution of wealth, but this primary inequality gives rise to a tendency to further inequality. "Unto him that hath shall be given, and from him that hath not shall be taken away," is the expression of a universal law. To take from one and give to another is, both by decreasing the relative power of the one and increasing the relative power of the other, to put them upon unequal footings in treating future divisions. If we trace to their cause the majority of great fortunes, we shall find it in monopolies of some kind—the primary and most important of all being the monopoly of the land. It is not because capital gets an undue proportion of the wealth that it helps to produce (though capital in some of its aggregations which involve monopoly does), that, in spite of all the enormous advances which invention and improvement and the growth of population have made, and still are making, in productive power, labor gets but such a scant living, and wages tend constantly to the minimum that will support life. With the advance of the arts and the progress of society, interest—which measures the return to capital—does not increase, but tends rather to diminish. It is rent which goes up, and up, and up. To divert to common uses this great fund which, though drawn from the production of the whole community, now goes to but a portion of the community, would be to turn into a promoter of equality what is now a promoter of inequality. To release capital from taxation, to lift the burden which now rests upon improvement and production, to destroy speculative land values, and throw open land to those who would use it, would open opportunities for labor in every direction, and send wages up. In all industries laborers would get a fairer proportion than now of the value their labor creates.

With relation to the factors of production and the primary distribution of the produce, society is divided for purposes of economic investigation into three classes—land owners, capitalists and laborers. Of these it is evident that the change would be to the advantage of the capitalists and laborers, and to the disadvantage of the land owners. But it is only in the abstract that such a distinction can be clearly made in any country, and especially in such a country as ours. We have, it is true, a considerable class of laborers who are neither capitalists nor land owners; but we have few capitalists who are not laborers, for in the economic use of the term the managing head of any great industrial enterprise is as truly a laborer as is any workman in his employ; and we have probably no land owners who are not either laborers or capitalists, for, in the strict definition of the term, buildings and improvements are capital, not land (*). A very great number of our people combine the characters of land owner, capitalist and laborer, and there are certainly a large majority who combine at least two of these characters. Thus, while all would profit in the general social gains, it is only in the character of land owner that against these general gains any one could set individual loss. Therefore, the proposition to concentrate taxes on land values should, as a matter of mere individual interest, commend itself even to land owners whose interests as land owners do not exceed their interests as capitalists or laborers, or both.

With reference to the ownership of land and with regard to actual facts, our people may be divided into three classes—those who own land which they do not themselves use, those who own land which they use, and those who own no land. The latter class may contain some capitalists, but it is mainly composed of laborers—farm hands, manual laborers, operatives, mechanics, clerks, professional men, etc., who depend for their living upon the earnings of their labor. This is the class which it is most important to consider, not merely for sentimental reasons, but because, since they constitute the base of the social pyramid, whatever improves or depresses their condition, will affect all the rest. Now, it is manifest that to take taxes off capital and improvement and production and exchange would be greatly to benefit all of those who live by their earnings, whether of hand or head. It is manifest also that it would benefit all who live partly by the earnings of their labor and partly by the earnings of their capital—store-keepers, merchants, manufacturers, etc.—and that by increasing the net productiveness of capital it would benefit those whose incomes are drawn from capital alone.

Take now the case of those to whom the opponents of the single tax are so fond of referring—the farmers who till their own acres, the men who own their homesteads in which they live. It is true that the change we propose would diminish the selling value of their land (but merely of the bare land, not of the buildings or improvements), and if fully carried out would virtually destroy it. But it would in no wise diminish the usefulness of their land; it would in no wise diminish, but would in fact increase, their incomes. They would pay under this system less taxes than they pay now. The clerk or mechanic or business or professional man who owns a house and lot in which he lives might pay more taxes on his lot than now, but in return for this he would escape the taxes now levied on his house and its contents, and, through the medium of indirect taxation, upon every thing that his family consumes. And so with the farmer. Our present system of taxation falls with peculiar severity upon the farming class. Not only is improved land all over the United States taxed higher than unimproved land of the same quality, but the taxes which so largely raise the prices of all the farmer has to buy do not, and can not, so long as we are exporters of agricultural produce, raise the prices of what the farmer has to sell. And, further than this, to put taxation solely upon land values would shift the weight of taxation from the sparsely settled agricultural districts to those populous centers where land has a real and a high value. As it would destroy the speculative value of land, the result would be that many farmers would have no taxes at all to pay, for, no matter what might be the value of his improvements, no farmer would have more taxes to pay than could be collected from unimproved land equal to his in quality and situation. Manifestly it would be very greatly to the relief of the farmer to abolish all the taxes which now fall upon his improvements and his consumption, and substitute for them a tax upon the value of bare land, which is always higher in populous centers than in agricultural districts, and in sparsely settled agricultural districts hardly exists at all, except as the result of speculation. And from the effects upon the diffusion of population the farmer would greatly gain. Just as the city population would gain from the destruction of the system which now builds tenement houses and vacant lots, so would the agricultural communities gain in productive power and in social enjoyment when settlement should become closer, from the fact that there would no longer be any inducement for any one to take up or hold more land than he could use.

Further than this, it must be remembered that, although the selling price of land would diminish this, since it would affect all land, would not affect the exchange value of the homestead lots or farms. It would be, to the man who wants for himself and his family the security of a home in which to live, or land to cultivate, a purely nominal and intangible loss, to offset which there would be great and actual gains; and, as his children grow up, it would be very much easier for them to get homesteads or farms of their own.

The only people who would really lose would be those whose incomes are mainly drawn from the rent, not of buildings, but of land, and those who are holding land in the expectation of future profit from the high prices that in time those who want to use it will be compelled to pay them for it. But there are few, if any, individuals who belong exclusively to this class. In varying degrees all our large landholders are also capitalists, and would gain as capitalists though they might lose as land owners. And, if in some cases the relative loss exceeded the relative gain, it would only be (and this, if necessary, might be made certain by some provision as to widows, etc.) in the case of those who could readily stand the loss without being really hurt. In any large view it will always be found that the true interests of all individuals coincide with the best interests of society.

To put all taxes on land values would be to remove all burdens from capital and labor; to free industry, and energy, and thrift from restriction or fine; to take away the incentives to speculation in land, and to throw open natural opportunities to those who would use them, without, as now, compelling them to pay a heavy premium to some non-user. From the freedom of operation which would thus be given to productive forces would result an enormous increase in the production of wealth. The fund from which all incomes must be drawn would be vastly augmented. And at the same time would come a great equalization in distribution; for that freedom of operation which is essential to the largest production of wealth is also essential to its fairest distribution.

To one who has never thought over the matter it may seem preposterous to say that in a simple change in the methods of taxation lies the fundamental cure for pauperism and low wages and all the social difficulties which afflict modern society. Yet, to all who will carefully think over it this will appear. When it is considered what is really involved in the simple change, such great effects do not seem disproportionate to the cause. For, to remove taxation from the production and accumulation of wealth, and to put it on the appropriation of that element which is the raw material of wealth, would be to remove obstructions to the natural play of social forces—obstructions which produce in the social organism just such effects as bandages and ligatures that impeded the circulation of the blood would produce in the human body. It would be to conform our most important social adjustments to the supreme law of justice; for, that the right to land is common and equal while the right to the products of labor is individual and exclusive, are correlative propositions too manifest to need discussion.

IT makes one very tired to hear of a farmer struggling under high taxes and a big mortgage opposing the single land tax, which would lift from his shoulders nearly all his present taxation and at the same time double his earnings. Of all others farmers have the most to gain and nothing to lose by an honest system of taxation, but it is hard to convince them of it.—Enterprise, Kansas Anti-Monopolist.

UNEQUALED opportunities and unequal burdens have made the millionaire and the pauper. An equality in opportunities, privileges and burdens must be established before labor can come by its own.—Detroit Evening News.

(*) Strictly, they are wealth, and may or may not be capital, according to the use to which they are put. But it is not necessary, in an article like this, to draw the distinction between capital and wealth, since under the change proposed all wealth would be relieved from taxation, whether it were merely wealth or also capital—that is to say, whether it were used merely for the gratification of the owner or for productive purposes.

ELIJAH GOES TO HOREB.

LESSON V, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, FEB. 1.

Text of the Lesson, I Kings xix, 1-18. Commit Verses, 9, 10—Golden Text, Gen. xxvi, 24—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

1. "And Ahab told Jezebel all that Elijah had done."

The whole story of the vain efforts of the prophets of Baal, the calmness of Elijah, the fire from Heaven, and the shouts of the people that "The Lord He is the God," the slaughter of the prophets and the great storm of wind and rain, were all rehearsed to this wicked woman, who had doubtless waited eagerly to know the result. Fail not to observe Elijah's importunate and expectant prayer as he waited before God and again sent his servant to see if the answer had come (xviii, 42-44).

2. "Then Jezebel sent a messenger unto Elijah."

Whether she was in the least affected by the record of the manifest power of the true God in sending fire and rain we are not told, but the death of her 450 prophets did mightily move her, and she promises Elijah that by to-morrow he shall be as one of them.

3. "And when he saw that he arose, and went for his life, and came to Beersheba."

4. "It is enough. Now, O Lord, take away my life, for I am not better than my fathers."

Having left his servant at Beersheba he himself went a day's journey into the wilderness, and sat down under a juniper tree and made this request of God. The juniper was the broom tree common in the deserts, and the roots of which, though bitter, were used as food by the poorest of the people (Job xxx, 4). It is suggestive of the poverty and bitterness of his soul just at this time. But consider his request and the glorious translation that awaited him, and see how foolish he was not to have confidence in God and wait patiently for Him.

5. "An angel touched him and said unto him, Arise and eat."

6. "Behold a cake baken on the coals, and a cruse of water at his head."

Can God furnish a table in the wilderness (Ps. lxxviii, 19)? Yes, He who fed millions for forty years can surely take care of one poor disconsolate. But was ever mortal man ministered unto as this man?

7. "And the angel of the Lord came again the second time."

After having eaten he laid him down again. God knew his need, and rested him with sufficient sleep. He also knew his need in the way of food, and would have him eat again.

8. "He went in the strength of that meat forty days and forty nights unto Horeb, the mount of God."

Obedient to the angels' touch he again arose, and again did eat and drink, and went forty days and nights in the strength of that food. We are reminded of one who, 500 years before, on the same Horeb, on two different occasions went forty days and nights without eating and drinking (Deut. ix, 9, 18). And also of our Lord Jesus Christ, who fasted forty days and forty nights (Matt. iv, 2).

9. "What doest thou here, Elijah?"

In due time he arrived at Horeb and lodged in a cave, and there the word of the Lord came unto him with this question.

10. "And he said, I have been very jealous for the Lord God of Hosts."

That was all right, and what follows was too sadly true, but "I only am left, and they seek my life," lets us into the man's heart.

11. "Go forth and stand upon the mount before the Lord."

Go forth from the coldness and darkness of doubt and despair, and from considering the preciousness of your own life, your zeal for God and the necessity of your continuance, and be persuaded that God lives, and that He, and He only, is the necessity, and that it matters not whether you live or die.

"And behold the Lord passed by."

His power is seen in His messengers, wind, earthquake and fire, rending the mountains and breaking in pieces the rocks before the Lord, but He was not in wind, earthquake or fire. Such was not His way at this time.

12. "After the fire a still small voice."

Judgment is His strange work (Isa. xxviii, 21). Ordinarily He speaks and it is done (Ps. xxxiii, 6, 9). Jesus did not come as a mighty fire or tempest, but as a helpless babe. John said He was the voice of one crying in the wilderness. Paul was not a mighty man physically, but in bodily presence weak, and in speech contemptible (II Cor. x, 10). What was David, and how much noise did he make when compared with Goliath? What was Israel before her enemies? God is everything, we are nothing. "No flesh shall glory in His presence" (I Cor. i, 29).

13. "What doest thou here, Elijah?"

Again the searching question comes, as in the case of Peter (John xxi, 15-17). It would seem from this verse that Elijah had not gone forth as commanded (verse 11) until he heard this voice; but now he stands at the entrance to the cave with his face wrapped in his mantle, and once more has to reply to this question.

14. "I only am left, and they seek my life to take it away."

Just the same answer as before (v. 10). He is God's only witness and his life is very precious. We are told in Rev. xii, 11, of those who loved not their lives unto the death. Jesus told the twelve as He sent them forth not to fear the death of the body (Matt. x, 28). Paul's aim was to glorify God either by life or death.

15. "And the Lord said unto him, Go, return on thy way to the wilderness of Damascus."

The Lord graciously has yet something for His servant to do. He did not tell him to flee into the wilderness from Jezebel, but He does now tell him to return.

16. "Elisha, the son of Shaphat, of Abel-Meholah, shalt thou anoint to be prophet in thy room."

He is to anoint a king of Syria and a king of Israel, and another man to be a prophet in his stead. While sought out and forgiven he has evidently disqualified himself for future service, as he is told to appoint another in his stead.

17. "Him that escapeth from the sword of Jehu shall Elisha slay."

The enemies of the Lord must be slain; it will never do to make any league with them, nor even tolerate them, as Israel so often did. And even though the offending ones be our own flesh, the sentence is the same (Ex. xxxii, 26-29; Judg. ii, 2; Mark ix, 43-48).

18. "Yet I have left me seven thousand in Israel."

And Elijah thought he was the only one. How blind we are! How self important! How seemingly jealous for the Lord God of Hosts, when really it is our own life or honor or reputation which we are so anxious to save.

Three little kittens, soiled their mittens,
And didn't know what to do;
Till a wise old friend
Did recommend
The SANTA CLAUS SOAP
So true.
When these little kittens washed their mittens
With this SOAP of amber hue,
Quickly vanished each stain,
And their mittens again
Were as bright and soft as new.

A DYSPEPTIC'S ARGUMENT
is a growl, and that growl marks the limit of argument with him. The best way to get him to try a medicine would be to advise against it—but notice how different his tone after using Burdock Blood Bitters.
"I have suffered with Dyspepsia for the last two years. Not long ago I commenced taking B. B. B. I am now on the second bottle and feel like a new man. G. KNOX, 12 Sherwood Ave., Binghamton, N. Y."
REPEATED TESTS WITH UNIFORM SUCCESS prove the fact that Burdock Blood Bitters will cure dyspepsia. The reason is plain, it tones the stomach to natural action and keeps the sluice ways of the system free from clogging impurities.
"I have been troubled with dyspepsia and heart disease for nine years, and found no relief until I tried Burdock Blood Bitters. Now I am well after taking two bottles.
MRS. ETTIE FRAZIER, Bowne, Mich."

The figure 9 in our dates will make a long stay. No man or woman now living will ever date a document without using the figure 9. It stands in the third place in 1890, where it will remain 10 years and then move up to second place in 1900, where it will rest for one hundred years.
There is another "9" which has also come to stay. It is unlike the figure 9 in our dates in the respect that it has already moved up to first place, where it will permanently remain. It is called the "No. 9" High Arm Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine.
The "No. 9" was endorsed for first place by the experts of Europe at the Paris Exposition of 1889, where, after a severe contest with the leading machines of the world, it was awarded the only Grand Prize given to family sewing machines, all others on exhibit having received lower awards of gold medals, etc. The French Government also recognized its superiority by the decoration of Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, President of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor.
The "No. 9" is not an old machine improved upon, but is an entirely new machine, and the Grand Prize at Paris was awarded it as the grandest advance in sewing machine mechanism of the age. Those who buy it can rest assured, therefore, of having the very latest and best.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.
It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.
The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.
WHAT IT CURES.
All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.
It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.
Over 40 Years,
This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such, that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.
Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

THE HERALD FOR 1891.

The HERALD is still in the ring, fully prepared to fill its accustomed place during the year of grace 1891. The 15th day of November last completed a cycle of sixteen years under its present management, and Providence permitting, the "old reliable" is likely to sail right along under the same pilot for sixteen years to come.

It is needless to inform the public what to expect in our columns during the ensuing twelve months. The general policy of the paper is well known and its record has been made. First and foremost, it will aim to be a first-class local newspaper, to act as a faithful chronicler of all local happenings of importance within the territory of its circulation. In this respect it will continue to lead all competitors.

Recognizing the stringency of the times caused by excessive taxation, we shall endeavor to accommodate the necessities of our patrons by placing our rates at the lowest possibl point, and our terms for 1891 have been adjusted with that end in view.

OFFER NO. ONE.

We have made arrangements with that wide-awake illustrated farm magazine, The American Farmer, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., and read by nearly 200,000 farmers, by which that great publication will be mailed direct to the address of any of our subscribers who will pay up all arrearages and a year in advance. The subscription price of the American Farmer is $1.00 per year. It costs you nothing. The two papers at our full rate of $1.50 per year.

OFFER NO. TWO.

The Great Divide is the title of a new monthly magazine published at Denver, Colorado, which has already taken a position among the best periodicals of this country. Our Club offer with the Great Divide is the most liberal one ever extended to our patrons. The Magazine for one year, the HERALD for one year and the Gemstone Cabinet for a premium will be given for $2.00. A sample copy of the magazine and a specimen of the Gemstone Cabinet can be seen at this office.

OFFER NO. THREE.

We offer reduced rates for the HERALD alone when payment is made strictly in advance. We earnestly urge upon our patrons the benefits of this plan. Call at our office in January, pay for your paper one year in advance, and thus secure the lowest cash rates. By so doing you will help yourself and help us at the same time. We will furnish the HERALD alone
